ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

For the first fifteen days after planting, each plant should be watered individually. This is best done by slowly filling the depression around the neck of the plant. By that time the moisture from around each plant will have spread sufficiently far to meet.

If the soil is in good condition and rich, there will be a luxuriant crop of weeds to take care of. These should be removed and the soil in the bench be allowed to become moderately dry and, if the soil is of a fibrous or friable nature, it should be made firm by treading, taking care not to go too near the neck of the plant. The soil should then be stirred to the depth of an inch, ruffled and made level and then given a good soaking. This is one of the most essential points in rose culture. To gain the full advantage of the growing season, cultivation should be practiced once a week and no other work should keep us from this most important duty.

After the surface has been ruffled and made as even as possible, overhead watering may be resorted to; that is, the whole surface of the soil should be watered.

As syringing must be practiced frequently and a good deal of force is required to do it efficiently, staking will have to be attended to so that the young stock may be able to keep an upright position. If grafted stock is used this should be attended to immediately after planting, as the scion is apt to be detached from the stock by the force of water from the syringe.

To keep the stock vigorous and hardy ventilation will have to be carefully attended to. Ample ventilation on all bright days and at night when the weather will permit, will give the stock a constitution that will enable it to outgrow many of the diseases and fungoid enemies that would easily destroy stock which is neglected in these particulars.

I recently received an inquiry regarding the amount of shade young roses should have and this shows that the old fallacy is not entirely extinct. After roses leave the cutting bench or grafting frame and have begun to show that the roots are working, they require no shade, for the rose is a real sun lover, and any shading applied to the glass is detrimental to the health of the plants.

Greenfly, red spider and mildew are the most troublesome enemies, and will require careful watching. Other enemies, such as slugs and the hairy caterpillar, will also require attention, as these can do quite a bit of damage in a few hours among the fresh and toothsome foliage.

RIBES.

TROUBLE WITH ROSES.

Please let me know the cause of white spots on my young rose plants, and the remedy for same. I have them in a house where the temperature is 80 to 90 degrees by day and 50 to 60 degrees at night. I find little green worms under the leaves.

P. J. K.

From the meager data given I am unable to give anything like a satisfactory reply. Had he forwarded an affected leaf, and one of the worms I would have had a chance to diagnose his case correctly.

The spots may be caused by the depredations of this worm, which may be, and likely is, the ordinary rose slug (monostegia rosea) which is the larva of a four-winged sawfly and is closely related to the imported currant worm. They have a small, round, yellowish head with a black dot on each side of it, and have twenty-four short legs. The body is green above, paler at the sides and is almost transparent. They eat the upper skin of the leaf in irregular blotches, leaving the veins and skin beneath untouched.

Syringing with the hose every bright day will wash them off. If sufficient force is used, this is the best remedy. Spraying or dusting with hellebore powder or Persian insect powder will also destroy them.

The day temperature is too high. From 70 to 80 degrees is all that is good for them so long as the weather will permit.

RIBES.

SOIL FOR ROSES.

I am sending you two samples of soil. Will you please tell me which of the two is most suitable for roses? Would the two together, mixed, be of value?

E. R. T.

If soil like sample No. 1 can be had from pasture land, with a good sod, and is properly composted, there is little doubt but that it can be made to produce good roses. The proportion of manure should be one part to four of soil. Sample No. 2 is not of any use as a rose soil, nor would it improve any other soil by admixture.

RIBES.

ROSES AT ST. LOUIS.

A rose garden planned to eclipse the Chicago and Buffalo displays has been prepared at the St. Louis World's Fair. Thirty exhibitors have sent their stock and four acres have been planted.

This rose garden, the planting of which was begun early in April, occupies one of the conspicuous sites. The center of the garden is at the main entrance to the Palace of Agriculture, a grand structure 1,600 feet long and 500 feet deep. It is on a high elevation, overlooking the group of main buildings of the exposition.

When the graders finished their work and turned the site over to the gardeners, every vestige of soil had been removed, and a broad expanse of sticky, yellow clay remained. The ground was platted with a series of eight collections, forming a great oval, 150 feet long and 100 feet wide, as the central picture. In the center of this oval is erected a statue of the goddess of flowers, in heroic size. Flanking this oval on the north and south, are two great collections, triangular in form. Scores of other collections laid out in plots of ground in various shapes, but all conforming with the general harmony of the main picture, have been provided. A belt of green lawn, from four to eight feet wide, surrounds each exhibit.

For each exhibit an excavation eighteen inches deep, of the form and size required for the collection, was dug in the sticky clay soil. Then the excavations were filled in with rich top soil and sandy loam and a dressing of fertilizer was worked in. Good growth has already been made. Most of the sorts planted are hardy here with very slight protection in winter.

The planting was done under the personal supervision of Joseph H. Hadkinson, who under Frederic W. Taylor, Chief of Horticulture, has charge of this outdoor exhibit.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Compressed Air.

I am not in the habit of writing to any great extent on theory, but as the subject of compressed air has come up, you will please bear with me while I make some suppositions and ask a few questions regarding its use in the carnation house. After what has been said, the first question would seem to be whether warm or perfectly cold air should be employed.

Now what, may I ask, is perfectly cold air? When speaking of heat and cold, we generally define the degree of either by the Fahrenheit system of measuring temperature. The term perfectly cold would seem to infer as cold as possible, but I cannot believe that to be Mr. Capers' intention in his article of last week.

For illustration, what, in your opinion, would be the effect of a blast of air at a temperature of 40 degrees among a bench of Lawson plants in a house where the thermometer stood at 70 degrees?

Heavy syringing as usual in the rose house is generally accepted by carnation growers as harmful, in that the bluish sheen is removed from the foliage.

It is probably unnecessary for me to tell you that the effect of warm and cold air coming suddenly in contact, is to produce moisture. In view of this, would not a stream of air at 40 degrees, driven with sufficient force to dislodge red spider on plants in a temperature of 70 degrees, with the moisture produced be apt to remove the bloom from the foliage?

It makes much difference in the effect of the application of water to the foliage when the manner of applying is considered. A gentle shower over the plants on mornings of bright days is very beneficial, but rose growers, of course, are differently inclined from no matter of choice.

It is not my object to criticise Mr. Capers' views, for he frankly states he is not well versed in the carnation; besides, there is another side to the question and I believe there is some merit in the use of compressed air and later shall endeavor, if the subject is further discussed, to bring out its possible advantages.

Seasonable Notes.

Plants in the field require close attention at this time in the matter of topping, as the foundation of the future plant must now be laid. This applies especially to those which were once or twice topped in the house.

Particular attention should be paid to those varieties inclined to come in crops. Topping at frequent intervals, instead of making a one day job of it once in two weeks or so, will tend to make the blooms come along more continuously. I do not say more flowers will be produced during the season, but do claim the same number produced continuously during several months is more conducive to better average prices than to have a glut one week followed by a scarcity for several weeks following.

Cultivation between the rows with a hand cultivator and also with a hand hoe around the plants must be kept up to break the surface soil, which becomes packed or crusted by rain or heavy dews.

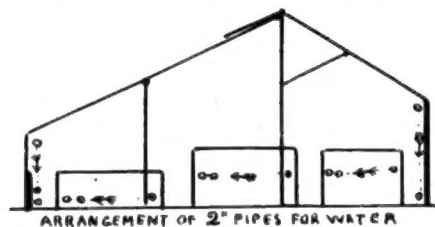

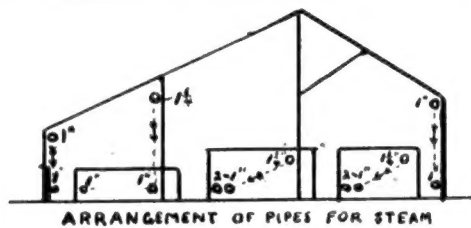

GEO. S. OSBORN.

GLOXINIAS.

Will you kindly outline for me the culture of gloxinias, from planting the bulbs to flowering time? R. E. L.

This inquiry reminds me that it was on this very subject some twelve years ago that I volunteered a few remarks in the floricultural press. If they had been rejected, how much more time I would have had to attend base ball, and how few of my brother florists I should have known, so I am glad things are as they are.

Any lengthy remarks on the culture of gloxinias would be now rather unseasonable, as there is now nothing left but summer care. Gloxinias are easily raised from seed, but make only small bulbs the first year, and the retail grower can do much better by buying the one-year-old bulbs from a firm that makes a specialty of raising them. They can be started in 3-inch pots in February or later. They are really a summer-flowering plant and make a fine window or conservatory plant when flowering plants are rather scarce in July and August. Use a rather light soil, with well rotted manure or leaf mold added. When the leaves about cover the pot the plant should be shifted into a 5-inch, the flowering pot. Let the soil be a good loam with a third leaf mold, and if you can't get that, then old, rotted hot-bed mold will do. They are not particular about soil. They want air, and if you want to do them real well, after they are shifted into the flowering pot, stand each plant on another inverted pot. Never spray them, and avoid as much as possible wetting the foliage. They are a tropical plant, and from the starting of the bulb until the resting time in fall and winter the temperature should not be below 50 degrees. It is a rather particular plant about water. If allowed to get dry the flowers wilt and that ends them, and if overwatered they get rusty. Careful watering and just a subdued light, but not a heavy shade are the most particular points in their culture.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

DUTCH HYACINTHS FOR FORCING.

Will you please give the names of the Dutch hyacinths of each color that are best suited for forcing. Last year I left this to the seedsman, but noticed some of his assortment forced a great deal better than others. I would like to have some ready by the middle of February, and some at Easter. F. S.

There is not much choice as to earliness among the hyacinths, but some varieties, if forced for February flowers, would have very short stems. In the first place, don't bother with the yellows at all and force only the single varieties. Here are half a dozen in each color that will fill the bill, all splendid varieties:

Red and rose, Baron Van Tuyll, rose; Gertrude, deep rose; Gigantea, blush; Lord Macaulay, bright red; Norma, pink; Roi de Belges, deep red.

White, Albertine, Baroness Van Tuyll, Grand Vedette, L'Innocence, Mme. Van der Hoop and La Grandesse, all pure white.

King of the Blues is one of the finest hyacinths of its color but should not be forced before March.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

PIPING.

In reply to the inquiry of Boston Subscriber, for the effective heating of the carnation house 200x23 which he describes in sketch accompanying his inquiry, using steam heat, he will require ten lines of 1-inch pipe and three lines of 1½-inch pipe arranged as shown in the accompanying cut. If hot water be used, using 2-inch pipes, fourteen lines, as shown in the accompanying sketch, will be required. The arrangement of the main depends largely on the location of the boiler and the direction and extent of any grade within the house.

RETARDING NARCISSUS AND VALLEY.

What is the best method of retarding Paper White narcissus bulbs for late planting? Will they stand cold storage? Would like to know the proper temperature to keep lily of the valley pips in cold storage, also the method of forcing same. S. S. P.

The proper temperature in which to keep lily of the valley roots during summer to retard them is about 29 or 30 degrees. If a degree above the freezing point, they will start, and if kept too cold for any length of time, they lose their strength and the flower spike will perish. S. S. P. asks "also method of forcing same." Does he mean flowering them during summer, which is the reverse of forcing, or winter forcing? If the latter is meant, then I must refer him to the pages of the REVIEW of last December, where he will find the subject in detail. If summer forcing is meant, it is simply to put the roots in six inches of sand, shade the glass over them, and don't let any draughts from doors be near them. Give them, of course, plenty of water, keeping the water away from the bells after they are turning white.

Tulip Beds at Humboldt Park, Chicago, in 1903. A Departure from the Usual Forms of Beds.

Now about the Paper White narcissus. We have never tried to keep them after the winter months and will candidly say that I don't ever expect to, because it would never pay. It's entirely different with these true bulbs, like hyacinths, narcissus and tulips, because they must be rooted before they will flower. Some years ago we had a fancy that a batch of Von Sion narcissus would be very useful for Memorial day, and so they proved, but somehow we seem to have more flowers at our disposal nowadays and can do without them.

Here is how I managed to have the Von Sion on May 30. They were put in flats in October just the same as those we forced during winter. About the first of April, or before they had felt the influence of spring and the growth of the bulbs was perhaps two inches above the soil, the flats were removed to a neighbor's ice house. The temperature was about 36 degrees. There they remained until seven or eight days before we wanted the flowers. By that time they looked like third class celery, well bleached, and had grown four or five inches, but seemed none the worse for it. They opened up into flower almost in forty-eight hours, but with shading we kept them in good order. I would not think of trying to keep any of these bulbs beyond their natural flowering time unless it was for some special occasion that they were desired, but if it must be done, it can be done as described, only the Paper White at no time should be quite down to the freezing point.

VICTORIA, B. C.—A. J. Woodward is building six additional houses 25x175.

WESTWARD HO!

Or How to Go to Milwaukee.

When I had the pleasure of spending a day in Detroit recently the subject came up among the craft of how the eastern men were going to travel to the fair city on the western shore of Lake Michigan, and I think Brother Rackham said he intended to do all in the informing line he could.

A New Yorker or Boston man has the idea that when he is as far west as Poughkeepsie or Springfield, respectively, he is "out west." As Gurney Hill said at Pittsburg, a few years ago, when the Carnation Society decided to go to the beautiful city of Indianapolis, "We are not west, but we are a very good place to call at when you're going west." So Buffalo is very much east, and so is Detroit.

Chicago and Milwaukee are on the eastern edge of the middle west. All these and many more are ports of the inland fresh water seas, but you must have plenty of time to go by an all-water route from Buffalo to Milwaukee—about three days—and it's more than the busy florist can afford. Mr. Rackham will tell you of the many railroads that will carry you to Detroit and then across Michigan to a point on Lake Michigan, and then a boat ride across the lake will land you in Milwaukee. All that I will leave to Mr. Rackham.

Here is what can be done from Buffalo, which will take in a lake ride. There is a magnificent steamer leaving Buffalo every day at 5:30 p. m. and arriving at Detroit at about 8 a. m. From Detroit there is a choice of railroads to Milwaukee, either day or night. To take this trip you would have to be in Buffalo before 5:30 p. m. on the Sunday before the convention, and that is slightly awkward, as most of the fast trains on the New York Central, Lackawanna, Lehigh Valley and Pennsylvania leave the large eastern cities in the early morning and do not arrive in Buffalo in time to take that boat.

So now, ladies and gentlemen, to enjoy the midsummer ride on Lake Erie from Buffalo to Detroit it would be best to leave your homes on Saturday evening, arriving in Buffalo Sunday morning, rest during the day in our beautiful city, and start away on Sunday evening for Detroit. For the benefit of John Westcott or P. Welch I will inform you on request of the most fashionable places of worship, or give you any other information that will assist you to enjoy your visit. A Sunday in Buffalo will not be wasted time, as it is quiet and the most beautiful residence city in this wide land.

W. S.

SMOKE FOR BUTTERFLIES.

I note in a recent issue that A. O. D. asks how to get rid of a small butterfly, which infests his chrysanthemum house. If it is the same little pest which goes after my roses, I will tell him my remedy. After getting tired of crushing them with my fingers, I began to smoke them early in the morning, about three or four o'clock, which is when they begin to fly. It finished them.

ARTHUR DOEBEL.

TUBULAR VS. SECTIONAL BOILERS.

Can you tell us why, when all railways, factories, etc., use tubular boilers for their steam power, nearly all greenhouse construction companies advise iron sectional boilers? O. F. C.

Answering the query of "O. F. C.," until recent years the areas of individual greenhouses or ranges of greenhouses were too small to admit of a standard tubular steam boiler being used. This fact caused the manufacture of small cast iron boilers of sectional and other forms, and it was quite natural for the manufacturers of such boilers to push their wares wherever a market offered. The claim is made that cast iron corrodes less in an average florist's cellar and with the abuse which a greenhouse boiler is frequently subject to, than a wrought iron boiler, but my experience shows that, given reasonable treatment, each will last equally as long in effective working condition. The small cast iron boiler has served its purpose well, and will continue to do so, but where the greenhouse range exceeds 7,000 square feet of glass exposure the wrought iron standard tubular steam boiler will be far more economical and effective.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week has been a record breaker, at one time nearly 100 degrees in the shade, in fact, above that in some parts of the city, while on Sunday the temperature reverted almost to the freezing point. "Never anything like it," was the comment on business from the wholesalers' standpoint; "the worst week ever known," said another, and "nothing doing" was the universal verdict. Even the prominent retailers had little sunshine amid the gloom. All manner of schemes were resorted to to tempt the sizzling transient. One plan that seemed to work was a window full of dollar boxes all ready to "send to any part of the city." These were nicely arranged with ferns, spring flowers, two or three peonies and a dozen fine roses—about a $5 box in winter—and they seemed to go "like hot cakes," this, too, on "dear old Broadway," and right in the center of it. But with 5,000 good roses of all kinds going begging for $10 the excellence of the enterprise is clear.

Now comes Decoration day, with its usual uplifting, and a better condition of things should follow, for the "sweet girl graduates" will soon be in evidence, and June, with its weddings, is close at hand. They say it will be a great June in this respect, and the engagements for decorative skill are large and numerous already.

Various Notes.

Thomas Young, Jr., had an extensive decoration last week at the Morris Park Coaching Club's rooms, consisting of thirty-six fine center pieces for the tables, all in the club colors, and in which maroon, yellow, primrose and red predominated. Corsages and boutonnieres were made to match the table colors, and every table was unique. The cost of such a handsome function touched the four figures and was worth it.

The break in the lily market the day before Easter has always been a mystery to the many in "the street," but it is said a prominent growing establishment not far from New York put 40,000 blooms on sale that day with instructions to close them out at the low price to which they fell.

The Florists' Board of Trade, under Mr. Hayden's presidency, is making rapid strides. Mr. Hayden hopes to meet his patrons at Milwaukee and to make his property of growing value to the legitimate florists' trade of the country.

Robert Liddell, cashier for Peter Henderson & Co. during the last thirty years, died suddenly on Thursday last of pneumonia. He left his desk in his usual health on Tuesday. Mr. Liddell was 75 years of age, and a gentleman of ability, popular among his associates and greatly esteemed by his employers. His daughter is the wife of John Birnie, of West Hoboken, N. J. The funeral on Saturday was largely attended and many handsome floral tributes attested the sympathy and regret of the family's friends.

Another veteran in horticulture died last week at the age of 85; Bridgeman, the seedsman, whose name is perpetuated since his personal retirement, and whose grand record is parallel with the development of the seed trade in America.

At Elliott's the usual large attendance on auction days demonstrates the benefit of control. To have no opposition in any enterprise comes under the head of "snaps." Prices hold up well and the amount of stock disposed of is large. Next Tuesday at these rooms the fine palms offered by David Clarke's Sons will be disposed of.

John Scott, of Brooklyn, will have no auction this year, as has been his custom. The demand for Bostons is as great as ever, he says, although he is now offering some fine 2½-inch stock of Piersoni, as well. His canna collection comprises twenty-seven of the best varieties. Mr. Scott will add two large houses to his plant this summer.

Mr. Keller, of Reed & Keller, is back from a five weeks' trip through New England and eastern Canada. He reports a great demand for Decoration day stock.

The office of the New York Cut Flower Company, in the Coogan building, is being handsomely decorated for the "Beauty King" and his associates, and a long lease has been "signed, sealed and delivered."

L. J. Kreshover is still shipping a fine quality of wild smilax all over the country. It is quite a mystery to some where it comes from, with 100 degrees of heat withering all kinds of vegetation, even in the north.

Fellouris has a fine stock on hand for Decoration day, especially in galax, five to six million leaves, and 300,000 leucothoe sprays. His facilities for preserving this stock are complete.

J. I. Raynor finds Croweanum as popular as ever, although the abundance of shipments and general lassitude of the season has placed the price at present at $1 per 100.

Macy has added a flower department to the new store on Thirty-fourth street, the influence of which may be slightly felt by neighboring retail florists, although Mr. Bowe, who is the nearest neighbor, does not notice any diminution in the aggregate of sales to date. After all, these department flower stores are only educators and do less harm than good. The new store now being built by Henry Siegel is to have a fine conservatory on its roof, a la Bloomingdale.

The Manhattan Supply Company has removed to 440 Eleventh avenue.

W. H. Elliott, of Brighton, Mass., was a recent visitor.

Lyman B. Craw, secretary of the Lord & Burnham Company, will inaugurate the summer wedding season on June 3, on which date he will wed Miss Florella May Putnam, of Annisquam, Mass. His many friends extend congratulations. Mr. Craw was especially happy at the Asheville convention, and now the hidden cause thereof is apparent.

George Bradshaw, the wholesaler, was visited by the stork too late last Wednesday night to telegraph the good news to the REVIEW. There has been a continuous celebration at Bradshaw & Hartman's headquarters on West Twenty-eighth street ever since, and it may last all summer from the looks of things. After three boys have comforted fond parents a daughter is especially welcome.

A visit to Tarrytown was both interesting and educational. F. R. Pierson has had a wonderful season. Piersoni has gone "to the ends of the earth" without a dissatisfied customer, and it is a record to be proud of. To please and give value to patrons is the whole story in a nutshell, and on that basis Mr. Pierson has disseminated his wonderful fern and the total sales have exceeded all expectations, but it is nothing to what the house anticipates and is providing for another season. The present prices will be maintained until January, and the stock ready for immediate delivery is abundant and in good condition. Another medal, the silver one of the San Francisco flower show, was won by Piersoni this month. Mr. Pierson has great faith in the future of the fern, and large advance sales at present prices indicate a tremendous demand when the price is lowered another year. All the houses at Tarrytown are full of it, and thousands of plants in 6-inch to 8-inch pots are being made ready for the retail demand in September. Mr. Pierson's immense house at Scarborough will be devoted entirely to Piersoni this fall. The improvements at the nursery there, in grading and beautifying the property, are very evident, and the splendid stock of palms, bay trees, fancy evergreens, tree rhododendrons, tub hydrangeas, etc., is worth inspection by every florist in the land.

The club's outing is now an assured success. A much larger souvenir programme than last season's is in the hands of the publishers. The advertising patronage has been very liberal, the supply of prizes is most generous, every preparation is complete, and July 1 will see a record crowd. In fact, every member of the club who can spare the time has already sent in an acceptance of Mr. Traendly's official invitation. If those who have not yet sent orders to him for tickets will do so at once, it will greatly facilitate final arrangements for refreshments and accommodations and be much appreciated by the committee.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The excessive drought has seriously affected the outdoor flowers, so that those ordinarily used this week are scarce and poor. This has greatly helped the sale of our greenhouse product. Prices have not advanced, but business is active. Beauties are less plentiful, especially fancies. Brides and Maids are poor—too much hot weather has hurt them. Kaiserins are fine. Carnations are of excellent quality and plentiful. One large dealer is receiving twice as many as at this time last year. Peonies are nearly over. It will be hard to get any by next week. Sweet peas are falling off in quality, but sell well. The outdoor ones are beginning to appear. Valley has sold well. Greens are rather plentiful.

William J. Baker has had a steady supply of the beautiful lace fern during the season, and expects to have it throughout the summer. It is a scarce fern, very decorative, and commands a good price in this market. A. & G. Rosbach, of Pemberton, N. J., are the growers and their specialty must be seen to be appreciated. The Dreer company handles many of the young plants.

Notes.

The week is an active one. The Knights Templar were here three days and the horse show six, with many other things.

The Grahams had the decorations for Miss Paul's wedding last Saturday at Radnor. Daisies, both white and yellow, were largely used, nearly all the dealers supplying their entire stock. Miss Paul is the daughter of James W. Paul, Jr., president of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society. The same decorators also had charge of the Knights Templar ball at the Exposition building. Laurel wreathing and bunting are said to have been the chief materials used.

Joseph Heacock, president of the Philadelphia Wholesale Flower Market and one of our leading rose and palm growers, marched with the Knights Templar last Tuesday in the parade.

Ethel Crocker is highly esteemed as a warm weather pink carnation.

The florists' axiom is, "A soft word turneth away wrath."

William L., known to his friends as "Doc" Schaeffer, Sixteenth above Race street, has been overrun with funeral work of late.

Eugene Bernheimer says that double petunias are now taking the place of white carnations for funeral work. They are better value for design work.

We are told that we are now 500 degrees of heat in excess of the average. Great news for the stay-at-homes if it averages up the summer.

Sporting.

The sporting world is getting alive now. Last week was a great one for the Florists' Gun Club (the scoffers put the accent on the first word). Next comes the contest for the places on our bowling team at Milwaukee. Every bowler ought to try for this substantial honor. Send your name at once to Capt. George M. Moss, 32 South Seventeenth street, as a candidate to compete in the practice game. PHIL.

BATAVIA, ILL.—The barn, label factory and part of the office at the Williams & Sons Company's greenhouses were destroyed by fire May 20. Loss partly insured.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The trade in the cut flower line during the past week was very unsatisfactory. The weather was cloudy and threatening, with cool nights; still this did not have any effect on the supply and everything in the cut flower line is plentiful, and the retailers can get any amount of good stock at very reasonable rates. If the supply keeps up, which no doubt it will, Decoration day orders will be filled in full. Several big orders have been booked ahead and quite a good trade is expected. Decoration day is not so much thought of in the west as it is in the east, where the florists look upon it as a big day for them. Some of the West End florists report that they have booked orders for a number of June weddings and that a large amount of flowers will be used on these occasions. A few of them will use sweet peas exclusively, and some good work can be made of them, as they are now in full bloom.

The rose market the past week was at its full height. Plenty of good stock went to waste for want of demand and cheap prices still prevailed. The quality of the stock is very good, with little or no mildew. American Beauties are not coming in as well as they have been, shipped in stock being open and soft. Local stock is, of course, much better and has the call. Meteors and Liberties that come in open over night on the way. Maids and Golden Gates come in better condition. Perles are very soft. Prices remain as quoted last week. In fact, the demand was so erratic that no fixed price was set on them.

Carnations are in better demand than roses, but so many of them came in that the price went as low as 40 cents per 100 on common sorts. Two cents was a big price, and only the best fancies brought that price; $1 buys 100 good carnations. White has the best call, as a big lot of funeral work was made up throughout the city. Crocker is much sought after now for its keeping qualities.

Sweet peas are in full blast and are selling well at 40 and 60 cents per 100. Tracy has the best call, with white next and then lavender. Other colors are not in much favor. Some good valley was seen Saturday at Kuehn's. Outdoor stuff, such as iris, peonies, marguerites and pansies, are quite plentiful, with a slow demand. Cape jasmines are now in and by Memorial day will be very plentiful, price $1 per 100. Ferns were somewhat scarce the past week and only a very few fancies in the market. Common dagger ferns are now mostly used. Smilax is somewhat better in supply and some good, long strings were in the market last week.

Notes.

The growers have about finished their bedding work, although a few stragglers will keep coming and prolong the work for a week or so longer. The better and larger work has been done, with prices, they say, somewhat better than last year. Stock of all kinds has sold well. Union Market is still doing a fair trade in pot plants and the growers will send in their left-overs as long as the trade keeps up.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, was in town Friday buying supplies. Mr. Guy reports a fine plant trade this season.

Dr. Halstedt, of the St. Clair Floral Co., Belleville, reports that they are very busy planting the Hucke place, which they have leased. A big lot of American Beauties and carnations are being planted for their home trade. "Doc" expects to make a flying trip to Chicago this week.

The park commissioner has not yet appointed his new superintendent. Five of the florists who are out for the position are C. C. Sanders, Theo. Klocken-kemper (who was at one time superintendent under Commissioner Fecter), Gus Eggeling, Fred Ostertag and Andrew Meyer, Jr. Let the best man win, and that quickly.

It was amusing to read the implication in another paper that your correspondent derives his market report from his imagination. The writer in question is not a member of our club, and is located away out in the woods, where news is scarce; and it looks to me as if this is another case of a man who lives in a glass house throwing stones. The REVIEW's market reports are straight.

Bowling.

All florists who are interested in bowling are requested to attend the meeting of the bowling club Monday night, June 1. The meeting will be held at the Monarch bowling alleys, 2012 Locust street, at 8 o'clock. Besides the regulars it is especially requested that Carl Beyer, Robert Beyer, C. C. Sanders, Emil Schray, Frank Fillmore, E. W. Guy and R. F. Tesson be present at this meeting without fail. This meeting is called to ascertain if a good team can be gotten together to represent St. Louis at Milwaukee during the S. A. F. meeting next August.

Six florist bowlers rolled four games on Monday and made some fair scores, which were as follows:

Player—	1	2	3	4	Total
Wm. Adels	137	156	180	143	616
Theo. Miller	160	124	171	157	612

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Present week brought forth a glut, the size of which was greater perhaps than we have ever had before. The continuous hot sunshine did the business and roses and carnations all opened up at once. Trade, as a whole, was not so bad, but when you consider the immense quantities of flowers that were sold you begin to realize how low prices went. In fact, stock sold at whatever the buyer chose to offer. There was no such thing as holding for a fair price. The wholesale houses were so overloaded that they had to get rid of the stock some way in order to make room for the stream of fresh material that was continually coming in. It was certainly anything but a very pleasant experience, as the wholesale men were kept more than busy taking care of stock.

Decoration day will use great quantities of flowers, and the chances are that there will not be nearly so much stock as last week. There will be a boost in prices and a general clean-up at good figures is anticipated for the end of the week.

Roses are showing the effects of the hot weather and many are mildewed. Carnations are growing smaller every day. Pink and white peonies are coming in and there is a fair demand for them. Irises are about over. They bloomed too late to be of much value this season and though there was some very fine stock cut it did not sell as it should.

There is plenty of feverfew, candy-tuft, etc., with a fair demand for it. Longiflorum lilies are still to be had, but they move slowly. Smilax is more plentiful. There is also a fair quantity of Sprengeri, which sells well. Plumosus is scarce. Adiantum is good and sells well. The supply of cold storage eastern ferns is all used up, but the new stock will soon be in. The new southern fern is in at present, but it will not sell when the eastern is to be had.

Notes.

"Dick" Witterstaetter in joining the ranks of the Benedicts has set the pace for some of the younger men. The first to follow his example is his nephew, Frank Deller. The date is June 10, and the happy bride to be is Miss Julia Neiderer. Best wishes for the happiness of the young couple.

Charles Critchell, who is in business at Atlanta, Ga., is home for a few days' vacation. He is looking very prosperous and says that trade is very brisk in the southern city. C. J. OHMER.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The week did not open to the satisfaction of local wholesalers. Receipts continue heavy and quality is deteriorating rapidly, particularly in roses. Beauties continue of fair grade for the season and supplies in all lengths are greater than the demand, with the result that even the best stock moves slowly and the fakirs afford the only outlet for the bulk of the receipts. Tea roses show the effects of the weather to a marked degree, and it is necessary to sort over a thousand to get out a hundred which will stand shipment, with the inevitable result that the remaining 900 bring very little. There are some very good Liberties and Chatenay.

Carnations hold their quality much better than roses and there is some very good stock available, but there are quantities that are very small and badly faded. Sleepiness is also a pronounced characteristic of much of the stock.

Peonies are coming in heavily, but a great deal of the southern cut is of poor quality. At Klehm's Nursery they are fifteen days ahead of the average season. Sweet peas are selling slowly and pansies do not move. There is something of a let-up in the receipts of Easter lilies, which the change to warm weather brought on with a value-destroying rush a few days ago.

There is some good business booked for the last three days of the week, but the present indications are that the total will be considerably below last year, when Decoration day sales broke all records. The jasmines look to be a little late and they will have very low value after May 30.

Notes.

The general demand of florists and gardeners for higher wages seems to have brought growers of bedding plants in closer touch with each other. The prices are more uniform and satisfactory and sales around Chicago reported brisker than ever, but there are large stocks still on hand. One of the scarce items is echeveria, good stock of which is selling at from $30 to $40 a thousand.

B. Eldredge, of Belvidere, is sending in some very fine Crane carnations, stems very long and strong.

A. Lange is in the midst of his spring special sales. This week it has been peonies at 5 cents each.

Carl Thomas has returned from his visit to his old home at West Springfield, Pa., where he spent his vacation sick in bed with the grip.

A. L. Randall has opened three cases of ferns from cold storage which had been practically destroyed by rats, and ferns are worth $3 a thousand in case lots nowadays.

H. N. Bruns is having very fine success with lily of the valley. He is in just right for Decoration day.

Fritz Bahr has a big stock of bedding plants, including about 20,000 geraniums, extra well grown, which are moving well. This is his busy week.

Wietor Brothers say they never saw anything like the call for chrysanthemum cuttings. They have been weeks behind on orders for many varieties.

N. J. Wietor returned Tuesday from Fox Lake, fishing.

George Reinberg's carnation cuttings have been going like hot cakes lately, many orders and big ones.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Reinberg had a party of fifty friends to assist in the celebration of their twentieth wedding anniversary last Friday night. Matt Evert appeared on the scene accompanied by a brass band.

Calvert & Son, at Lake Forest, are sending Weiland & Risch some good La France roses.

Leonard Kill has been suffering for several days with rose thorn poisoning in his right hand.

A. F. Longren has completed the glazing of the new range for Poehlmann Bros.

A. L. Vaughan is at home to remain until after Decoration day.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The glutted condition still exists in this market and the demand for stock is limited, for business is only fair. The question with the wholesalers and growers is how to get rid of the stock. Prices do not seem to enter into any consideration when quantity is wanted, as one can buy large lots at his own figure. The result of the warm weather is very noticeable on roses, particularly on Maids, which are off color and small.

Peonies are arriving in quantity and sell at $6 per 100 for choice blooms. Gladioli are coming in small lots. Good sweet peas are scarce and find a ready market. Quantities of poor ones are about, but these cannot be sold at any price.

Notes.

The extremely warm weather and long dry spell was broken last Friday, May 22. No serious results are reported on account of the long drought.

The Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Company, at Bakerstown, has put in a complete system for field watering.

Patrick Meyer has leased the houses

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business, outside of funeral orders, is at a standstill, although the indications are that there will be a big Decoration day business, judging by the inquiries florists are having. Rain has been a very scarce article in California since the first of April, and as a consequence, most of the interior towns are very short of outdoor flowers. I refer to those places that have no flower stores and rely on the supply from gardeners for cemetery purposes on May 30. On this account shipping orders will be good this year and we shall have a chance to get rid of a lot of surplus stock. Just think of it, in the whole state of Nevada, and Arizona also, there are not over half a dozen florists and, of course, all the flowers must come from outside. One San Francisco florist shipped to Virginia City, Nev., last season 1,000 bouquets of mixed flowers. Sacramento, Stockton, San Jose and a hundred smaller towns are large consumers and our prospects are good for heavy shipments.

Although the greater part of California is suffering at the present moment for rain, we still have an abundance of outdoor flowers in the immediate vicinity. Bride gladiolus is seen in large quantities; sweet peas are at their height; roses are in great profusion; stocks, candytuft, bachelor buttons, gailardias, forgetmenots, irises of all descriptions, coreopsis, mignonette, canterbury bells, peonies, carnations and a few wild flowers make a good assortment to choose from.

Notes.

H. H. Lilienthal, president of the California State Horticultural Society, has received a dispatch from the private secretary to President Roosevelt, in which the chief executive expresses his willingness to become an honorary member of the society. The message is as follows: Yours of the 13th with enclosure has been received and in the President's behalf I beg to thank you and the members of your society for the compliment paid him by the recent action of your worthy organization. G.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The wholesale market has been flooded with good stock of roses in all varieties, while white carnations have been a good second; consequently the prices have eased up a little, the top price in roses being $6, and from that down to $1 a hundred, and in 1,000 lots even that price is shaded. Carnations rule from $1 to $3 for fancy varieties. A few lilies are seen, also some outdoor valley, which brings a fine price. Sweet peas are scarce, only a few growers forcing them here. Common ferns are short at $2 per 1,000. Good adiantum brings $1 per 100, galax, $1 per 1,000.

Among the Growers.

A recent visit to Isaac Kennedy's new place at West Park, a pretty suburb of Cleveland, and on the Linsdale car line, found Mr. Kennedy in the midst of building operations. Three modern even-span houses, running east and west, are going up. These houses are open under the gutter, making them practically one house, and covering about 9,000 square feet of ground. Mr. Kennedy is a very tall man, and did not propose to bump his head on those gutters. The boiler house is on the north side of the greenhouses, thus avoiding any shade on the glass; it is a fine building and covers a large tubular boiler with a capacity for three times the present amount of glass. On entering the boiler room, the first thing that attracted our attention was the britching connecting the boiler to stack. It is built of brick and will certainly last a life time. These houses will be planted with roses before June 1 and should do well, as Mr. Kennedy has as fine a rose soil as the writer has ever seen, and his whole place seems to be of the same quality.

A trip to Newburgh, with a stop at Geo. Jewett's place at 1338 Broadway, found everything looking good, except Mr. Jewett, who has been confined to his bed for the past weeks with typhoid fever, but he is improving and expects to be back in the store in a few days. Mr. Jewett grows bedding plants and a general variety of flowers, and has a very good trade in all lines.

The next call was on J. M. Strajcek, near the corner of Wilson and Broadway, where he is located in a very nice store, and reports a good trade in cut flowers, plants, and funeral work.

The next jump was a long one to R. H. Hoffman's place on Miles avenue, Newburgh, where he has a large place devoted to cut flowers and plants grown for the wholesale trade. Property in this section of the city is booming, and as Mr. Hoffman has a large frontage on Miles avenue, he is seriously thinking of laying a part of it out into building lots.

A short walk took us to Mr. Bumd's place, where we found everything in its usual good condition, with a large stock on hand and ready for the planting season. Mr. Bumd makes a specialty of carnations and mums.

The last call was on Mr. Kunze; that gentleman was found worrying because it had not rained for the past two weeks, his soil being the kind that bakes hard, and is almost impossible to work, once it gets dry. He wants to get his carnations planted out. His stock is in first class shape, and he is picking good carnations.

R. Addicott & Son, of Hayden avenue, East Cleveland, will build quite an addition to their already large plant, and will grow more roses and carnations. They are sending in some very fine Brides and Maids to The F. R. Williams Co. They have just finished planting 15,000 fine carnation plants in the field and, like the other growers, are looking for rain. E.

DOVER, DEL.—J. J. Von Reider reports trade on Easter stock as very satisfactory, there having been more call for pot plants than for cut flowers, although there was a fair sale on both. Mr. Von Reider has a new seedling rose, a cross between Kaiserin and Perle, that is a delicate pink and very fragrant. He believes it to be a very promising new variety.

BUFFALO.

The Drought.

A passing cloud and a few drops of rain this morning gladdened our spirits for half an hour, but it passed without even laying the dust and we continue to suffer. We have recollections of dry times in July and August that have been worse than this one, but somehow it fitted the season of the year and nothing suffered. The six weeks of sunshine have been keenly felt on the farms and gardens. Residents of cities do not realize it, for they have the hose and faucet, but the villager sees the grass burning up, the grain scarcely moving, transplanted trees and shrubs wilting, the young carnations planted three weeks ago burning up and lots of other things that makes him sigh. If he goes down to the creek he will find it reduced to little pools here and there, and struggling for existence little pickerel and pollywogs and many other creatures that must have water or die. But we shall get over all this and forget it.

The Market.

Business has been fairly good and flowers quite plentiful. Outdoor valley is gone, which shows how early this season is. Lilac is gone and about all the outdoor stuff for Decoration day will be peonies, and they are quite a help. What with the Long Island and New Jersey crop and then our home grown, the season of the peony lasts some time. Plant men are very busy. The usual amount of flower gardening will be done, but no abnormal increase, and I see nothing unusual in any feature of the demand. It is the same old thing, except that the very artificial hanging basket is fast going out and but few are now asked for.

Visitors.

We have sadly missed out of town visitors of late. In fact, we have been quite lonesome, but there was an oasis in the dull times in the shape of August Rhotert and his representative, Mr. Knickman. We have done business for years with Mr. Rhotert, but never saw this well groomed man in the flesh. It is good for a customer to know with whom he is dealing. Then when he reads his letters he can read better between the lines. Mr. Rhotert might be taken for the third assistant secretary of the treasury and is business from the word "go." W. S.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.—G. B. Whitehead has sold out to Keith & Jackson.

FT. WAYNE, IND.—Mrs. Wm. Paap, wife of the foreman at the city greenhouse, died May 18, aged 61 years.

MONTREAL, QUE.—On May 18 fire destroyed a barn belonging to Aaron Martin & Sons, at Cote St. Paul, causing loss of $4,500.

GRAND JUNCTION, COL.—The Grand Junction Seed and Nursery Company, capital $30,000, has been incorporated by G. J. Carpenter, Jno. F. Moore and Frank R. Davis.

CLYDE, O.—Rain is badly needed for carnation plants in the fields. W. E. Hall says trade in bedding plants has also been slow because of the drought. He is thinking of dropping plants altogether and confining his efforts to cut flowers.

UTICA, N. Y.

At the business session of the Utica Florists' Club, May 15, officers were chosen as follows: President, F. J. Baker; vice-president, Frank McGowan; secretary, J. C. Spencer; treasurer, C. F. Seitzer. The annual report of the secretary was a gratifying one to the club. It showed that there were 35 members on the roll, a gain of about 15 during the year. The treasurer's report showed that the receipts for the year, including the balance on hand at the last annual meeting, were $114.40 and the expenditures $45.30, leaving a balance of $69.10 in the treasury.

At the close of the meeting Prof. George C. Hodges spoke on the relation which exists between the animal, vegetable and mineral kingdoms.

A BARGAIN. Big Greenhouse Plant

Owing to other large business interests Brant & Noe, Forest Glen, Chicago, offer their large Greenhouse establishment for sale. Have 12 1/2 acres of land with a quarter mile frontage on West Peterson Avenue. Greenhouses cover three acres, part of them iron frame, built during last three years; hot water is the general system of heating, with steam in every house; reserve boilers in each of the three adjoining ranges. One large steam-heated residence, two dwellings, big barn, stables, wagon house, ice house, two storage buildings, nearly 300 feet of sheds, 20 to 30 feet wide. Local sewer to north branch of Chicago river, upon the bank of which the property is beautifully located. Between two lines of railways, the depot of one on our street, the other station near; electric cars in vicinity. Plenty of sod on this land; piles of sod and manure put up last year, sufficient to fill houses. Fine stock of young roses and carnations for replanting houses now under way. The plant is fully equipped. The improvements have cost over sixty thousand dollars ($60,000.00). Beginning within 300 feet of this property, 140 lots have been sold at $235.00 to $400 per lot. This land will cut into 125 lots and always increase in value. Title is guaranteed by Chicago Title and Trust Co. The investment is both safe and inviting, for the land stripped of all its valuable improvements will soon be worth what the whole can now be bought for. Will sell at a big bargain and make terms easy. Might consider a partner, if right one. Good and sufficient reasons for selling.

BRANT & NOE, West Peterson and North 48th Aves., CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR SALE. RARE CHANCE.

One of Chicago's best paying wholesale and retail businesses, established 1890, in thickly settled, highest class neighborhood. Plant is worth $35,000.00. The Market.

There was plenty of stock in the market the past week and carnations and roses were sold at ridiculously low prices. It was the fakirs' opportunity, and display signs "Roses 25c per doz.; carnations, 10c per doz.," were numerous. The outlook for Decoration day is more encouraging, as advance orders are coming in fast and indications are that nearly everything salable will be cleaned up.

Words fail to express the condition of the wholesale cut flower market during the past week and up to Tuesday of the present one, or it would hardly do to use the words that are ordinarily used to express the complete demoralization of the business. As with Wall street in its panics, there seemed to be no bottom. Quotations of average values cannot be given where so little of the stock was moved through the legitimate retail demand. With the approach of Decoration day the supply of stock became limited, and on Tuesday the improvement in prices began.

The market has been glutted for two weeks, but has eased up, with not a too great advance in prices. Roses have suffered most by the warm spell. Carnations and sweet peas are plentiful, with prices low. Very fine peonies are in, with even demand. Greens are abundant.

ONE thing in favor of the REVIEW is that it is not run in the interest of any one florist.—F. W. HECKENKAMP, JR., Quincy, Ill.

THE AMERICAN CARNATION

HOW TO GROW IT. FULLY ILLUSTRATED.

By C. W. WARD.

A PRACTICAL work on Carnation growing; complete in every particular, including the full calendar of operations for the year, with chapters on Soils, Fertilizers, Insects, Diseases, Heating. Each and every phase of commercial Carnation culture treated clearly and comprehensively. The book contains 290 large pages, finely printed. It should be in the hands of every grower.

Sent carriage paid on receipt of $3.50.

Florists' Publishing Company,
Caxton Bldg., Chicago.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

I have a two 10-inch flue boiler, thirty-two inches in diameter, sixteen feet long. Can I heat with it, by hot water, three greenhouses, each 20x80 feet, glass in ends, none on sides. The houses are built together on the ridge and furrow plan. One outside house is used for lettuce, the other for carnations, and middle house for a general line of bedding plants. How many feet of 2-inch pipe must I use in a coil boiler to heat these houses in case of emergency. J. V. K.

The boiler described will have ample capacity for heating the three houses each 20x80 feet. A coil boiler made up of 2-inch pipes, for heating the above houses should contain about 400 lineal feet of 2-inch pipes.

Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Walter P. Stokes, Philadelphia; First Vice-Pres., Chas. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y and Treas., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn. The twenty-first annual convention will be held at Philadelphia and Atlantic City, June 23, 24 and 25, 1903.

VISITED CHICAGO: J. Ullathorne, Memphis, Tenn.

THE drought in the Mississippi valley was broken by heavy storms May 23 and 27.

THE auction sale of the Leonard Seed Co. fire salvage May 21 brought out few bidders.

B. SUZUKI will return to New York about June 5, from an extensive trip through Europe.

THE demand for seed corn has been unprecedented in the northwest and dealers have had hard work to meet it.

Robert Liddell, secretary of Peter Henderson & Co., New York, and connected with the house since 1873, died May 21, aged 75 years.

H. H. HARRIES, of the Goodwin, Harries Co., Chicago, much benefited by his recent vacation at West Baden, is on his annual seed tour.

T. E. JOHNS, of the Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., has been at Cass City, Mich., where the firm has larger acreage of beans than usual.

JOHN T. WILCOX, of W. W. Barnard & Co., lost his overcoat and suit case, stolen from a Pullman at Oklahoma City, Okla., May 15.

THERE are continued reports from Bermuda that the crop of Harrisii will be considerably smaller than last year, but of good average quality.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—Clyde H. Walker reports very satisfactory trade on cane and cow peas. He had a car of each on track May 18.

H. F. HENRY, of Henry & Lee, will make his second trip to Bermuda in June. Mr. Fulton is now en route to Japan in the firm's interest.

A. BRIDGEMAN, the dean of the seed trade in America, died at New York last week aged 85. He retired from active business some years ago.

RAVENNA, OHIO.—The Ford Seed Co. reports seed trade in general as very satisfactory this season, though difficult to keep up stocks in some varieties.

THE low price of onions and sets has resulted in a decreased acreage, but the wise planter will put in just as much or more this year in anticipation of an increased demand next year.

H. C. AGNEW reports it cold and dry in the Santa Clara valley, in California, no rain for two months. The seed crops are looking well, but the ground is very dry for this time of year.

THE New York Tribune Farmer recently printed a very complete and handsomely illustrated description of the seed growing establishment of the T. B. Shepherd Co., Ventura, Cal.

S. B. BEAL, who has traveled 22 years for L. L. May & Co., is in Texas. Fifteen other travelers for this concern have also started out for 1904 business, while 20 more will soon get under way.

KENDALL & WHITNEY, Portland, Me., report a splendid seed and plant business this spring. Mail orders have come in thick and fast and they have been obliged to work overtime. Plant trade was never better.

W. B. LONGSTRETH, Gratiot, O., reports very satisfactory seed trade, stocks of many varieties exhausted early and business about 25 per cent ahead of last year. The call for vegetable plants was unprecedented.

AUGUSTA, GA.—Mr. N. L. Willet reports: "The season is backward on account of continued rains. The trade is having great trouble with corns, all of which are damp and soon heat and spoil. Large losses have occurred. It may not be generally known what an important part Georgia plays in the seed growing industry of this country. Georgia grows acres in collards. Georgia grows nearly the entire output of Pearl millet. Just all of the collards. My firm, alone, will handle this year nearly ten thousand pounds, enough to grow eighty thousand. About Augusta is the best place in the United States for asparagus seed and roots. Georgia grows nearly the whole chufa crop for the United States seed trade. Okra comes almost exclusively from Georgia. Georgia largely controls Bur clover and Mexican June corn market. Let me say that the Bur clover as grown in this state is the genuine article, and not that which California sends out as Bur clover. Just about Augusta, too, I believe is grown the best watermelon seed in the United States. We have originated some of the best melons in the country—Rattlesnake, Eden, Blue Gem, Sugar Loaf and Jones. I would rather pay double price for Augusta melon seed, as compared with Florida seed. The whole state of Florida gets from the ocean and gulf daily, and almost continually, salt breezes. Salt is absolutely ruinous to the taste of watermelon. No sweet melons can be grown near a salt coast anywhere. Let me say, too, that Oklahoma and far northwest melon seed are apt to have in the south white hearts and do not ripen. I have seen melon shippers lose thousands of dollars by using western watermelon seed. Georgia, I believe, leads, too, in her cotton seed. This state has furnished almost exclusively for ten years and more the United States government with its cotton seed for free distribution. Texas comes to this state for large amounts of cotton seed, especially since her cottons seem to be more subject to the boll weevil ravages. Georgia, too, largely controls the mustard business—the finest of all mustards, the Ostrich Plume, originating here at Augusta, Georgia, by my firm. Georgia is headquarters, too, for turnips—Seven Top, Southern Prize and the fine winter variety known as Frost King. Georgia grows largely white multiplying onions for the United States trade. Augusta is probably the largest cow pea shipping point in the south. Georgia seedsmen largely control also Teosinte, Velvet beans, Beggar weed, Bokhara clover, Japan clover and Carpet Grass seed business for the country."

BALTIMORE.

After a day or two of sweltering weather, we have had a copious shower of rain and a great fall in the temperature. The parched soil is now workable and on every side delayed operations are being pushed forward to catch up, if possible, the time lost in outdoor work by the enforced idleness due to the drought.

Great arrivals of cut flowers make the daily history of the market, the quality, unfortunately, not comparing with the quantity. A very considerable outlet was made last week by the floral decorations lavished at our city hall upon some new municipal officers and the recently elected council. This work was widely distributed and absorbed a good deal of material of all grades.

Decoration day has not heretofore been much of a florists' day in this latitude, the holiday coming at a time when hardy stuff is so abundant; but there is a disposition now to extend the custom of decorating with garlands and flowers the graves of others than soldiers. This should enlarge the demand for a better class of material. The use of plants, which prevails at the north, is practically unknown here on Memorial Day.

The illness of Alexander Scott, reported last week, grew more serious, and that gentleman has gone to his brother's in Buffalo, N. Y. All who came in contact with him in his business career here are sincere in wishing him early and complete restoration to health.

B.

CHATHAM, N. Y.—This vicinity is greatly in need of rain, but most of the growers have all their carnations outdoors. R. E. Shuphelt finished field planting May 9.

A LILY CUSTOMER.

I recently had a customer that I must tell you about. She wanted a lily plant and I told her the price was 15 cents a flower and as she seemed to be counting nickels I found one with two flowers for her. She then inquired whether other flowers would appear between each leaf down the stem, lasting during the year, and how to start the plant again next year. She finally handed me 15 cents and when I told her the price was 30 cents, 15 cents for each flower, she dropped the plant and started off delivering a lecture on the sin of asking such enormous prices. I hope florists in other cities have not many such customers. We have many of that type here, unfortunately.

RETAIL ADVERTISING.

Messrs. Poole & Purllant, Bellefontaine, O., send us a clipping of the adv. below, which they have been running in a space of three inches double column in one of their local papers:

MY FRIENDS, YOUR ATTENTION,

And I'll tell you a secret. For that new arrival to this world of ours send a token of flowers. For some other fellow's sister whose smile you are looking for send a box of roses, carnations or violets. For your handsome bride surely a bride's bouquet you'll send. For your mother's anniversary (may God bless her) have a supper table decoration. For a sick friend send an azalea or some other potted plant to cheer up the sick and lonely one. And for the one who has crossed to the eternal shore send a spray of floral design, and then in life's rainy day your friend will remember you.

Orders phoned to Poole & Purllant, Progressive Florists, will receive the best of attention. 606 East Columbus avenue, or at Butler's drug store every Saturday.

A WISCONSIN florist has a muscular better half who believes in getting satisfaction when she cannot collect anything else from parties owing large overdue accounts. According to the Marinette Star she met the debtor in a bank just as he was cashing a check, and asked him for an old account of $45. Having seen him receive cash on his check she cast doubt upon his statement that he didn't have the money, and when he attempted to run away she landed him a half hook on the jaw. She then followed him to the street and seizing her horsewhip gave him several unmerciful lashes before he got loose.

YOU CAN sell your surplus stock quickly and economically by offering same in the REVIEW's classified ads.

New PedigreedROSES.

Send for description and colored plate of our SIX new CLIMBING ROSES. These originated in our own collection by careful cross-fertilization and are unquestionably superior to anything of their class.

Edwin Lonsdale—Pale lemon-white.
Wm. K. Harris—Pale flesh color.
Wm. F. Dreer—Creamy white, pink edging.
Prof. C. S. Sargent—Rich yellow and buff.
Robert Craig—Yellow, shaded with apricot.
John Burton—Delicate peach color.

All fragrant, very double, undeniably hardy and strong growers.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

Tarrytown Horticultural Society.

The regular meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held on April 30, with President David McFarlane in the chair.

The following names were proposed for active membership: Alex. McLennon, of Scarborough; James Taxter, of Glenville; John Dervan, of Glenwood; A. E. Minnerly, of Tarrytown.

Mr. Scott's prize was awarded to Howard Nichols, of Glenwood, for two best pots of calceolaria. Mr. James Smith, of White Plains, received honorable mention for a vase of Heuchera alba; Mr. Joseph Bradley, honorable mention for vase of Tritoma Crockeri.

The rose and strawberry show will be held in the lyceum, June 11, and will be free to all. A few changes were made in the June schedule.

Mrs. L. A. Martin, of Greenwich, donated a very handsome combination writing tablet and album for a prize at the June show.

Several members were present for the first time at any regular meeting.

H. J. RAYNER,
Corresponding Secretary.

THE American Park and Outdoor Art Association has issued, Vol. 6, part 3 of its reports, which is largely devoted to papers on school gardening read at the Boston meeting. An enclosed leaflet announces the passage of an act by the Pennsylvania state legislature that materially restricts the indiscriminate placing of advertising signs, posters, etc., in public places, and that should result in a considerable abatement of this nuisance in that state. A similar bill has been introduced in the Illinois legislature, but it has not yet been acted upon. The secretary of the association is Chas. M. Robinson, 65 So. Washington street, Rochester, N. Y.

"Thripscide"

(REGISTERED)

Greenhouse Fumigating Powder

Is the newest and best article on the market to-day for the complete destruction of all insects that infest Greenhouses or Conservatories, being a special boon to Rose and Beauty growers and prepared particularly for the destruction of Greenfly and Thrips. There is nothing injurious in it to plant life, even the most delicate fern. It is especially recommended for Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Smilax, Asparagus, Palms, Ferns, etc., and we claim that insects will be entirely eradicated when the houses are thoroughly fumigated with the powder. It is put up as follows:

1 lb. Tin Can	$.25
5 lb. Tin Can	1 00
25 lb. Sealed Box	4 50
100 lb Sealed Box	16 50

The 1903 Duplex Gutter

IS THE ONLY GUTTER.

To see it in a house is a sure winner and will set aside the prejudices you may have against cast iron gutters. This is not a cast iron gutter. None other gives the same results. No drip from glass or gutter. Never breaks by sagging posts, unequal strains or high winds. Straight as a string. Less shade than any other. Adjustable to any size glass.

Post sockets clamp on posts and gutter. A bench under the gutter is the best place to grow flowers and plants in the house. Patents protect the DUPLEX, one gutter under the other. Do not condemn the DUPLEX because you are dissatisfied with your cast iron gutter. The DUPLEX has not the faults you find with your cast iron gutter.

$25 to COLORADO and BACK.

It has been estimated that between 8,000,000 and 10,000,000 persons in the United States take a vacation every summer. They spend between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000 yearly in pursuit of pleasure. This is a great deal of money to spend during a vacation, but this season the expenditure per capita may be somewhat less on account of the low railroad rates offered by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway.

From July 1 to 10 this line will sell tickets to Colorado and return from Chicago for $25. This will enable many to enjoy their summer's outing at slight expense. Colorado resorts are cooler than the seashore.

Through train service, Chicago to Denver, every day via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Union Pacific line.

(NEPHROLEPIS PIERSONI.)

There is nothing that you can plant that will increase in value so rapidly as this fern. The demand has been so great, and our advance sales so large, that we have not offered it recently, having only just completed filling advance orders. We have a nice lot of young stock coming on, and can fill all orders received from this date promptly on receipt. Even at the present high price it has been impossible to keep up with the demand, and there is sure to be a tremendous demand for it another season when it can be offered at lower prices. Now is the time to invest in it and get the benefit of the tremendous demand and good prices which are sure to prevail another season. The Boston Fern, although it has been cultivated many years, is still scarce. As Nephrolepis Piersoni will sell better and be in greater demand even than the Boston Fern, we predict a scarcity of Nephrolepis Piersoni for several years to come and at big prices. Owing to the great and continued demand, we do not expect to be more than able to meet the demand this spring, so that customers can rest assured that there will be no change in price this season.

We offer strong young plants, 2½-in. pots, at $9.00 per doz.; 50 plants at 80c each; 100 plants at 50c each; 500 plants at 45c each; 1000 plants at 40c each.

Extra large plants, 6-in. pots, $27.00 per doz.; 50 plants at $1.80 each; 100 plants at $1.50 each. These large plants will make fine stock for growing on into large specimens for fall trade, and they are also very nice for immediate sales.

SIMPLE FLORAL ARRANGEMENTS.

The florist who is required to produce certain formal designs is likely to grow weary of a repetition of the same forms, and to attempt to introduce variations into his work. These, if artistically done, are noticed, commented on and appreciated by his patrons.

The engraving shows how the ordinary three links of the Odd Fellows was added to with this end in view, without losing sight of the main feature of the emblem, or necessitating the use of a label to tell what it was meant to be.

Two of the links were made of yellow carnations and one of pink, and these were attached to a base of natural cycas leaves, while a spray or cluster of Perle des Jardins roses was introduced at one end, and a bow of light green Liberty satin ribbon was added to the whole.

W. T. BELL.

USE OF COMMON FERNS.

How we could do business without common ferns is a question difficult to answer. Tin foil being no longer the proper material for lining wire designs, their soft, dense green is just the thing. The design, lined and filled with sphagnum, again the ferns form a covering for the moss and a background for the requires foliage more like its own. For center-pieces in plaques, wood ferns are easily and quickly worked up. Two or three can be stemmed together and two or three groups of these look like a fern plant; and a few of these groups soon form center-pieces. With a previous over-night soak and a good sprinkle of water just before they are placed, they keep very well.

It pays to have a few mantel pans in stock of average size. Even in an elaborate decoration nobody cares to have every mantel and sideboard banked with flowers. We have filled our pans many times with wood ferns only, and they have always proved satisfactory, especially for a hall or music-room mantel.

The present fashion for plain lace curtains is another invitation to the decorator to trace dainty patterns on the curtains with these same ferns.

We have also used the larger wood ferns for pot covers, lacing them in with baby ribbon, and inserting some more in the soil and bending over the edge of the pot.

GERTRUDE BLAIR.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

The white rose Ivory which I have been studying during the past season plants must have been caused by over-propagation, and also by subjecting the parent plants to a high temperature in order to obtain propagating wood. The reason why I come to this conclusion is that the young Ivory stock of our own propagation this season shows quite a different character and is quite as strong and vigorous as Golden Gate, and no doubt they will continue to gain in vitality as they increase in size. From this it will be seen that it would be unfair to attribute any failing in productiveness to the variety, but rather to the weakened condition of the stock.

During the fall and early winter the majority of our Ivories were neither large enough nor strong enough to give first-class blooms, but they evidenced a free blooming character. With the advent of spring, they began to push up strong canes, which budded freely and produced high-grade blooms of a dazzling whiteness and which proved to be good keepers and shippers. True, a proportion of them are a little sparse in foliage, like the parent, Golden Gate, but this is almost confined to the strongest canes, which, by judicious manipulation in stopping and care in feeding, can be made to develop more luxuriant foliage.

Liquid feeding has a tendency to increase the grossness and softness of these canes at the expense of good foliage and should be very sparingly used. A slight top dressing of bone meal and lime alternately gives the leaves a better texture, and makes the canes come closer jointed, thus securing more leaves on the stem.

The claim made by the introducers that it will stand the hot weather without deteriorating is so far amply up-flowers. Thus, having a neutral, uniform background, one can have more freedom in the use of the flowers.

A bowl containing two or three dozen wood ferns can be made to look as natural as a growing plant, and at a cost within the reach of everybody, can give a touch of life to a table or mantel. For extra foliage for the larger flowers they are a great help. They are scarcely suitable for carnations, however. Carnation foliage, being fine-cut, the flower has given such good results that it deserves a little friendly criticism. When we received the stock, in March, 1902, they were very puny plants and refused to make the least start until they were benched. Even then we despaired of getting any returns from them. However, after remaining inactive in the bench for three weeks they made a start, and attained a good, vigorous growth by October.

The want of vitality in these young held. That it is, if well handled, nearly immune from the ravages of mildew is also true and it is productive enough to pay under ordinary conditions. These characteristics will be likely to make it a favorite with all growers and particularly with the smaller growers who cannot devote a house exclusively to any one variety, being a more satisfactory all-round white rose than any other on the market.

As a precaution against mildew all young stock during this changeable weather should have a dusting of sulphur once a week. This should be applied during bright weather, when the foliage is dry, and the houses should be closed for some time so that the fumes may not be dissipated. If there is any necessity for firing it is well to take full advantage of it and paint the pipes with the sulphur mixture.

RIBES.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

All the transportation lines represented in the Western, Central, Trunk Line and Southeastern Passenger Associations have now announced the special rates for the S. A. F. convention at Milwaukee August 18-21. The New England lines only remain to be heard from, and there is no doubt that they will co-operate in the rate agreed upon, which is one and one-third fare on the certificate plan.

It now becomes the duty of state vice presidents and all others interested in seeing a record-breaking meeting at Milwaukee to get to work and organize so as to get out a creditable representation from their respective districts.

Local agents of the railroads over which parties will travel will be glad to lend active assistance by sending out circulars and otherwise towards securing a full attendance.

The preliminary program of the convention, which will be sent out early in July, will give explicit directions as to the manner of procuring tickets and certificates. In the meantime all inquiries addressed to the secretary's office will be promptly answered and all available information regarding any department of the convention will be cheerfully furnished.

WM. J. STEWART, Secretary.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Solid Beds Versus Benches.

In a short time repairing and building benches will be the occupation of many florists. Lucky is the man whose style of house allows him to have his beds on the ground or near it. Mr. Baur, under the head of "Carnation Notes," has written some very sensible articles about solid beds for carnations, and if I repeat in some degree what he has already said I must ask you to excuse me.

Except for bedding plants and small plants in pots, the days of raised wooden benches are, I believe, numbered. Where houses are built, say, 19 to 22 feet wide, with wooden walls five feet high and the pipes beneath the side benches, you could not do without the raised bench unless it were in the center of the house, and the old style of long span to the south will admit only of raised benches. But these houses are fast being superseded by houses like Mr. Pierson's, at Scarborough, or those of Ernst Asmus, of New Jersey, which are some 55 feet wide, with the glass within two feet of the ground; or by another style much more common, viz.: a range of houses, each house 16 to 20 feet wide, all connected, with no partitions, gutters six to seven feet from the ground and supported by a 2-inch pipe or iron post. In neither of these two styles of houses is there the slightest excuse for having raised benches.

When I first saw carnations grown in beds, the surface of which were not over nine inches above the walks. I thought it must be a back-breaking job to weed or attend them, but you soon get over that, and with many varieties they will by spring be more convenient to disbud and tie than those on benches two and a half feet above the ground. Nine inches is, however, a little low. I would, say, have the surface of the beds one foot or fifteen inches above the walks. This will not be found inconvenient for carnations, and for roses it is just the thing, for before half the winter is over the growth that wants attention is just up to your hands.

The wooden bench is a nuisance all around. If built of pine or hemlock and saturated with crude oil, or given a coat of water lime (hydraulic cement) they will last only five or six years. If all the boards would rot out at once it would be more satisfactory. Then it would be a clean job of building a new bench. But that is not the case; a third of the boards must be removed this year and some more boards you think will do one more year, and you are tempted to leave them, and when your roses or carnations are looking fine and you have some day watered heavily, down goes a board and the soil and plants with it, and then there is a weeping and gnashing of teeth and a sulphureous atmosphere from strong adjectives and descriptive language. But these are only incidental trifles and could be easily borne with if essential to grow our flowers, but they are not, and if your house allows beds on the ground, by no means have the expense and annoyance of benches.

Just a word about wooden benches when they must be built for plant benches. I believe 1-inch boards supported by a 2x4 every four feet is good enough. Perhaps before they are worn out you will have remodeled your place and have torn the bench down. For roses, carnations, chrysanthemums or any crop that needs four or five inches of soil on the bench I believe in 2x6 planks for bottom of bench, allowing, of course, a space of three-fourths of an inch for drainage.

Many people are under the impression that lumber shrinks in the summer and swells in the winter. If in both seasons they are protected from snow or rain, it is just the reverse of this. There is more moisture in the atmosphere in summer and the least during the hard frost, and then is when lumber contracts.

There is no doubt about a good coating of the water line preserving the boards at least two years longer than they would last without it. We mix the lime in a pail and spread it on the boards with a whitewash brush. You will notice that the boards or planks nearly always go first where they rest on the cross piece of scantling, or where wood touches wood, so put the cement heavy on the top of the cross pieces and on the under side of the board before you nail it down. Dipping or even painting the boards with crude oil is said to be an excellent preventive of decay, but I have had no experience with it.

Those who can get cypress lumber at anything near the price of pine or hemlock should, of course, use it. We all know how durable it is. Tamarack, the American larch, which is closely allied to the southern cypress, both being deciduous conifers, is also far more durable than pine, but in many localities these cost too much, although I am not sure that cypress boards would cost any more than pine of the same quality. Our northern forests are nearly gone and the beautiful tariff prevents us from getting lumber from Canada, and the freight from the south makes it high, so we are paying just about double the price for pine and hemlock boards that we did ten years ago. Of course it protects (?) the man with the ax and saw in the woods and incidentally puts millions into the pockets of the few lucky ones who own the standing timber.

Now for these beds which I so thoroughly believe in for the commercial grower. In the first place, raising benches for the purpose of getting them near the glass for increased light is fudge of the first water. If you have unobstructed light the plant will have as much light fifty feet from the glass as five feet or five inches. Solid beds, in which you have prepared six inches of soil placed on the floor of the house, I have no faith in. Or it may be six inches of soil and beneath it the natural soil dug or plowed a foot deep. That is truly a solid bed. This style of bed will grow roses and carnations, or mums, but not of the right quality.

A little experience is best of all. Two houses of American Beauties were planted late last fall. One was on what is known as hollow brick. The bricks were placed on the floor of the house, which is quite dry. The other had two inches of coal ashes and then four inches of soil. Both have grown about the same, and I may add that each has made more than an ordinary strength of growth, yet I should not have used the coal ashes if I could have afforded more of the hollow bricks, for I consider them the very perfection for the bottom of a bed. A bench of Kaiserin was planted last May on hollow bricks and made a fair growth. After a rest of three months this past winter they have given us a crop of flowers that rather surpasses in quality anything I have seen, and I feel sure that, with an annual top dressing on the four inches of soil on the hollow bricks, they are going to be good for at least another two years. We have also one bench, or rather bed, of Beauties in four inches of soil on three inches of rubble stone and they have grown just as vigorously as on the tile or ashes.

Rubble stone beneath a bed is, I think, excellent drainage, and if you can grow roses anywhere you can grow them above the stones; but when it comes to taking out and removing your soil it is not nearly so pleasant and satisfactory a job. These hollow bricks, which are thirteen inches long, five inches wide and four inches high, are laid as close as we can get them, making a solid floor. Roots do get down between, no doubt, but find nothing uncongenial in the moist tile, any more than do the roots of our pot plants around the sides of the pots.

Some people may attach great importance to the free passage of air through these hollow bricks, or 3-inch tile which many use. I humbly beg to say that it does not amount to anything, and if the ends of the tile were sealed up the result would be the same. It is the absolutely perfect drainage of the brick or tile that makes success, far better drainage than any board or plank bench can possibly have. I will just mention that these hollow bricks cost about the same per surface foot as 2-inch common pine lumber, and, it is near enough to say, are everlasting, because in any alteration you may make you need not lose one.

Mr. Baur's brick wall, say one foot high, with six or seven inches of rubble stone and then the soil, is excellent for carnations and needs no tile run through the beds. How can they with such drainage? If the surface of your house is naturally dry, then I can not see any better bed for roses than to lay the hollow bricks on the properly graded floor. Have an edge of cement four and one-half or five inches high, two inches at base, tapering to one and one-half inches. This is an everlasting edge to your bed, but a 2x4 scantling run along the edge and held in place by some pieces of 1-inch pipe driven into the ground, is quickly done and will last a long time.

I saw at the Dale Estate last fall a most excellent method of making a bench for roses and carnations, and where stone or clinkers could not be had it is fine, but rather expensive. It was a wall of only five or six inches, on the outside of the beds, merely two bricks high. Then old sod was firmly trodden in to the level of top of the bricks; then a floor of 3-inch tile was laid, the tile projecting to the outside of the bricks; a cement edge of four and one-half inches was put on, and there you have the bed. This brought the surface of the bed almost a foot above the walks in the house.

I would not be presumptuous enough to so strongly advocate these beds in place of benches on any experience of my own, although that has been convincing enough for me; but I have seen crops of roses on them surpassing any I have seen on the raised benches. And think, brethren, what comfort and saving is in store for you.

THE C. S. A. PREMIUM LIST.

The premium list has been issued for the exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, to open at Herald Square, New York, November 10. Fifty-seven regular classes are provided, besides many special classes, which are steadily being added to.

Classes 1 to 8 are open only to commercial growers. Class 1 is for 50 blooms, one variety, 1st $30, 2d $20. Class 2 is for 50 blooms not less than 3 or more than 5 varieties, 1st $30, 2d $20. Class 3 is for 30 varieties, one bloom of each, stems to be not less than 10 or more than 15 inches, 1st $20, 2d $12. Classes 4 to 7 are for 25 blooms, yellow, white, pink and "any other color," 1st $15, 2d $10. Class 8 is for 25 blooms of any 1903 novelty, 1st $15, 2nd $10.

Classes 9 to 13 are for 10 blooms of the several colors, class 14 for 10 blooms in variety, artificial supports allowed, 1st $8, 2d $4. Classes 15 to 25 are for 6 blooms of the several colors and named varieties, competition being open to private gardeners only. Artificial supports are allowed on Mme. Carnot.

Classes 26, 27 and 28 are for varieties of 1903, respectively 18 blooms in 6 varieties, 12 blooms in 4 varieties and 6 blooms in 3 varieties, exhibitors allowed to compete in one class only. There are also classes for 36 blooms in 6 varieties, 18 blooms in 6 varieties, 18 blooms in 3 varieties and 5 blooms of any variety in commerce, with liberal premiums.

Classes 33 to 36 are for 6 blooms of any one of the following varieties certificated by the C. S. A. in 1902: Algoma, Amorita, Columbia, Convention Hall, Globosa Alba, H. W. Buckbee, Henry Sinclair, Minnie Bailey, Mlle. Marie Liger, Mrs. Harry V. Casey, Mrs. J. J. Mitchell, Miss Stella T. Elkins, R. E. Richardson, Sephia, Uwanta and Yellow Eaton. Classes 37 to 40 are for six blooms seedlings, and there are four classes for anemone, pompon, hairy and single sorts.

In the plant classes there are liberal premiums for standard and bush plants, also for single stem and bloom, $359 in 13 classes.

Among the special prizes are the C. S. A. cup for 10 blooms of any one variety, the E. G. Hill Co. premiums for 10 blooms of seedling or foreign variety not in commerce, the N. Smith & Son premiums for 10 blooms of any undis-seminated American seedling and the J. N. May premiums for 12 blooms, 12 varieties, with 2-foot stems, artificial supports permitted where necessary. The Massachusetts Horticultural Society offers $25 for the best vase of 25 blooms of one variety, to be judged for all-round excellence of culture.

The New York Florists' Club, Tarrytown Horticultural Society, Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Club, Monmouth County and Tuxedo Horticultural Societies offer classes, open only to their own members, and for the best 25 blooms of 25 varieties and the best 12 blooms of 12 varieties exhibited in these classes. The F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., offers silver cups valued at $50 and $25 respectively.

Printed copies of the list will be ready in a few days and may be had by addressing Fred H. Lemon, secretary, Richmond, Ind.

HEATING IN GEORGIA.

I have two connected houses where the temperature rarely gets as low as 16 degrees above zero. The houses run east and west, one 13x50, the other 9x50, without partition wall; three-quarter span, wide house 8½ feet to ridge, narrow house 7½ feet. The wider house has two feet of glass in the side wall for 25 feet of the west end. The office is at the west end. The north benches are raised, the balance on the ground or raised only a few inches, for carnations and asparagus. How many pipes will it require to heat with hot water, using 2-inch flow pipes and 1½-inch returns?

J. T.

Four 2-inch flows and ten 1½-inch returns will be ample to heat the houses described. The exact arrangement or grouping of the pipes will depend upon the grade of the houses and width and arrangement of benches and paths.

SOCIALISM THAT PINCHES.

I see that one of the state colleges has let the contract for a range of new greenhouses and note that some of them are to be used for forcing purposes. That looks as though the institution would enter into competition with the legitimate florists on a larger scale than in the past. Now, I never believed it right that a public institution should enter into competition with the taxpayers who help support it, even if they do it fairly, but in many such cases the state pays the bills and the product is sold at a price with which no business man can ever compete—and who gets the money?

There is one florist near the college I have in mind, who in starting there pinned his hopes of success on the patronage from the school. He is a hard-working man and he has complained to me bitterly about the competition which he and I think unfair. If they go on building greenhouses for growing commercial stock I am afraid others will feel the effects. If a student really wants to learn the inside of the florists' trade and vegetable growing there are plenty of good chances in commercial places. If the state should take a hand that way in all trades and operations of life it would be a socialistic millennium pure and simple.

I hope my bigger brethren will see into that and help the little ones all they can, for this is a fight for a principle.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Spraying Plants in the Field.

Although not considered necessary by many growers, it has proven with me to be of benefit to spray field plants with Bordeaux mixture. The principal object is to prevent disease of any kind getting a foothold.

As the use of Bordeaux is generally known to keep plant foliage in a healthy condition it can but follow that its use is to be commended. Apply every other week or after each rain directly the field has undergone cultivation. No arbitrary rule can be laid down, but several applications during their stay in the field will repay for the time spent. When spraying, an excellent opportunity is afforded to examine each plant as to its needs regarding topping, etc.

Plants Indoors.

Memorial day being now past, a good number of plants can be dispensed with, but careful examination should be made in arriving at a decision as to which sorts to continue. Every grower must be his own judge in the matter, taking into consideration what his patrons demand, condition of plants, also weighing well the advisability of keeping a promising bench well into the summer, thereby preventing early planting.

If you decide to throw out the majority, thus giving you plenty of space, or a new house is in process of construction, a decision can be soon made, but in any event, make up your mind to plant early, even at the loss of the sale of a few blooms during July and August, especially so when prices are bound to be low.

With us one bench of Lawson and Floriana will continue, also a smaller quantity of Queen Louise, Estelle and Potter Palmer. Nelson promises exceedingly well but, as repairs to benches must be made, we cannot hold it as we would desire. Potter Palmer has been given no shade whatever this spring as a test, and it is remarkable how the color has held.

We start the general clean out the first week in June, remove old soil, repair and whitewash benches, fumigate and paint, refilling very soon with new soil. The soil pile outside should already have been turned, then in filling it will receive another thorough mixing. Next week I hope to give you my ideas on filling benches.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

During the past two weeks we have been having enough rain to satisfy our needs for a month if it were distributed properly. During such spells it keeps one guessing how to keep things in good shape. Weeds start up and grow so rapidly that it is hard to keep them down and you must get into your carnation patch every chance you have. During the spring bedding season many growers are prone to let the young carnations take care of themselves and in such a season as this they will have to put on their specs to find the young plants, if they are still alive. How much time and work it would save them if they would go through the patch a couple of times with the hoe and cut the weeds out while they are yet small and the carnation plants can be readily seen. "A stitch in time saves nine," you know.

Don't think that because it rains often enough to keep the soil fairly moist you need not cultivate. You could make no greater mistake. The soil will need all the more loosening up and you should get out your cultivator after every rain, as soon as the soil is workable, and loosen it up so that the next rain can soak down into the soil for future use. A hard packing rain or a few good heavy showers will pack the soil down and level it off so that the water will nearly all run away, instead of soaking in, and in a short time the soil will be quite dry several inches down, instead of being only dry right on top and nice and moist an inch from the surface. When you cultivate, cultivate deeply, at least two inches, and three inches is better.

Topping will have to be looked after from now on, and some of the varieties will have to be gone over frequently to keep the plants shapely. Such varieties as are inclined to bloom in crops should be gone over more frequently than the steady bloomers. Especially will this be found beneficial in case of early housing. In planting late you lose much of the effectiveness of this practice, because the plants will be full of shoots of nearly the same size, and when the plants begin to grow after the check in transplanting the shoots will all throw their buds about the same time. Those that were longer at transplanting time will grow a little taller than the others, but the appearance of the bud will seemingly date from the time of transplanting and the checking of the growth rather than from the time the break was made. That is why a house planted from pots in June or earlier or from the field in July will bloom more continuously through the next winter and crop less than a house that is planted in August or later.

Now that Decoration day is over you will be able to spare some of your carnation benches and those varieties that are producing only what we term trash should be thrown out. They will bring you in no money—and they will be taking time and water to keep the plants alive. I would not advise you to take the soil off the benches unless you can refill them with new soil, as it will protect the wood from the hot sun. You can allow the soil to dry out and it will be lighter to handle when it is taken out. If there are any benches that need renewing you can do that to advantage now before you begin refilling your houses, and, by the way, just try one of our solid beds with a bottom of cinders and see if you don't like it.

There are many of these things that you can do now, when you are not so busy, which will help you wonderfully next winter, when you begin the refilling of your benches in earnest. You will appreciate the fact then. Give your soil pile a final turning over now and break up all the lumps and see that it gets thoroughly mixed, and keep the weeds from growing on it from now on. What weeds are growing on the pile now you can turn under when you turn the pile over and they will soon rot and enrich the soil.

A. F. J. BAUR.

DRYING OUT IN FIELD.

I am having trouble with my carnations. They were planted in the field about the middle of April and have been watered and cultivated regularly since then. They are now beginning to look dry, and a few of the plants have stem-rot. Is this disease contagious, and what is the best thing to do for them? Also tell me what could have caused it.

SUBSCRIBER.

I can hardly give a definite answer to your query as I have nothing to base an opinion on. There are many things that may cause the young plants to turn dry and, in fact, anything that will seriously injure the growth may cause it to dry up and die. You say they were planted about the middle of April and watered and cultivated regularly since then. Any time in April or the first of May is all right and a good watering after planting should do them good, providing it is followed up by a good cultivating as soon as the soil is dry enough. We seldom need to water our young plants in this locality, as we can usually depend on a rain every few days during April, and when the young plants are set in moist earth they take hold and begin to grow at once. Perhaps you have suffered from a long dry and hot spell and unless the watering has been done thoroughly the plants would suffer as you say.

Easter Plant Arrangements by C. A. Samuelson, Chicago.

It is a hard task to fight stem-rot in the field, much harder than indoors on the benches, as you can control the conditions inside, while outside you are at the mercy of the weather. Pull up and burn every plant that shows any sign of the disease. See that the plants are not planted too deeply. If they are you can scrape away some of the soil from around them. A good dressing of slaked lime worked into the soil will also help matters. Do not water any more than is really necessary, as excessive moisture is very conducive to stem-rot. You will always find this trouble the worst in wet seasons and on low ground where the water cannot drain off well. After the young plants take a good hold on the soil they do not need a great amount of water to keep them in good growing condition and, in fact, a season of only a moderate amount of rain is best for them. During a wet season the plants will become larger, but softer, too, and transplanting will be much more difficult. Keep your cultivator going to keep the soil loosened up and it will have to get extremely dry to cause any suffering among your carnations.

Another thing that may be causing your plants to turn dry is grub worms.

They will eat away the roots and leave the rootless plant standing, but it soon begins to wilt and dry up. Cut worms usually cut the plants off and they drop over. Then there is the stem borer, which bores into the stem and kills the plant. The grub worm you can kill with the lime, but for the borer I do not know of anything. A. F. J. BAUR.

The Market.

Decoration day trade showed some exceptional features, but in general the result was satisfactory. The principal untoward circumstance was the deterioration of rose qualities and the sudden cutting down of the receipts. The shortage in supply would have called for a considerable advance over quoted rates, and, indeed, it was charged on some selected stock, but the quality of much of the material available was such as to preclude any advance. There were no good white roses except a very few Kaiserin and Ivory. Maids were not only small and soft, but off color. Liberty was good.

There were great quantities of carnations and the qualities were good as compared to roses. The demand was also excellent and there was a pretty fair clean-up, although in some houses white predominated and rather hung fire. The popularity of carnations seemed to react on the peonies, but there were not large supplies and many of the receipts were poor. South Water street was in the cape jasmine trade with cheap grades at a dollar a box, and it is probably just as well that the receipts of this item were lighter than usual in our market. The miscellaneous items did not move very well, a very large part of the sales being on shipping orders. Decoration day was rainy, with a temperature of 45 degrees, and Sunday little better for local trade.

There have since developed a great many "kicks" from buyers, who say the stock did not arrive in salable condition. Undoubtedly there was more or less pickled stock; there always is; but no one sent out stale stuff if he knew it, and all goods were soft. There are also reports of several shipments having been caught in the Kansas floods.

This week has seen a very fair business. Supplies were light, as everything had been cut close for Decoration day, and the dark, cold weather held to Tuesday afternoon. As a result, good prices prevailed on roses, carnations and peonies.

Various Notes.

Fritz Bahr is growing Marie Liger chrysanthemum and will exhibit it at the fall show.

It has become the proper thing for downtown retailers to show a slate in the window giving the steamer sailings from New York, with a few words to the effect that cut flowers can be delivered to the staterooms of those en route to Europe.

Kennicott Brothers Company reports that their cape jasmines failed to show up. They have the same source of supply each year, to insure the quality of stock they want. Last year they handled upwards of 50,000 and expected 25,000 for Decoration day this year, but the receipts were only 3,500. The lateness of the stock leaves the shipper practically without a market.

Decoration Day.

New England has established a new floral record. Never in its history of blossomdom has May 30, 1903, been surpassed or even approached for amount of material handled, and I am not sure but that all former records of amounts in cash values are broken. Presume they are. There seemed only a fair amount in for Thursday of that week, and prices ran high without the material to fill demands. Friday, however, was a wonder. A tornado of blossoms struck town. Prices quivered a bit, but the generous demand gulped about everything down and all hands were happy. Saturday morning there still was use for all the growers could produce, and all were pleased to see the clouds roll by in the afternoon, and now we want a good, thorough drenching, as things are getting decidedly dry.

A peculiarity of the time is that growers claim that they brought in all their goods on Thursday last and that the immense output of Friday was the result of one day's cutting. If so, it looks much like a miracle to this end of the business; but if goods were kept back, or "salted," as the expression is, there was method in it, because of the fearfully low prices offered just previous to the cyclone.

There seems to be absolutely no news worth chronicling just at present, but there is a fine thought in one of E. N. Pierce's stories of the little girl who was told not to pick any more flowers in the park near his greenhouses. She asked to be directed to the nearest place where some of "God's flowers" grew, because she could always gather all she wanted of those.

PHILADELPHIA.

Decoration Day.

The general impression among the wholesalers is that the volume of business was very large—larger with many of them than ever before. Carnations were used in enormous quantities. The sales of this flower far exceeded those of any other. Prices were fair, advancing slightly on good stock, but much of the stock is far from what it was before the hot weather of last month. The demand was for medium grade flowers, choice Beauties and valley not being as eagerly sought as is usual on floral holidays. Peonies were great sellers at good prices; so were daisies. Other flowers sold moderately well, but all were eclipsed by the carnation. Some idea of the enormous quantities of this flower that were sold can be formed from the fact that one dealer alone, Edward Reid, shipped over 82,000 out of town in two days.

The plant business was very heavy, probably ahead of past years. It was limited by the ability of the plants themselves to bear flowers for the occasion. The late Easter, the constant picking over and possibly a little neglect in the rush of work, are causes that have combined to leave rather an undersized lot of plants in most places. Scarlet geraniums are particularly scarce. The wholesale growers do not find small plants, usually flowered in 2-inch and 3-inch pots, such as thunbergias, lobelias, phlox, single petunias and many others, profitable at prevailing prices. During the past few years a good many have dropped them. There is now a good demand for such stuff at fair prices for those who retail their product.

The Market.

There is much activity in business circles this week. The weddings and commencements are here, bringing with them a lively demand for fine flowers that keeps us all on the alert. S. S. Pennock sold over 1,000 fancy Beauties on Monday. Leo Niessen had some fine shipping orders for Beauties and lilies of the valley on Tuesday and Wednesday. Carnations were quite scarce at the beginning of the week. Sweet peas are in brisk demand. The outdoor blooms are more plentiful. They have brighter colors and more substance than those grown under glass.

A Holiday.

Samuel C. Moon, of Morrisville, Bucks County, has invited the Florists' Club to visit his nurseries on Wednesday, June 17. The club has accepted the invitation and proposes to leave Chestnut street wharf on the steamer Riverside at 8 o'clock on the day mentioned. Tickets for members cost $1; for ladies and children, 50 cents, and each member has the privilege of obtaining tickets for friends at the same prices. It is earnestly hoped that a large number of the members and their friends will avail themselves of Mr. Moon's invitation.

Notes.

Walter Whetstone addressed the Florists' Club on the subject of "Greenhouse Pipe and Air Valves" on Tuesday evening.

Samuel S. Pennock states that Decoration day business with him was larger than ever before.

Henry F. Michell is preparing a paper on the increase in the bulb business, to be read before the convention of the seedsmen at the end of June.

Leo Niessen handled a large number of peonies last week. He found that Decoration day business gave him all he could do to fill his orders.

Edward Reid is handling some superb Crocker, Hill and Joost.

Last month was unusually free from rose troubles. The dry, warm weather was unfavorable for mildew and spot.

Eugene Bernheimer has made a specialty of hardy ferns, which he handles in quantity.

The exhibition of outdoor roses held by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society this week came curiously enough at the fag end of the blooming season, very many of the plants having produced their best blooms before June, which could not have been foreseen by the schedule makers.

Fred J. Michell, in speaking of the growth of the bulb planting in this country, said that when he entered his firm over ten years ago they imported 130,000 bulbs annually all told. Now they import 1,500,000 tulips alone and considerably over 100,000 Dutch hyacinths. One private customer in New York plants 100,000 varieties of daffodils alone. Another, J. W. Paul, Jr., plants 60,000 daffodils on his place at Radnor.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Decoration day found the market surprisingly short of choice stock. There was plenty of common outdoor stuff handled by the market gardeners, and considerable of this cheap stock was disposed of. The demand for bouquets, designs and cut flowers was good—much better than ever before on this day. The trade was much surprised to find stock scarce and prices up on almost everything, supplies having been secured at the buyer's own price for the last month. About the only cheap flower was the cape jasmine, which was plentiful. Shipping orders were also much greater than ever before. Friday found everybody busy packing, both wholesaler and retailer alike.

We have had very cool nights of late and some of the roses, especially Brides and Maids, are full of mildew. In many cases you find fine blooms with mildewed leaves, which hurts the sale of them very much.

The "cemetery florists," those across the way from the cemeteries, did a big business in cut flowers and plants. Koenig and Meinhardt had all they could do and they have scarcely anything left for bedding use. The smaller ones in that locality are in the same way.

Some of our florists have booked orders for a number of June weddings, which will keep them busy the next two weeks. Several of these weddings, I hear, will be very elaborate affairs and should use up large quantities of choice stock.

Beauties are still in good demand, but extra fine stock is not coming in now. They are small and somewhat off color. Brides, Maids, Meteors, Carnots and Gates are somewhat limited in quantity at present and have also advanced a little in price. Carnations are still fine. They, too, became scarce just when they were needed the most. Prices also advanced on these to $2 and $3 per 100. A week ago it was "take your pick at a cent," but to-day you must take what you can get at double the price. Sweet peas sold well at 75 cents per 100. They are fine and quite plentiful. On Friday and Saturday the commission men sold out clean on these. Peonies are about over and only a few came in for Decoration day sales. Cape jasmine was offered by the commission men on Third street at 50 and 60 cents per case. These were used a great deal in funeral work. Plenty of fine smilax is in now, but ferns are very scarce in this market.

Notes.

J. F. Ammann and family, of Edwardsville, spent a very pleasant Sunday afternoon in St. Louis calling on friends. Fred reports that trade this spring has been very good with him in both cut flowers and plants. He has recovered his health, and says that he will be at the next club meeting without fail.

Mrs. Miller and Miss Miller, wife and daughter of Theo. Miller, on Euclid and Delmar avenues, will leave Tuesday for New York, whence they take a steamer for a summer trip to Europe. This trip is for the benefit of Miss Miller's health, which has been impaired for some time.

The National Saengerfest, which will be held in our city, commencing June 18, should be of some benefit to our florists. Ed Buechel, of the Riessen Floral Co., has charge of the floral part of it.

Beyer Bros. last week decorated the German Savings Bank in a most beautiful manner, the occasion being the fiftieth anniversary of its business career. Thousands of red carnations were used in the cut flower work. The effect was much admired by all who saw it.

Club Meeting.

On next Thursday, June 11, at 2 o'clock, the meeting of the club will be held. President Dunford, who is himself again, would like to see a large attendance at this meeting, which will be a very important one. The final arrangements for the annual outing in July and for outdoor meetings will be made. Two essays will be read, one by J. F. Fillmore and the other by George Windler. S. A. F. matters will also be discussed and a transportation committee appointed. The growers having finished planting and the retailers and commission men not being so busy, the largest meeting of the year is expected.

The following card will be used by some of the St. Louis boys at Milwaukee this summer:

Now, dear Sir and Brother, please don't laugh, But honor me with your picture and autograph. Are your S. A. F. features known? I'm from Missouri, and must be shown. Kindly favor me, exchange, and accept mine In the spirit of friendship and auld lang syne. Our brothers, whom you have all met before, Invite you to our city in nineteen four.

Eight members of the bowling club rolled three games on Monday night. None of the old timers who were requested to come were on hand, and the chances are that St. Louis will not be represented by a team in the convention bowling contest unless they show up on next Monday night. The scores of Monday night were as follows:

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The last week of May developed a chilly and gloomy spell of weather and the usual advance in volume of trade for Decoration day was far below the average. Apart from a fair shipping trade, the local output did not come at all near general expectation. Even the holidays share in the general depression. The driest two months ever known in the east may have had something to do with this. Hardly a drop of rain since March is the record. It is a blue outlook for the vegetable growers and the vegetarians.

Various Items.

The palm auction of David Clarke's Sons, at Elliott's, on Wednesday was largely attended and excellent prices were realized for the splendid stock disposed of.

Julius Roehrs leaves June 11 for his annual European tour. His importation of bay trees, phoenix and Cattleya Trianae is an immense one and shipments are being made all over the country.

The 250th anniversary of the city's birth last week was loyally celebrated, but the display, unfortunately, was confined almost exclusively to bunting, the florist being called upon to a very limited extent.

Building operations are in progress in all directions within fifty miles of New York, and the season, in this respect, promises to be one of the best in a decade.

Among June weddings that will interest florists generally will be that of the popular representative of the F. R. Pierson Company, of Tarrytown, John R. Fotheringham. The supply of bachelors at Asheville will be considerably thinned before the next convention.

Beaulieu, the pansy specialist, of Woodhaven, met with a severe accident a few days ago, his hand being badly burned, but the pansies, dahlias and onions still continue business at the old stand.

June 1 found the Coogan building inaugurating a new and very commendable early closing movement—3 p. m. daily. It is to be regretted that these hours cannot be made possible of universal adoption by the wholesale trade until September 1.

The only son of Mr. and Mrs. Holmes, of Madison, N. J., died last week at the age of 19, of typhoid fever. Mr. Holmes is an extensive rose grower, and has the sincere sympathy of his brethren in his severe affliction.

The shipments of peonies are already enormous. Good stock, named varieties, is coming in from The Cottage Gardens, A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, and Valentine Zuber, of Flatbush. The best has commanded as high as $8 per 100, although average stock can be had in quantities at from $2 to $3.

F. D. Spicer, of Riedel & Co., shows evidence of the approach of summer, if not of June wedding considerations.

Dunne & Co. are very busy with rustic work at present and have an abundance of orders booked for June.

Siebrecht & Son have begun the work of removal at Thirty-seventh street, their greenhouses having already been taken away. Fortunately their Arcade store will be ample accommodation for the dull season. They had the Anson Stokes wedding at Noroton, Conn., last week, one of the largest of the year, and had charge of the decoration of Madison Square Garden on Sunday night for Duss's great festival, "Venice in America."

The Florists' Club will hold its last meeting until September on Monday evening next. It will be peony night and a fine exhibit is anticipated. The meeting will be one of especial importance, as final arrangements will be made both as to the club's outing, July 1, and the trip of the New York contingent to the convention at Milwaukee.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

As was expected, stock of all kinds was scarce for Decoration day. The extremely hot weather of the past few weeks had opened most of the buds in sight, so the stock left was not only poor in quality but soft and in some cases almost unsalable. Notwithstanding this, a tremendous business was done and great quantities of the outdoor and cheap flowers were disposed of. Peonies were in good demand and a large number of them that had been placed in cold storage were in fine shape and sold at good figures. Roses sold very well, but owing to the very poor quality the price was not very high. The supply of American Beauties was large and all sold. Some extra fine stocks in white, purple and pink sold well. They were grown by George Bayer, of Toledo, E. G. Gillett handling the stock.

At the present time flowers of all kinds are about as scarce as we ever saw them, and, as might be expected, there is a big demand. Prices are rapidly moving upward for stock that is in any way near good, and the top has not been reached yet. Beauties are especially in demand and not half enough are coming in. In quality Golden Gate and Ivory are far ahead of Bride and Maid. Meteor and Liberty are fair but the majority of them are short stemmed. If possible, carnations are more scarce than roses, and the quality is not much better. Some varieties are holding up well, especially Genevieve Lord, Flora Hill, Dorothy and even Scott, which is now being discarded by most growers. Lawsons are about finished, as they cannot stand the sun. Red carnations also are about out of the market for the same reason. Estelle seems to be holding out best of all. Rain has made havoc with the sweet peas.

During the past week there were several severe storms, including wind and some hail. At times it looked as if there would be considerable damage. Very little glass was broken, but considerable was cracked.

BUFFALO.

Decoration Day.

A couple of showers have refreshed the thirsty earth, slightly but not enough. What a pity we can't share with stricken Kansas. If things were arranged to suit insignificant man, it would be so; but we must take it "has it comes and be 'appy," and be thankful that Lake Erie does not overflow with a 20-foot tidal wave.

Decoration day seems to lose none of its patriotic observance. More and more is it a national holiday, and we have the Spanish war veterans to take the place of the many real veterans who have gone before. The corner stone of an immense new armory was laid, at which 30,000 attended; 21,000 went to see Toronto and Buffalo play ball in the afternoon; thousands more attended the exercises of the G. A. R. in the cemetery and park meadow, and yet there were thousands left to wander through the cemeteries and place a bouquet or plant on the grave of their departed dear ones.

From what I hear, the demand for flowers of all qualities was never surpassed, and the supply was none too plentiful. Outside valley, lilacs and snowballs were about gone, and our home-grown peonies were not in, so indoor flowers had largely to supply the demands. Many plants for cemetery use were sold. Our fashionable Country Club held a horse show, and half a dozen little parties were giving breakfasts, luncheons and dinners to the guests. With all this, the hundreds of vases promised for Decoration day and some large flower gardening jobs that "Oh, yes, I must have them filled by Decoration day," kept the bosses thinking and many a workman on the jump. If "a change is as good as a rest," as some fellow once said, we had plenty of it.

The hot and sunny month of May has told on the tea roses and they are getting near that midsummer quality when you must look for beauty of form and color and not observe size. There has been a good lot of long Beauties cut at Corfu the past two weeks, which has helped out. Carnations also are getting tired, but with plenty of shade and lots of water they must be kept going until the end of the month, for they are no drug, as they often have been in May and June. Kaiserin, Carnot and Cochet roses are fine now. They are the stuff for summer. White Cochet is a beauty, but not as invaluable as the pink variety because we have the glorious Kaiserin.

Various Notes.

I was around at the North Park greenhouses a few days ago. Superintendent Braik never begins to plant out until the first week in June and the stock was untouched. Never did I see 80,000 bedding plants in more perfect order or of greater excellence. It would make a thousand market peddlers water at the mouth. No more economical use of the houses and frames could possibly be made. In many parts of the municipal governments of all our cities loafing and extravagance is the order of the day. "It's the people's money, what matters?" Ward heelers and semi-bums fill the offices, so it is refreshing to see one part of our city government, even if it is only an ornamental part, run with careful economy and ability. And if all public utilities could be run on the same principles there could not be a breath of opposition to every city's owning and running all its natural monopolies.

The idea of Mr. Bison in a contemporary saying that "Scott, Anderson or Palmer may steal away to see a game of ball, while ostensibly looking up a job." I know the habits and tastes of those hard working men very well and it is a slander. Nothing would induce Mr. Palmer to leave his store but a meeting of the Society of Natural Sciences. As the races at Fort Erie are not on, nor yet a national convention of Sunday school teachers, Mr. Anderson would stick closely to his desk. And as for the other man, he has within a week planted 11,000 young shrubs, 20,000 carnations, disbudded an acre of peonies, pruned another acre of large shrubs and done many other chores, mostly all with his own hands, mouth and pen. INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Decoration Day.

This has been a great Decoration day for some and a rather poor one for others. All the wholesalers and the storemen did a big business, but those at the cemeteries did not get the big rush they usually have on this day. A gloomy day, with heavy showers and a heavy drop in temperature, kept the people at home, hoping for a fine day on Sunday, which, however, was not much better, and many a grave went undecorated this Memorial day.

There were plenty of flowers to be had in most lines. In spite of the pranks of the weather man, the peonies were just right and great quantities were sold. Of other outdoor flowers there was also a good supply. Roses are badly mildewed and the hot weather early in May knocked the size and general quality out of them. Of carnations there were thousands ten days ago, but by the middle of last week there were not many first-class ones. Baur & Smith's Ethel Crocker are still up to winter quality and sell readily.

All the plantsmen are well satisfied with the season's business, all reporting a heavy call for bedding stock, with prices fully up to the usual mark. There has been a decided scarcity of geraniums, as the first rush took out all those in bloom and the cloudy weather of the last two weeks kept the buds from opening. Consequently there is much bedding to be done yet.

Notes.

Baur & Smith had the finest lot of sweet peas ever seen in this city. The variety is a selection of their own from Blanche Ferry stock, and it beats them all.

John Hartje has a white carnation that is grand, and when it is to be had no others need apply.

To see fine peonies you should visit Mr. Hasselman. He has varieties by the hundred, and many of them are grand.

E. A. Nelson reports a great bedding season, having had to buy large quantities of geraniums.

The Smith & Young Co. has a house of Carnot and La France that is bringing in good returns. It was rested during early winter and started up in time for a crop for Easter. Their violets were grand and profitable and now they have several beds planted to sweet peas.

On May 27 we had quite a little fright from hail. The hail stones were of good size, but not numerous enough to smash much glass, and no serious damage is reported. A. B.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Decoration day business surpasses almost any of the other holidays during the year when it comes to consumption of stock. While prices do not soar as high as at Easter or Christmas, still the average returns are fully as good, for culls and ordinary stock bring a price and would be practically worthless at other times. Locally the demand was not very heavy, but the shipping business was beyond precedent. There was little, if anything, left for last-minute orders. The cold weather somewhat curtailed the supply and affected outdoor stock mostly. Carnations sold at $2 to $3 per 100, with some choice stock going a notch higher. Roses went at from $2 to $6 per 100, according to grade. Peonies brought from 75 cents to $1 per dozen. Longiflorum lilies brought $1 to $1.50 per dozen. Valley, which was plentiful, went at $1 to $1.50 per 100. Cape jasmynes were scarce and some which came on the market almost too late were cleared up at $2 per 100. There was plenty of lilac, snowballs and sweet peas to go around. Good common ferns were scarce, fancy going at 40 cents and dagger at 30 cents per 100.

Cold and continued wet weather is delaying outdoor planting. The sale of bedding stock is fully up to previous seasons, with an increased call for dark red geraniums of the S. A. Nutt type. Heavy rains and high wind have somewhat damaged carnation plants in the field in some localities around here.

INCOG.

TEXAS will find his query with regard to palm foliage answered in the issue of April 23, page 914.

DES MOINES, IA.—The Iowa Seed Company has begun work on a range of fourteen new plant houses. Sixteen were built last year.

GALENA, ILL.—Ben Vandervate has been doing a thriving business in bedding plants, visiting many nearby towns to do planting.

CHICOPEE FALLS, MASS.—Decoration day trade was heavy, and here, as elsewhere, the call for carnations exceeded the supply. Stock shipped in went to sleep on the way.

SECAUCUS, N. J.—Otto Grundmann is adding a house 24x150. S. Jacobs & Sons furnished the material for the entire plant, now approximating 20,000 square feet of glass.

MODERN GREENHOUSE PLANT

Of 20,000 square feet of glass; potting shed between houses. 20x80 feet; glass 10x15 and 16x24 inches; heated by steam from return tubular boiler. All in good order.

SAMUEL J. BUNTING, Elmwood Ave. and 58th St., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

A BARGAIN. Big Greenhouse Plant

Owing to other large business interests Brant & Noe, Forest Glen, Chicago, offer their large Greenhouse establishment for sale. Have 12½ acres of land with a quarter mile frontage on West Peterson Avenue. Greenhouses cover three acres, part of them iron frame, built during last three years; hot water is the general system of heating, with steam in every house; reserve boilers in each of the three adjoining ranges. One large steam-heated residence, two dwellings, big barn, stables, wagon house, ice house, two storage buildings, nearly 300 feet of sheds, 20 to 30 feet wide. Local sewer to north branch of Chicago river, upon the bank of which the property is beautifully located. Between two lines of railways, the depot of one on our street, the other station near; electric cars in vicinity. Plenty of sod on this land; piles of sod and manure put up last year, sufficient to fill houses. Fine stock of young roses and carnations for replanting houses now under way. The plant is fully equipped. The improvements have cost over sixty thousand dollars ($60,000.00). Beginning within 300 feet of this property, 140 lots have been sold at $25.00 to $400 per lot. This land will cut into 125 lots and always increase in value. Title is guaranteed by Chicago Title and Trust Co. The investment is both safe and inviting, for the land stripped of all its valuable improvements will soon be worth what the whole can now be bought for. Will sell at a big bargain and make terms easy. Might consider a partner, if right one. Good and sufficient reasons for selling.

SAMUEL S. PENNOCK,

for June Weddings.

Wholesale Florist,
1612 Ludlow St., PHILADELPHIA.

CLEVELAND.

The plant men have been very busy and report the demand far ahead of last year. Some of them are buying stock to fill orders, being all sold out in some lines. W. A. Calhoun, 3226 Euclid avenue, East Cleveland, says that business has increased over 100 per cent with him in the past six months, and thinks the increase due to his having built a show house and store in front of his place and extending some 75 feet to the sidewalk. The store has two nice, large show windows, is lighted by electric lights and contains a large ice box for cut flowers. Mr. Calhoun is growing one house of roses, two of carnations and the balance of the place devoted to pot plants.

Ferd Neubert, of Collinwood, is sending in some very nice sweet peas to the F. R. Williams Co. Mr. Neubert also grows some very good carnations, and reports the young plants in the field as doing nicely.

Wm. Stade, head gardener for L. E. Holden, intends building three houses this summer, one each for roses, carnations and mums. Mr. Stade has a large place to look after, but always manages to have it looking fine.

Smith & Feters have been showing a large vase, nearly filling the window. It is an elegant piece, and was purchased by Mr. Smith while on a recent visit to New York.

KEARNEY, NEB.—H. C. Green has moved his greenhouses to a new location near the Union Pacific depot and is doing every day a better business. He is doing a large trade in vegetable plants.

The improvement anticipated as a consequence of the approach of Decoration day did not hold, and early this week values again fell to the depressed figures which ruled a week ago. Roses are again arriving in large quantities and peonies literally overflow the market. There is enough of everything and to spare. But June has always done its duty in the way of weddings and festivities and the usual average is confidently expected.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., Chas. A. Igenfritz, Monroe, Mich.; Vice-Pres., D. S. Lake, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-seventh annual convention will be held at Detroit June 10, 11 and 12, 1903.

C. G. MONZINGO, Nacogdoches, Tex., says he now has orders aggregating $22,000 for fall delivery.

CRETE, NEB.—E. F. Stephens says the season at the Crete Nurseries was the best on record.

ALPHA, ILL.—W. M. Wirt, nurseryman, shot himself at Kewanee, Ill., May 20, while despondent.

THE F. W. Menerary & Son business at Crescent, Ia., has been put into a stock company with $40,000 capital.

SAVANNAH, GA.—The postmaster is returning the mail of the Southern Pecan and Seed Company, marking it "Fraudulent."

THE big wholesale nurseries at North Topeka are heavy losers in the flood. The extent of the damage cannot be approximated as yet.

THERE will be a meeting of peony enthusiasts at the Cadillac Hotel, Detroit, June 11, at 7:30 p. m., during the nurserymen's convention.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—M. J. Henry has this season sold 60,000 fruit trees to farmers in British Columbia and an equal number have been sold by other local nurserymen, while 100,000 have been shipped in.

A RATE of one and one-third fares for the round trip on the certificate plan has been granted by the railroads for the annual meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen to be held in Detroit, June 10 to 12.

TRADE AND PROSPECTS.

F. H. Stannard & Co., Ottawa, Kan., report "the season's business has been very satisfactory. Good prices have been obtained for all kinds of stock, and little surplus left over, except in apple and peach. For these we think prices will be somewhat lower another season, but in a general way there will be a good demand for everything that will come onto the market this coming season."

The Charlton Nursery Co., Rochester, N. Y., says "business has been very satisfactory the past season. Prices for all kinds of stock remained firm until very late in the season, when apples took quite a drop, owing to the heavy surplus. As to what the outlook is for another season, it is a little early to state at the present time, although we expect to see sales as good, if not better than the past season. We are inclined to think that there will be quite a heavy shortage of plums, owing to so many one-year plums having been dug last season for immediate requirements. Apples we believe will meet the general requirements, with possibly a small surplus."

Greening Bros., Monroe, Mich., report "the results of the past season's business by far the most satisfactory of any year since the inception of the firm in the year 1883. Our business is almost exclusively a retail one, but our nursery grounds cover over 700 acres. The capital stock of this company is $100,000 and today, June 1, is our annual meeting and we are pleased to say that we are able to declare a dividend in clear profits the past season of a little over 50 per cent, which no doubt will give you some idea as to the volume of business transacted in the past season. Our losses are less than 1 per cent for the past year. We had practically no surplus left after the spring shipping season, the shipping season opening up about two weeks earlier than ever before, enabling us to complete delivery before April 20. We have a very large trade among commercial fruit growers in this state and shipped out during the first week in April 263,000 trees all packed in cars in bulk, not boxed, the different orders however, separated in the car and shipped to points where we had large deliveries. The Benton Harbor delivery consisted of about 75,000 trees alone. During the past season a very important change was made by Chas. E. Greening buying out the entire interest of his former partner, Geo. A. Greening, also of Walter H. Greening. At the present time 95 per cent of the stock is owned by Chas. E. Greening, 4½ per cent by Mrs. Chas. E. Greening and son, B. J. Greening. The balance of the stock is owned by R. M. Sperry and Frank Yentz, making five stockholders, just enough to make a board of directors."

SAN FRANCISCO.The Market.

The florists have had a good trade in general. Shipping orders have been well distributed among the stores and everyone seems to feel jubilant. Flowers are plentiful and correspondingly cheap, but there are plenty of buyers and many of the dealers have had to scurry around lively to get stock enough to fill orders. Sweet peas seem to be more in demand than any other flowers and both in the stores and on the street corners they have been handled in vast quantities. The wholesale price has been from 50 cents to $1 per dozen bunches, according to length of stem. Outdoor candy-tuft, stocks, roses, carnations, callas, coreopsis, gaillardias, iris and bachelor buttons are in great profusion and in the smaller stores form the greater bulk of the flowers offered for sale. Inside roses are plentiful enough, and carnations also. Lilium longiflorum is scarce and wholesales at $2 to $4 per dozen. Funeral work has been good for the past week, and this, with the rush of Decoration day work, has made things very lively in this town. The sidewalk merchants have increased wonderfully in numbers with the approach of Decoration day.

Notes.

Over 3,000 people with a love for flowers and plants for window gardens attended the distribution of plants from the nursery in Golden Gate Park. They came with baskets and boxes of all shapes and sizes and by nightfall had carried away over 35,000 rooted cuttings that constituted the surplus stock that the park commissioners had decided to give away rather than destroy. From 9 o'clock in the morning until late in the afternoon the nursery was thronged with a clamorous crowd, and the dozen employees were nearly overwhelmed with the calls upon them for spading out the plants. Foreman Peter Rock did his utmost to please the visitors and his hands were full indeed. The plants given away consisted principally of stocks, petunias, godetias, poppies, sweet-williams, lobelias, phlox, cosmos, dianthus and gaillardias. G.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Walter P. Stokes, Philadelphia; First Vice-Pres., Chas. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y and Treas., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn. The twenty-first annual convention will be held at Philadelphia and Atlantic City, June 23, 24 and 25, 1903.

BOTH Peppard and Trumbull were among the flood sufferers at Kansas City this week.

REPORTS from the pea-growing sections so far are favorable, but it is too early for anything definite.

VISITED ST. PAUL.—J. B. Kidd, of the Cox Seed Company, San Francisco; G. C. Eldering, Overveen, Holland.

Mr. Marshall, long with Weeber & Dou, has commenced in the seed business at 41 West 24th street, New York.

VISITED CHICAGO.—Alex. Rodgers, of J. M. McCullough's Sons, Cincinnati; Harry A. Bunyard, of Lucas & Bodding Co., New York.

NEBRASKA seed growers are afflicted by floods, while in the eastern district drought is destroying the crops. It does not look like a year of plenty.

THE consequence of the floods is likely to make turnip seed good property. There is quite a dearth of seed at the ordinary sources of supply, so that even a normal demand is likely to develop a shortage.

THE Leonard Seed Company, Chicago, reports the heaviest market garden trade for any May since the year of the World's Fair. The weather conditions generally have been right and the market conditions favorable.

MAX WILHELM and Charles F. Eltzholtz, of Barteldes & Co., Lawrence, Kan., have been at Oklahoma City, Okla., where they selected a site for a seed warehouse to be built this summer and cost not less than $15,000.

THE floods in the west and southwest have covered the onion set fields in those localities. At Lawrence and Atchison, Kan., much damage has been done. At Iowa and Nebraska points the extent of the damage is not yet known, but it is likely to prove serious.

VINE seeds, especially cucumbers, have been contracted at higher prices than for many years. The high price for seed and the shortage of "pickles" in the vats of the pickling works has a tendency to make the farmers quite independent.

BEAN contracting for the year 1903 is about finished. Reports are that it was uphill work to get the farmers interested in garden beans, owing to the good prices and favorable market outlook for navy and other field beans. The prices that have ruled this season are higher for many varieties than for some years.

THERE is still a brisk demand for seed corn of both the sweet and field varieties. In the absence of stock of the Early Dent varieties of field corn there is sharp call for the flint varieties, while any canners' variety of sweet corn of good germination is quickly taken. Purchasers cannot be led back to the $15 a bushel price, however.

SO FAR Chicago onion-set growers have been favored with splendid weather conditions. Weeding is the important thing just now. The seed is well up and the stand is good. In some fields the onion magot is working, and this may have a bad effect on the crop later on.

PHILADELPHIA.—Continued dry weather has had a very depressing effect upon the local seed trade. It has not only lessened sales but has caused much complaint from those whose seed in the ground is not germinating. As usual, the fault is attributed to the seed, and very especially where it is not paid for. Potatoes are especially dilatory about coming up. All kinds of vegetables are selling well at unusually high prices, which augurs well for the trade in the future.

FRANK T. EMERSON, of Waterloo, says the rainfall during the month of May throughout the state of Nebraska was greater than at any time during the previous ten years. As a consequence, corn planting, not only as an ordinary field crop, but for seed purposes, has been greatly retarded, and a large proportion of the crops already planted, especially in the valleys, will have to be replanted. The sweet corn crop for seed purposes is likewise affected and, owing to the present unfavorable conditions, the probabilities are that the crop will not be nearly as large as has been anticipated. The planting of the vine seed crops has also been retarded, but as these crops may be successfully grown even when planted as late as the second week in June, it is to be hoped that the weather will become settled before it becomes too late to obtain good stands.

GEORGIA SEED CROPS.

Crops of the garden and field seeds peculiar to this section are quite promising at the end of May, but a dry, hot June is anticipated and conditions may change very materially before crops are safe. At this writing Seven Top turnip and Giant Curled Mustard may be counted safe and the seeds are of excellent quality. The famous Georgia collard is also safe.

The largest acreage of okra, Nixon muskmelon, Mexican June corn, Pearl millet, Spanish peanuts, Upland rice, White Multiplier onion, shallots, chufas, Velvet beans, Johnson grass, teosinte, Soja beans, Burr clover, cow peas and cotton ever put in is now well advanced and the prospect is encouraging at present. Notwithstanding the tremendous energy expended in the cultivation of these seeds, the demand is also greater than ever and spot cash buyers stand ready to take the output. Uncle Sam reaches out his paternal hand and draws in many tons of Georgia-grown seeds to distribute broadcast over the land. This is one of the most unbecoming enterprises our great government is engaged in, and one of the most useless. It works a great injustice to the enterprising seedsmen of the country by robbing them of trade. If it is a legitimate function of the government to furnish the people with free seeds, why not furnish tea and coffee? But let the government confine its free seed distribution to things entirely new to this country and there will be no cause for complaint.

MARK W. JOHNSON.

BALTIMORE.

Since the drought was broken by the gracious rain of about a week ago we have had moderate showers, but we can stand a great many more. The weather continues moderate, and, save some cool and muggy nights, favorable for flowers. Brides and Maids are growing less in size and the scarred foliage shows the mildew's blistering finger in many cases, but stuff generally is in better shape than is usual at this date.

The past week was one of activity in trade and flowers were not in excess of calls. The commencement season is upon us, and the demands are large for June weddings and public and private entertainments, and are equally distributed.

Decoration day, as was foreshadowed, produced more demands for finer flowers than was probably ever noticed before, and it is pleasant to see signs that the day will be of more advantage to the growers and dealers than it has been heretofore in this section. Of course the largest use is made of outdoor stuff, but greenhouse flowers were considerably employed.

The peony crop this year was not so abundant as usual, and sweet peas are not seen in their customary annual abundance.

The vacancy in the post of manager of the Florists' Exchange caused by the sickness of Alexander Scott, has been filled by the appointment of John J. Perry, who has had experience in this line, is well acquainted with the needs of both growers and buyers, and has the confidence of the entire trade. B.

PITTSBURG.

The great surplus of roses and carnations which has glutted this market for the past three weeks came to an end Thursday, May 28. The big demand for stock for Decoration day used up almost everything. Outdoor flowers, such as deutzias, snowballs and Narcissus poeticus, which are usually abundant at this time, arrived in small quantities. Peonies were more plentiful and the demand for them was brisk. On carnations and roses the supply equaled the demand. Every one reports business for Decoration day as very satisfactory.

Charles Koenig is cutting some very good gladioli.

A. W. Smith struck Decoration day just right with a house of fine long-florum lilies. So did Fred Burki, with a house of Kaiserins.

Christian Rieger, the pioneer manufacturer of florists' wire designs, has moved his works to 513 First avenue.

James Brothers, of Wilkinsburg, Pa., with greenhouses on the Greenbury pike, failed Tuesday, June 2.

At this writing, June 2, a surplus of the poorer grades of carnations and roses is again very noticeable.

Visitor: J. J. Bolton, of Beaver Falls, Pa. Hoo-Hoo.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Everybody has been very busy the past two weeks. Decoration day business was immense from every point of view. The demand, both for cut flowers and plants, was away ahead of past years, and prices obtained much better. Roses were, and continue to be, very scarce. Carnations fell short of the demand and were of inferior quality. Beauties and red roses are especially scarce. In outdoor stock, snowballs are in their prime, while spiræas, weigelas and deutzias add to the general stock. Cape jasmines from Texas are a very valuable adjunct at this time. A few good longiflorum lilies are seen. Outside valley has also been coming in quite freely, but they are nearly all gone now.

Bedding out has been rushed with all possible dispatch and work in that line is nearly all done. Another week, or in ten days at the latest, outside work should be all completed. Shipping trade has been exceptionally good this spring. Geraniums, as usual, have been in greatest demand, but there has also been a good call for pansies, verbenas, cannas, coleus, marguerites, feverfew, etc.

C. F. Haupt is cutting some fine lilies, which were originally intended for Easter, but are selling nearly as well now.

Holm & Olson, who erected a range of plant houses last summer, find their business doubled over that of a year ago.

L. L. May & Co. had a large decoration at the Commercial Club this week, and several $50 and $75 funeral orders have kept them exceedingly busy.

Charles Vogt has been the busiest he ever was and says business is very good.

There is a very heavy demand this week from the country towns for red roses and carnations for commencement exercises and weddings. X. Y. Z.

WASHINGTON.

Last week rain fell almost daily and gave the boys a much easier feeling, as all outdoor stock was suffering very much. Decoration day was a record breaker. Some did 50 to 75 per cent better than last year. Everything sold at very good prices in spite of the large quantities of outdoor stock at hand. Beauty brought $2 to $5, all tea roses $1 to $1.50 per dozen, carnations 50 cents to $1 a dozen. Cemetery baskets cleaned out at 50 cents each. By 10 o'clock on the morning of Decoration day one could not buy any kind of a plant in bloom.

Last week, Wednesday, a party of our bowlers went to Baltimore and were royally entertained. We did not have our regular team and Captain Ernest had a bad hand, so we did not make a very good showing on the alleys. Our team will challenge the Baltimore and Philadelphia teams for a silver cup known as the Kramer cup and valued at from $35 to $50. The conditions of the match will be announced later. OMAHA.

Decoration day and the two or three days preceding were a record breaker in the annals of Omaha. Very little outdoor stock was to be had, but indoor stuff was in quantity. The quality of roses in general was lowered a great deal by the incessant rains, but same did no visible harm to the carnations. Very few lilies and peonies were in bloom here, but plenty of the latter were shipped in and were very fine. Decoration day itself was a failure because of rain from early morning until night. Many put off their buying for Sunday, but that was also a disappointment. Our cold spring is inflicting a great loss on the florists of Omaha, because of their inability to do their planting out until so late in the season. That many, who ordinarily buy quantities of garden plants, will not invest at all is a foregone conclusion.

ANOTHER.

On page 32, issue of May 28, I note the item entitled "A Lily Customer." I think I can equal it, with the following mail order:

"Dear Sir: You please sent me six coleus plant of the high shade sorted. I have inclose 13 cent—please sent at once, and oblige."

How's that?

JOLIET, ILL.—Larson & Goranson, who have the Smith greenhouses, have a good stock of bedding plants and are doing a nice business.

In the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Evening Press for April 18 appears an extended description of the new rose raised by Mr. Geo. Hopp and which won high honors at the Philadelphia show of the American Rose Society, where it was exhibited by John Breitmeyer's Sons, of Detroit. It contains a view of a vase of the roses and a portrait of Mr. Hopp.

GRAND RAPIDS.

The weather has had a marked effect on business. We had two weeks of summer heat, when carnations bloomed so freely that for the first time this season there was a glut, and so high was the temperature that flowers seemed to go to sleep in a day. This was followed by a wet, raw, cold week previous to Memorial day, lessening the cut considerably, yet for all that there was undoubtedly the largest cut of roses and carnations on record. The demand was so great that shipping orders coming in Friday could not be filled.

The bulk of the bedding is finished. Straggling orders will, however, continue to come in for the rest of the month.

Harry Bunyard was recently trying to cool us off by talking eloquently of cold storage lilies. G. F. C.

BOONE, IA.—Jno. Lohrer says the continuously rainy weather in the latter half of May interfered with the spring trade.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

Memorial week was one of the busiest in the history of the trade in this city, the quantities of plants and cut flowers sold exceeding all former years, while the trade in baskets and window boxes also made a fine gain. The weather, being good, encouraged the bedding plant trade, which is a week earlier than last year, the quantities disposed of being also greater. Most of the growers were entirely cleaned out of cut blooms and had to refuse orders from neighboring cities.

The rose and carnation cuts, while larger and of fine quality, did not cover the demand. Other stock, such as callas, white stocks and, in fact, any kind of a flower, met with a ready sale, particularly toward the end of the week.

M. F. Kyle, of the Dunkley Floral Co., reports this as a very satisfactory Memorial day trade.

G. Van Bochove & Bro., comparing it with former years, say they are considerably ahead. Prices ruled about the same as last season.

Jack Calder, of the East Side, has been doing a good trade in bedding plants, carnations and other cut flowers.

Rose planting is in full swing. The quantities to be benched will considerably exceed last season. The firms now building are preparing to increase in Beauty stock.

Carnations in the field are looking fine, the genial rains of the past ten days having done wonders for them. These will also be planted in greater quantities this year, the Van Bochove Brothers alone having 30,000 in the field for their own benching. R.

CHESTNUT HILL, PA.—Charles W. Henry is erecting a stone and iron conservatory, 22x115, costing $3,000.

KIND WORDS NEVER DIE.

Bellevue, Pa. Chas. T. Siebert:—Please book my order for 100 lbs. of Zinc Never Rust Glazing Points. I have used five different kinds in the past 12 years, and none of them gave me satisfaction like yours. They will stay in, are easy to drive, no rights or lefts, will hold the glass in place, and do not rust away like all others I have used. Your Zinc Points are easy to take out when making repairs. I have used about 100 lbs. of your Zinc Points in the last two years, and I am perfectly satisfied with them.

Yours truly, F. BURKI.

Cleveland, Ohio. Chas. T. Siebert:—In our 25 years' experience with glazing points of all kinds, I can say your zinc points are the best to date.

CHAS. H. WILSON, Mgr. for Grant-Wilson Floral Co.

Lockland, Ohio. Chas. T. Siebert:—I must say the Zinc Points have given great satisfaction. I have over 100 lbs. on my houses, and feel justified in stating that they are the best point on the market.

Yours respectfully, W. K. PARTRIDGE, Florist.

JOLIET, ILL.

The President's Reception.

Everyone in town is busy preparing for the reception of President Roosevelt, who is due here on Wednesday of this week (that is, everyone with the exception of James Hartshorne and crew, reasons given below). This is the present President's first visit to Joliet, which of course makes it more interesting to all. Charlie Shepard, gardener to Colonel John Lambert, is to decorate the President's car. He will use Roosevelt color carnations and American Beauties, as well as some specimen Pierisoni ferns, which he regrets to see go, as no doubt they will have to suffer, but Mr. Lambert says there is nothing too good for Roosevelt. L. L. May & Co., of St. Paul, wired the Chicago Carnation Company on Monday for 5,000 carnations, which were shipped at a moment's notice. These were undoubtedly used in connection with the President's visit to that city.

Peony Time.

James Hartshorne and his three crews of help, from the Chicago Carnation Company, the Higinbotham estate and the Chicago Peony Farms, respectively, are now hustling with the ten-acre peony crop. As yet they have not lost a flower and have been getting at wholesale as high as $1.50 per dozen for such varieties as Lady Bramwell, Festiva Maxima, Rubra Superba and other novelties. They are now shipping by the car load, using refrigerator cars for the purpose. This is the first step in this direction in history and should be the only practical way to handle such an immense quantity. The refrigerator cars run direct to cold storage buildings in various cities where the peonies are kept until the markets are ready to receive them.

A visit to the peony farms now is worth anybody's time, though all intended for market are cut in the bud as tight as an American Beauty rose. But the batch of 15,000 to 20,000 seedlings, among which are some that will surely displace the best present-day sorts, is a sight fit for the gods. Of course there are a great many single varieties. Even blooms of these have been in strong demand at 50 cents per dozen. The best of these will be saved for forcing purposes. Mr. Hartshorne says they force nearly as quickly as valley when one knows how to handle them.

Notes.

Charles Zeigk is back at his old stand, the Spot Cash corner.

Joseph Labo and Johnson & Carlson were practically cleaned out of flowering plants for Memorial day. The former gentleman had as fine a lot of hydrangeas as we have seen in many a year.

Aaron T. Pyfer, bookkeeper for the Chicago Carnation Company, has recently joined the ranks of Benedicts. It came as a surprise to his many friends in and out of the trade. The young lady was a Miss Gertrude Ingersol, daughter of an old and respected family of Joliet.

Two weeks ago the great cry was for rain. Now it is the reverse; we are getting too much of it.

Charles Conklin and all the old timers report good business.

(REGISTERED)

Greenhouse Fumigating Powder

Is the newest and best article on the market to-day for the complete destruction of all insects that infest Greenhouses or Conservatories, being a special boon to Rose and Beauty growers and prepared particularly for the destruction of Greenfly and Thrips. There is nothing injurious in it to plant life, even the most delicate fern. It is especially recommended for Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Smilax, Asparagus, Palms, Ferns, etc., and we claim that insects will be entirely eradicated when the houses are thoroughly fumigated with the powder. It is put up as follows:

When Writing Advertisers

HERE IS A BUSINESS BOOK FOR BUSINESS MEN

NO SCIENCE BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE.

It don't tell you the botanical classification but it does tell you how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

It don't list every plant in cultivation but it does tell you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

The articles are arranged alphabetically so that when you want to see what Mr. Scott says about Cannas you turn to the Cs and in an instant you have it.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.

Caxton Building, CHICAGO.

The book treats of over 200 subjects and is freely illustrated with fine half-tone engravings.

It is a book that you need in your business just as you need any other useful labor and money saving implement or device.

The price is $5.00, carriage prepaid.

(NEPHROLEPIS PIERSONI.)

There is nothing that you can plant that will increase in value so rapidly as this fern. The demand has been so great, and our advance sales so large, that we have not offered it recently, having only just completed filling advance orders. We have a nice lot of young at ck coming on and can fill all orders received from this date promptly on receipt. Even at the present high price it has been impossible to keep up with the demand, and there is sure to be a tremendous demand for it another season when it can be offered at lower prices. Now is the time to invest in it and get the benefit of the tremendous demand and good prices which are sure to prevail another season. The Boston Fern, although it has been cultivated many years, is still scarce. As Nephrolepis Piersoni will sell better and be in greater demand even than the Boston Fern, we predict a scarcity of Nephrolepis Piersoni for several years to come and at big prices. Owing to the great and continued demand, we do not expect to be more than able to meet the demand this spring, so that customers can rest assured that there will be no change in price this season.

We offer strong young plants, 2 1/4-in. pots, at $9.00 per doz.; 50 plants at 60c each; 100 plants at 50c each; 500 plants at 45c each; 1000 plants at 40c each.

Extra large plants, 6-in pots, $27.00 per doz; 50 plants at $1.80 each; 100 plants at $1.50 each. These large plants will make fine stock for growing on into large specimens for fall trade, and they are also very nice for immediate sales.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Stock for the Future.

As soon as your customers' flower beds and gardens are filled you have time to think about your own stock—some to give you cuttings in the fall and something for next winter's use—and a word or two about these will be seasonable. It may appear late for some, but the man who grows bedding plants seldom has time to prepare for his future crops before the middle of the month.

Chrysanthemums.

If you have any call for chrysanthemums in pots in October and November, they should be planted on a bench in four or five inches of soil in the full light of an unshaded house. Plant them fifteen inches apart, and for this purpose choose late propagated plants that are now growing freely and about need their first "stop." These will make much better plants than those that were propagated three months ago. When they have made a growth they will need one more pinching and by the end of August will be bushy plants. If watered over night they will lift from the bench without losing a fiber and make lots of growth after being lifted. Very sorry to say that few of these pots of mums sell with us nowadays, but they may somewhere, and this is the way to do it. About the last week in August is the time to lift them from the bench. Few varieties are suitable for making a small, compact plant. Choose varieties that make a short, bushy growth. Ivory and W. H. Lincoln cannot be equaled in their colors for this purpose, but there are others.

Azaleas.

You should soon put your azaleas out in the field. Years ago it was thought best to give them the shade of trees or some artificial shading, but that is not what they want. Plunge them to the rim of the pots in refuse hops, old rotted manure, tan bark or some material easy to handle. If liberally supplied with water twice a day on hot, sunny days and given a good spraying every evening they will grow finely, and you will notice that although you may give them plenty of room when you first plunge them out, they grow and crowd before September. So give them plenty of room, and make up your mind to give them a stand-over in August. Acacia armata, metrosideros and old plants of cytissus can be plunged under the same conditions, and don't have these plants standing on ground that is liable to retain water, for you have to water heavily and we get heavy rains. Don't put young cytissus out of doors. Plants propagated last winter will do better shifted on and kept under glass. These plants are very liable to be troubled with red spider, so spray them often.

Hydrangeas.

Hydrangeas are grown in different ways. If you want large plants for next year, choose some of the plants that have the least flower now. Cut the growths back about half way to the pot and put three plants into a tub and stand out of doors. With heavy, rich soil and water in abundance you will have fine tubs for next spring, but remember that they become white elephants if you don't sell them and that they are considerable trouble in winter. Young hydrangeas propagated in the winter might have been planted out two or three weeks ago, but it will do now. These are what make the 6-inch pot plants for next Easter. Give them a good, rich soil within reach of the hose. Some growers may have them in 4-inch pots now and plunge them out in frames and later shift them into 6-inch. Yet I think the best blooms are those produced by the plants that are put into the ground and lifted in October. They need only one stopping after being rooted, but that has been done some time ago.

Stock Plants.

Another class of plants are those that you want a few of to produce cuttings next winter. Such are the lemon verbenas and the lantana. A dozen plants of each in 4 or 5-inch pots plunged out in a frame will give you plenty of cuttings next winter, and they lift poorly when planted out. Plant out a few of everything that you find necessary to your business and don't trust to your neighbor's helping you out, or to getting a few cuttings from your customers. If you do, you are liable to have bother. Of many of our common bedding plants you need but very few. Of such plants as salvias and ageratums, half a dozen plants lifted in the fall will give you all you want; while there are others, and notably the zonale geraniums, that you must plant out in quantity or you cannot have a good stock to sell next spring.

Put out plenty of the glorious old geraniums and not too great a variety. This year in our city the two varieties in greatest demand are S. A. Nutt, deep scarlet, and Francis Perkins, pink. Everybody wants them. A big lot of half a dozen of the best varieties of geraniums is infinitely better than the same quantity in twelve or twenty varieties. The sweet person who wants to walk through and select one each of a dozen varieties can then be dispensed with. If you disappoint them it is not serious. But the one who wants 200 plants for one bed is worth catering to. I suppose all are worth accommodating, yet I see this spring the same old weakness—thousands of geraniums that the people don't want occupying space that would give what they do want. Give your stock geraniums lots of room; fifteen or eighteen inches is close enough, and then you will get good, hard cuttings.

Plant out plenty of spring struck vincas, both the variegated and green. They are the great standby for boxes and vases. The English ivy planted out now will make a good plant by fall and can be lifted, potted and put beneath a bench in winter. They are good for vases and for windy and exposed places, but our customers think they are stiff, and so they are.

Besides the great and important carnation, which is so important that I hope you don't neglect it for anything else, and which with most of us are growing in the field, there are a few other things to plant out. The sweet stevia (S. serrata) can't be dispensed with, at least by many of us. Give it not over rich soil or it will grow too rank, and plant it two feet apart each way. It needs two or three pinchings during the summer. It is much less labor planted out than grown in pots, and it is the only species of the stevia and eupatoriums worth growing; the rest are too cheap looking.

Bouvardias, which may still be in 2½-inch pots, should have the best and richest piece of loam in the garden. The little, slim growth they have made since they were propagated from the tiny pieces of root does not amount to anything. They will make strong growths from beneath the ground, which is the flowering wood for next winter. It pays well to water the bouvardias. I am no advocate of this outdoor watering unless done with discretion and gumption. There is about as much harm as good done with this foolish and useless sprinkling. Hoe, hoe, hoe in dry weather if you can't water, and if you can water them once a week, such plants as bouvardias may get a soaking, and then before the ground is baked hoe them and leave them all alone for another week. This sprinkling without hoeing is far worse than drought.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Single Stem Pot Plants.

Single stem pot plants, in 6-inch pots, are one of the most attractive features of an exhibition when well grown. I notice the C. S. A. makes a fair provision for them in its prize list for this fall, and they are always much in evidence at the Philadelphia show. While some growers propagate their stock toward the end of May for this style of pot plants, any time in June is really early enough if one has good cuttings; in fact, I prefer a June cutting, because if propagated too soon the plants get too tall, and the lower foliage dies away, leaving a bare stem next the pot. The ideal plant has foliage hanging over the pot and right up to the flower and is not over two feet high. The official scale of points in judging this class gives a preference, if I recall correctly, to plants under three feet in height.

Varieties that grow dwarf and sturdy are best adapted for this work. In the novelties Marie Liger, C. J. Salter, Mrs. T. W. Pockett and Lord Salisbury can be depended on, if their growth last year is anything to go by. Among the standard sorts Robinson, Nellie Pockett, Appleton, Bonnaillon (if you can still get it good), Merza, Vivian-Morel and E. J. Balfour can all be depended on. One of the prettiest sights I ever saw was a batch of Merza at an exhibition last year. They were not over a foot high, each plant the same height, and each flower apparently cast in the same mold.

It has often occurred to me that there ought to be money for the florist who grows and sells his own stock over the counter in handling this particular class of plant. The average chrysanthemum plant one sees in the stores is carrying a dozen or more small flowers, and is conspicuous mainly on account of its bare stems, which are rendered still more noticeable by being tied to thick bamboo stakes. Mark Twain's description of a cocoanut palm as a "feather duster struck by lightning" is applicable in some degree to the mum plants one sometimes sees in the establishments of our "best" florists. Contrast these tall, leggy, ungainly plants with a dwarf plant in a 6-inch pot, with the foliage of the plant almost hiding the pot and crowned by a good-sized flower and there can be no question as to which plant the average customer would prefer.

If you have any small plants lying around that are hard and stunted and dried out, don't pot them up, thinking that they will make good plants for 6-inch pots once they get to growing. They hardly ever hold their foliage well, as the stem gets too hard and woody. Get the suckers that spring up out of the soil from the old plants, where possible, because these cuttings will, on many varieties, grow right along and not produce a bud before the end of August, at which time the bud can be taken, and then you have a perfectly straight stem. If earlier rooted plants are topped in June and the tops used for cuttings for the single stems, these cuttings will nearly always produce a bud in July or early August and then it is not so easy to keep the stem straight where the plant "breaks" again.

The main thing to observe in growing single stemmed plants is to keep them moving nicely right along and never let them get pot bound or dry at the roots. Pot into 2½-inch pots from the cutting bench and from that to the 6-inch pot as soon as the roots are nicely through the soil all around. Keep the plants inside all summer, where you can control the water supply; otherwise in showery weather leaf spot will be found troublesome. Caterpillars must be kept off and also the festive grasshopper, if the foliage is to be kept perfect, and perfect it must be to win. A point not to be forgotten, also, is that these plants, owing to their restricted root area, need much more feeding with liquid manure than plants set out in a bench.

BRIAN BORU.

SEASONABLE VIOLET NOTES.

The most seasonable thing that we have had hereabouts is rain. It commenced last night and has been coming down ever since in nice showers that go right in as they should, and if ever we needed rain it is now, as we have had a seven weeks' drought—fifty-one days, to be exact—and crops of all kinds are about ruined. I mean the hardier kinds, grass, grain, etc., to say nothing about violets, carnations, etc., which were not established in the ground. Of course those that were planted in the house were under our control as regards the watering; still, even then, they do not do as well when the air is dry and dusty as they do when it is normal. One thing that we have to take especial care about is that the red spider does not get a foothold in such weather, and extra attention should be given in strongly spraying the under sides of the foliage with the water from the hose, so that the spider will have no opportunity to get a start, as in all things an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

As you wish all the strength of the plants to go into good, strong crowns, you must go over them frequently, cutting off the runners as soon as started, and this work, as I have before stated, should not be left to the "boy," but given to an older person of judgment. A good deal of injury can be done by a careless, incompetent grower in many ways, one of which is pulling more or less on the plant and disturbing it, as of course it has not taken hold hard enough as yet to stand much of this treatment. Another is cracking stems of leaves and so injuring their breathing capacity, etc.

If the plants are in the house be sure to have on all the ventilation that is possible, so as not to grow them tall and soft; and good judgment must also be used with the shading on the glass, for the same reason; still you want enough shading to keep the house as cool as possible. The plants out of doors, I presume, you have planted where they can get the shade from trees or rows of higher plants, or in lack of this, lath screens, unless you have a very moist piece of ground especially adapted to violets.

The drier the weather the oftener the cultivator should be run through them, and this is just what is liable to be omitted, as the weeds do not start so freely and we are apt to think it is not needed; but this is a great mistake, as, if they are cultivated every day, you will be astonished to see how moist it keeps the ground underneath and how the loose, dry earth on top keeps the moisture in.

I presume some have not yet been able to get the houses planted. If so, do not hurry so that the house is not properly prepared. Give them six inches of new, fresh soil, which has previously been worked over and gotten in good shape, and then see that the plants are in good shape and not thrown into the soil in a rough, haphazard manner. They should be trimmed up, leaving only one or two fully developed leaves on them, so that there will not be as much leaf surface to evaporate moisture and so dry out the roots before they have an opportunity to take a hold.

R. E. SHUPHELT.

HYBRID ALPINE IRIS.

Mr. W. J. Caparn, St. Martins, Guernsey, England, has raised some very interesting iris hybrids and sends us some photographs of what he calls his new hybrid Alpine iris, which are reproduced herewith.

The one showing a house of this iris in bloom in January and February will probably be of some interest to our readers as indicating what may be done in the way of forcing this race of irises. Mr. Caparn says it readily responds to the forcing treatment, and the plants may be had in bloom either before or after Christmas, from November onwards.

The plants in the house illustrated were lifted and boxed in October and a slight heat put on the house in mid-December. The plants bloomed through January and February, and some flowers were cut till the end of March. The plants were then planted out in the open and afterward grew into flowering stock again the same year. Mr. Caparn says that if the plants had been boxed in September they would have bloomed for Christmas.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Cleaning the Houses.

After the old soil has been removed, the benches should be thoroughly cleaned. Sweep out all soil left in cracks and corners, follow with a heavy syringing with the hose, next apply a light coat of wood ashes and with an old broom scrub the bottom and sides, finishing with another syringing.

When nearly dry every part of the bench which will come in contact with soil should receive a coat of whitewash. If you whitewash both inside and outside, so much the better. Slake the lime by adding just enough water to cover it and when violent boiling begins add more water gradually, as required, to prevent burning, in the end producing a somewhat thick solution. Before boiling ceases add two pounds of powdered sulphur to ten gallons thick wash, stirring well. Apply at once, thinning with water (hot is preferable) to the required consistency to spread easily.

As soon as a house is finished, close every door and ventilator, fumigating by burning brimstone. This comes in sticks or rolls and can be easily broken up, using about two pounds in a 100-foot house, dividing the amount into say six pot saucers and distributing evenly about the house. Plants of every kind should have been previously removed and the fumes kept in about 24 hours. A house so treated is practically free from all insect pests and fungous germs.

Forced Hybrid Irises.

If the whole interior, exclusive of the whitewashed surface, can then be painted, a long step toward a new house will have been taken.

Filling the Benches.

In my notes of May 14 on soil for indoor culture, Mr. Baur evidently misunderstood my meaning in regard to the use of bone meal, for I use a small quantity in benches prepared to receive field-grown plants, but the article in question had reference to plants grown in pots outside in frames and housed in June. I confess my error in not stating the point more clearly.

There are several methods employed by growers in the filling of benches. Some put a layer of manure on the bottom, using soil containing more or less manure, with or without bone. Others use no manure at the bottom, but use soil laid up with manure the season previous, with or without the addition of bone, and so on in various ways.

I do not believe any one method can be advocated as the ideal, except it be when but one variety is grown, for what will suit one sort will not give the best results with another. I have made many experiments in this line, but, with the advent of so many new sorts, with which I have not had the time to carry them through, I will only give facts concerning a few now largely grown.

I have found horse manure to be preferable to any other to put on the bottom of the bench, but by all means do not use the well-rotted kind. Procure some that is comparatively fresh, giving it two or three turnings, seeing to it that it is kept wet the while and put on at once. This spread on the benches in a thin layer and at once covered with soil has given us the very best results with Mrs. Bradt and Floriana. Crane does not seem to take kindly to it. Lawson having done exceedingly well without it, we have let well enough alone, as is also the case with White Cloud and Nelson. I think Estelle would give good returns under this method and intend to try it next season.

Speaking of manure, I will say I prefer that from the cow on account of its lasting qualities, but let no grower who is unable to obtain it, think for a minute that carnations cannot be grown to an equal degree of quality with horse manure. The trouble lies in the fact that it is not properly handled, at the source of supply, to preserve its value as a fertilizer. I am obliged to use a certain amount for the reason that cow manure is scarce and very expensive on account of the distance it must be hauled, but by careful attention to its treatment where that from the horse is obtained, and shutting my ears to the much-exalted virtue of that which is offered as being well rotted, we get along very nicely.

Coming to the actual filling of the benches, a few points of importance come to mind, the main one being to so handle the soil that a bench will, when filled, have the same degree of density throughout. The dumping of soil here and there in heaps by all hands, to be spread and leveled later is not to be thought of.

Hybrid Alpine Iris.

Without knowing the arrangement of your houses, it is not possible to lay out any fixed plan, but I can say to keep the men and wheelbarrows out of the bench and provide runways on which to transport the soil. We fill in layers, spreading the first few barrow loads evenly over six to eight feet of bench with a short-handled rake. The same operation is repeated until that section is even full. Bone meal is sprinkled over the bottom layer, using about a 3-inch potful to three barrows of soil.

Have enough help inside to level it as fast as the soil is delivered, also see that the soil and manure are evenly incorporated before being carried in. Those inside, by intelligent manipulation of the rake, can distribute the soil in such a manner that no tramping over it will be necessary nor should it be allowed.

I do not believe in filling a bench today and planting it to-morrow. Commence early enough to allow the newly filled benches to lie at least a week before planting. By this plan the soil gets into a more settled condition, numerous weed seeds sprout and can be easily destroyed by a thorough raking, at the same time improving the mechanical condition of the soil. A slight watering on the third or fourth day will help the weeds along and also leave the soil in the proper condition to plant.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

To carry a house of roses successfully and profitably over a second season requires a deal of careful preparation and study. This is usually delayed until the early fall or, at least, till the earlier planted young stock is giving a crop. This, of course, largely curtails their growing season, as it requires from three weeks to a month between the time of growing, then a rest, and starting them up again.

To derive the best results from this method of culture preparations should be started in June or early in July. By reducing the supply of water at the roots they will begin to ripen both wood and foliage, and stop making new wood. While this is being done the syringe will have to be used as frequently as before, as allowing the foliage to become a prey to red spider does not in any way help the ripening process, but rather retards it, yet how often do we see a house at this stage entirely neglected in this respect?

Air must be given freely, both night and day, as this is a great factor in hastening the ripening. The soil in the bench must not be allowed to become so dry as to cause the young wood to wilt nor to cause the plants to shed their leaves. It requires from three weeks to a month to complete the ripening process even in the brightest kind of weather.

The plants should then be carefully pruned, removing all the small and blind wood and cutting back the stronger growths to three or four eyes. As much of the old soil as can with safety be taken from between the plants should be carefully removed and a sprinkling of air-slaked lime put over all the exposed surface. A good rich mulch should then be spread over the bench to replace the soil taken away.

To encourage the breaking of the dormant eyes near the base of the stems the stronger canes should be bent horizontally and tied in that position. The bench should then get a thorough soaking and the house be kept rather close for the first week. Syringing the plants every bright morning and afternoon will also help the eyes to break, increasing the amount of ventilation as the leaves develop.

This method of culture has been employed successfully in Beauty growing by some growers during the past few seasons, the stock thus treated giving a larger per cent of medium length stems than young stock does. Personally, I have a penchant for well-handled young stock in preference to the best-handled, carried-over stock that I have ever seen.

Grafted stock can also be treated by this method, the chances of success being equal to stock on its own roots.

RIBES.

TRouble WITH ROSES.

I inclose a few leaves of my rose plants on which are little green worms with eight or ten legs. They are thick on the young growth of both roses, chrysanthemums and carnations. What is the trouble with the roses and how shall I get rid of the worms? P. J. K.

The trouble with these roses is a bad dose of mildew. The leaves also give evidence, by their texture, of having been grown in too high a temperature and in too close an atmosphere. To subdue the mildew dust the foliage with sulphur, using a good distributor, so that each leaf will get a dusting. Before applying the sulphur close the ventilators tight and keep them closed for half an hour or so. This should be done twice a week, selecting bright, sunny days for the operation. If there is any necessity for firing do not lose the opportunity to paint the pipes in spaces six feet apart all over the house with the following mixture and close the ventilators when the heat is turned on: Sulphur, two parts; air-slaked lime, one part; mix to the consistency of paint.

The worms were undistinguishable when I got them. No doubt they belong to the tribe of leaf rollers. By persisting with the Persian insect powder they will surely disappear. A mixture of Paris green and air-slaked lime in the proportions of one part Paris green to fifty of lime well mixed and applied to the under side of the foliage with a blower will also destroy them.

Reduce the night temperature of the rose houses to 58 degrees or as near to that mark as the season will permit, and keep the day temperature below 80 degrees if you can. Ventilate freely night and day.

RIBES.

BENCHING ROSES' LATE.

How late can I bench roses to get a good crop for next winter? What size of plants shall I use? L. R. A.

To get a good crop of high-grade blooms for winter, roses should be benched not later than June. Where this cannot be accomplished, the plants should be shifted into larger pots, so that they may not receive a check. Keeping the stock in a growing condition till they are benched is of more importance than actual size. To derive any profit from them during the winter months the plants must have at least ten weeks in which to grow and this will necessitate planting some time in August, the earlier the better.

RIBES.

MOLES AND MICE.

Would Mr. Scott or some other friend tell me how to get rid of the ground mice, which are very destructive. They cut the roots of grape vines and eat off geraniums, peas, carnations, pansies, parsley, etc. As they work under ground, you can't see them, but they are little, dark fellows, with stumpy tails like moles. I have poisoned corn and planted it among the plants, but it has had no results.

A. H.

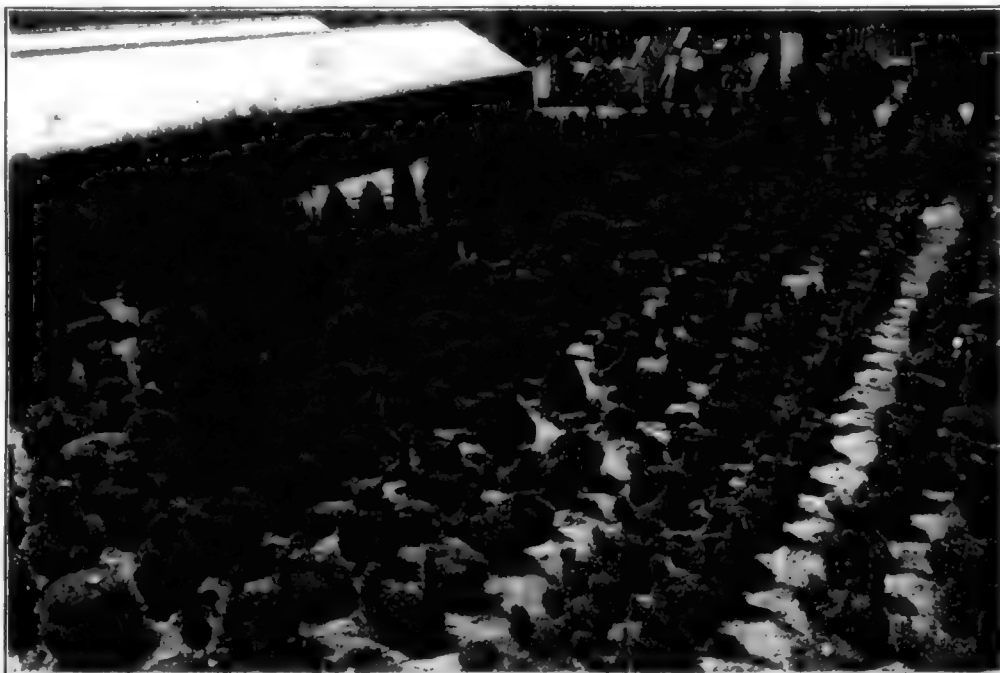

I could have returned this query with the simple remark, "I don't know," but I want, myself, to know about these numerous little rodents, and there seems by the above to be some confusion as to their name or what they are. We well remember the European mole, a short, broad, little fellow with a nose like a hog and only rudimentary eyes, and a beautiful soft, black fur. Many a one I have skinned for his hide. The village mole catcher in the rural districts of England is paid by the parish, and is as useful, if not so ornamental, a personage as the village parson. We also have moles in North America, more common, I believe, in the southern than northern states, and they are not identical with their European cousins. We have had them in the violet houses for the past two years, and they "raised Cain" with the soil among the plants, but, so far as we could discover, did no harm to the plants, because the mole is carnivorous. His food is worms and grubs that he finds in the soil. Their extermination is desired in this country and in the "auld sod" because they heave up unsightly mounds of earth, often in the finest lawns. So much for the mole, and I shall not believe that he will eat roots or leaves of any plant until someone better informed lets me know.

Now for the field mouse—a very different creature. We will start off by calling him a devil, although his tail is more abbreviated than that of the orthodox devil that we used to have described to us in our young and innocent days. The field mouse that is such a trouble and worry to us is about twice the weight of a house mouse, small ears, short tail and large, bright eyes. They burrow in the ground; in fact, they keep house there, but come up to feed on any green stuff that can be found. We never see them in the summer time, because they have the fields to roam in, but as soon as hard frost sets in they find their way into the houses. Young carnations are their choicest morsels, and one healthy mouse will pinch or "stop" a hundred young plants in a night, only they "stop" them rather short.

Like all the rats and mice, they cut off far more than they devour, just to keep their teeth in good order. They are most destructive and troublesome to get rid of. If they would eat woodcock sandwiches or drink champagne we might doctor those dainty articles, but they are strictly vegetarian, and, while toasted cheese will make a house mouse desert his wife and family, it has no fascination for our enemy. They will, however, for a change, sample a little corn meal occasionally, and a little of that sprinkled on a small spring trap will lure them to destruction. The trap we use is a little flat wooden contrivance, and when they step on it a wire falls down on their backs and gives them a fashionable waist.

We have poisoned them by putting arsenic with the meal, but you must be very patient over the job. For a week at least you must put down nothing but pure meal, and don't put it on a plate, saucer or piece of wood or glass, for mouseie will know directly that the banquet is spread for him and will decline with thanks. Just drop it carefully on the edge board or on the soil. They will take a nibble and find it harmless. Then they will eat a little more and cultivate a taste for it, as we do for tobacco and, well, most anything but milk, which is our first and natural food. After a few good feeds Mr. Mouse will tell his wife, children, mother-in-law, uncle and aunt that the meal is all right, that they need not be afraid, etc., and so they all get a liking for the change of diet, and when you find the meal disappearing nightly is your time to add a little arsenic, and several mice have departed to the happy hunting ground.

This article is already long enough, longer even than Burns' address to the mouse, the manuscript of which, if it is in existence, would be worth several thousand dollars. But I would just like to say that in the economy of nature things are pretty well balanced. One creature preys and feeds on another and keeps the equilibrium fairly poised. It is, however, certain that during the remarkable ages of the past countless types of animals have lived, flourished and passed away, and those now on earth we will for brevity's sake call the "survival of the fittest." So things were not all made perfect at first. It would be a very humdrum, melancholy world if all were perfect now. So in the extermination of the field mouse the economy of nature would not receive a solar plexus. At the same time it is essentially proper that we, as gardeners and farmers, should have insects, fungi and rodents to fight. It keeps us going, rewards the watchful and alert, and, as David Harum says, "It's good for a dog to have fleas, 'cause it reminds him he's only a dog."

ST. LOUIS WORLD'S FAIR.

The accompanying plan shows the arrangement and position of the buildings to be devoted to agriculture and to horticulture at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, to be held in St. Louis in 1904.

The Palace of Horticulture is on the summit of Skinker Hill, and is separated from the Palace of Agriculture by 250 feet of model landscape gardens. The building is 400 by 800 feet, and is in the form of a cross with a center pavilion, 400 feet square, and two wings, each 204 by 230 feet. The wings are divided from the center pavilion by glass partitions and the floor of each is nine feet lower than that of the center pavilion. This difference in elevation produces a monumental effect, which is further heightened by the use in the main entrance on the north front of two towers 150 feet high.

The east wing of the building is almost entirely of glass and will be used as a conservatory. A water-heating plant is to be installed in the cellar. The west wing is used for general horticultural exhibits. In the basement of this wing cold storage is provided for the fruit to be exhibited. A gallery is provided on three sides. The west and north galleries will be used as restaurants, and the southern gallery will be used as offices for the working force of the department. The center pavilion will contain the fruit exhibits.

The construction of the building shows no change from the accepted method of the other buildings. The exhibit spaces are covered by trusses, which range in span from 72 feet over the center aisle to 48 feet over the side aisles. The horticultural building is one of the few which are to be tinted.

"A WOMAN'S HARDY GARDEN."

I have read with deep interest fragments of a book for amateurs published last fall by MacMillan & Co., of New York. In its way it is as valuable a book as "Scott's Manual." Even to the expert florist it will prove interesting reading, possibly instructive on some points. The title is "A Woman's Hardy Garden," written by Helena Rutherford Ely and beautifully illustrated with photographs taken in her garden, which appears to be in New York state, probably on the North river.

I see my horticultural friends smile when they have read thus far and ask whether "Phil" is really advocating "old woman's gardening." Not in the sense in which they mean it—experiences with ash-heap plants that sprouted, geraniums that lived suspended by their roots in the cellar all winter, and that sort of thing—but in its broad sense I am an advocate of all gardening, whether by woman or man, old or young. Every amateur who cares for plant life will do something to help business.

To return to the book, it gives a graphic description in remarkably clear language of the successes and failures of a hardy garden. The owner has not had the aid of a pane of glass to help in starting her plants or growing them on. They are chiefly perennials and biennials, with some annals and bulbs. She evidently has had money at her command, but much could be done, as she points out, with far less expense.

There are some cultural notes in the book that will startle our experts as much as did Mr. MacMillan's effects in green or his grace of York's essay on watering, but it may do them lots of good, and no harm can come from the fresh ideas and from seeing ourselves as others see us.

The real value of the book to the florist is to put it in the hands of his customers; it will show them what amateurs like themselves have done and spur them on to fresh efforts. The florist who works with his customers to produce effective hardy gardens, be they large or small, will build up his own business on a firm foundation. PHIL.

STEVIA SERRATA AND COMPACTA.

Will you kindly tell me how and when to propagate Stevia serrata? What is its season of bloom? Also answer the same questions in regard to Stevia compacta. I suppose they can be grown for a succession of blooms.

SOUTHERN FLORIST.

It seems like going back to the honeymoon days to mention Stevia serrata or compacta. I have mentioned in my scribbles many times the useful S. serrata. Its culture is most simple and it is rather too rank a grower. Plants that were cut down at Christmas and New Year's for their bloom should be cut off evenly (just for sake of tidiness) to within six inches of the pot. Put them in any cool house above freezing. In March they will send out any quantity of cuttings which root like a scandal and want only the coolest house until planting out time. Just here let me say that S. serrata thrives in a few degrees above freezing, but like the cineraria, wants none of it. Plant them out at the end of May, two feet between the plants. They will want pinching about twice during the summer. Lift them before danger of frost, and they will want 6, 7 or 8-inch pots. Of course, when potting them you will put them in the shade and keep them there until they have begun to grow in the pots. Now comes the real and only point in growing this common plant. You want the flowers at Christmas and New Year's. The feathery and light flowers many times fill a place with really artistic people that even a vase of American Beauty roses would not do. The great object with us in the north is to keep them from flowering until December, and therefore we keep them out of doors as long as possible, protecting them from early frosts and letting them have the full sunshine and beautiful outdoors until the last possible moment. You can treat S. compacta just the same, but it is not worth growing. We have outlived such poor, gray, stiff, formal flowers. I heard within a day or two that florists in Baltimore (I mean, of course, the market variety) helped out their bouquets with the panicles of wild carrot. Why not, as long as there is a dollar in it? A drowning man grasps at a straw.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

NEW YORK.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the club Monday evening brought out thirty members. W. F. Sheridan presented an elaborate report from the transportation committee, including letters from several railroads, relating the advantages of the various lines as routes to the "famous" convention city. The route via Chicago, with stop-over there, had already been decided upon. The discussion enlisted the oratorical talent of Messrs. Sheridan, O'Mara, Beaulieu, Butterfield, Wheeler, Manda and Troy and a vote showed a decided preference for the West Shore, but the decision was left to the committee. Arrangements will probably be made whereby the party can leave New York Sunday morning and be in Chicago Monday. The outing committee presented a program of sports showing prizes enough to send every competitor home happy. July 1 is the date and Mr. Traendly reported a big sale of tickets. He asks that every one who has not accepted the tickets sent will communicate with him at once if he expects to be present, for the committee must make dinner arrangements. The committee has worked hard and is entitled to every consideration. Hospitable letters from J. F. Sullivan and the Detroit Florists' Club were read, inviting the eastern delegation to visit Detroit enroute to the convention. They were referred to the transportation committee. Resolutions on the death of F. L. Harris were presented by W. A. Manda and J. H. Troy. A splendid exhibit of peonies was shown by C. W. Ward, of the Cottage Gardens, and Chas. Lenker, of Freeport. Mme. Perret and mixed pansies were shown by Beaulieu, of Woodhaven. The committee, Messrs. Plumb, O'Mara and Lenker, awarded a certificate of merit to Mr. Ward for his grand pink, No. 130, honorable mention to Mr. Lenker for a beautiful dark pink called Fragrance, and a vote of thanks to Mr. Beaulieu. This gentleman also showed a hose roller of his own invention on which he has applied for a patent. Mr. Engreen, of Woodhaven, was elected to membership. The nominating committee was named by President Troy and consists of W. F. Sheridan, A. Burns, P. O'Mara, Wm. Plumb, J. N. May and J. H. Taylor. The club has had a very good year. The next regular meeting is the second Monday in October.

Various Notes.

The first meeting of the bowlers was called for Tuesday evening at the alleys at Broadway and 31st street, with Capt. Lang in charge. A good team for Milwaukee is assured and steady practice will be kept up until August, most of the old members participating.

Dunne & Co., at 54 W. 30th street, report a very satisfactory season in rustic work. At their city workshop, 507 W. 21st street, and their factory at Rondont, they are working to the full capacity. They claim to be the largest manufacturers of rustic work in the U. S.

John A. Scollay is erecting complete an iron frame greenhouse 25x175 for Chas. Weber, of Lynbrook, L. I., heating to be with the Scollay boiler.

The long drought has greatly affected the peony crop, both as to quality and quantity, and the end of the cut is rapidly approaching.

At last, after nearly two months of most calamitous drought, the spell is broken and the generous rain is here. The whole east rejoices in the welcome downpour and for nearly forty-eight hours the good work has been going on.

The genial western ventilator man, of Richmond, Ind., J. A. Evans, honored this village with a call last week and is quite enthusiastic as to the Milwaukee convention, predicting the largest attendance on record.

W. E. Marshall, whose debut we announced last week, will not only do a seed business but will deal in nursery stock, bulbs and all kinds of horticultural supplies.

W. C. Krick, of Brooklyn, will spend a well earned holiday with his family in the Catskills early in July, visiting later the convention city with his usual exhibit and some of his late inventions. Mr. Krick is proud of a gold medal and diploma just received from Rome, Italy, and awarded at the exhibition held there in 1902.

P. St. John, assistant superintendent of parks in New York City, who was transferred from Brooklyn in December last, died last week of appendicitis. He was a great favorite with all who knew him, generous and genial, and his loss is regretted by a large circle of friends and horticultural associates.

Siebrecht & Son are cutting some fine cattleyas from their orchid houses in New Rochelle. Their new building, corner of 38th street and Fifth avenue, will soon begin to rise. It will be a "white palace" when completed, six stories in height and 61x125, with window boxes on every side, and bays and immense palms on the roof, making it the most unique and handsome establishment of its kind in the world.

The Rosary, in its new store and conservatory on 34th street, already looks at home and the display inside of topiary novelties and a special importation of bays and Japan horticultural novelties is most interesting. Mr. Troy, the president of the company, leaves for a two months' trip to Europe June 27, visiting England, France, Italy, Holland and Belgium (and Ireland on the side) and combining business with pleasure.

Mr. Ward, of Hagemann & Co., left on Friday last for Europe, his first trip to the land of the valley.

American Gardening, after a six weeks' rest, is again in the field in a new dress and under new control, Leonard Barron retaining his position as editor, a place he has occupied since 1893, and also assuming the management of the paper for the new proprietors, Messrs. Thos. B. Meehan, of Philadelphia; Charles L. Yates, of Rochester;

James McHutchison, of New York City, and D. W. Wittpenn.

June weddings are not as numerous as the retailers could desire and yet there were sixteen of them last Wednesday in and around New York among the "600," which were fairly well apportioned among the leading florists. Mr. McConnell reports three of them and an abundance of steamer work. The bouquets for the Pruyn wedding at Albany, sent by this house, were of white orchids and valley and white peonies. Their decoration for the Miner wedding was very handsome, many arches of sweet peas being the prominent feature of an artistic piece of work, with white peonies on the pews and in the chancel. Mr. McConnell also had the Granger wedding, where Parsons' rhododendrons were much in evidence.

Thomas Young, Jr.'s, Fifth avenue store had charge of the Hazen wedding at Pelham Manor on Tuesday of this week. He has the Fyfe wedding. The bouquets will be lily of the valley and white orchids. July 15 Mr. Young has the contract for the Brownell-Merrill wedding at Hubbardsville, near Syracuse.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

GRAND HAVEN, MICH.

Death of George Hancock.

George Hancock, one of the pioneers of Ottawa county and senior member of the firm of George Hancock & Son, florists, died June 6. Mr. Hancock had been in poor health for the past year, but his indomitable will kept him up and about his duties until two days before his demise, when his condition became serious.

Mr. Hancock was born in Devonshire, England, April 27, 1818. He was married in 1846 to Joan Howard, and Mr. and Mrs. Hancock came to New York in 1849. They came on to Michigan in 1865, settling at Spring Lake, where he became engaged in the lumbering business, operating a mill on the site of the present mineral springs near the Spring Lake Hotel.

He removed to Grand Haven in 1877 and has been a resident of this city ever since. Mr. Hancock always led an active life and was prominent in carrying forward any enterprise that might lead to the improvement of the community. He was one of the first men in Michigan to introduce the cultivation of celery in this state. His first experiments with celery were made as early as 1866. On account of his poor health and the consequent necessity of an outdoor occupation, Mr. Hancock took up the business of raising fruits and vegetables in 1872. Later he added the floral department to his establishment and his success in these lines was remarkable. For years his son, James G. Hancock, has been associated with him under the firm name of George Hancock & Son. The carnation was one of their specialties.

Mrs. Hancock died on January 31, 1894, and Mr. Hancock is survived by his son, James G. Hancock, junior member of the firm; his daughter, Mrs. Frank O. Bury, of Detroit, and seven grandchildren. The funeral was held from the late residence on Washington avenue Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

ANN ARBOR, MICH.—James Goodhue will build a rose house 22x120.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Local demand is very light this week, but the country is buying fairly well. In fact, it would be called a week of good shipping but for the fact that some of the best towns have been cut off by the flood, including Topeka, Kansas City, St. Louis and southwestern points. From Thursday of last week up to Tuesday the express companies refused Kansas City shipments and in several cases goods which had been forwarded were returned two or three days later. St. Louis was accessible only by way of Cairo on Monday and Tuesday and even Nashville was refused on Monday. This has hurt the value of shipping stock to a certain degree.

The peony is pretty nearly the whole thing this week; it is the height of the season. There is a great deal more of this stock in market than ever before, but up to the present very good prices have prevailed, and it looks as though the increased demand for this flower would take up the supplies as well as in former years, unless the quantities going into cold storage should prove unwieldy at the close of the season.

Some good Beauties are offered, also extra Liberty, Chatenay and Meteor, with a few good Kaiserin. Brides and Maids are poor but plentiful. Carnations are nothing to brag about, but there are plenty of them, also valley, gladioli, Harrisii and all the odds and ends.

Various Notes.

A good many carnations have been going to waste this spring, possibly more than ever before. One reason is that the basket men are not on the curb to work off the poor grades; the Greek indoors is as fastidious as anybody in times of plenty. But another reason for the loss of stock can be laid to the growers themselves. Many of them ship only twice a week, which is bad practice at any time and particularly so when stock is plentiful or soft. On a recent afternoon a shipment of 400 Prosperity was noted from a grower who had not been heard from for three days. Had he shipped 100 each day he would have received a good price, but as it was there were so many sleepy flowers that the whole lot was practically valueless. The rule should be to ship every day; the better price for fresh stock will far more than make up for any increased express charges.

Some very good peonies have been coming in from Bryant & Son, of Princeton, Ill. They have a very fine soil, but, like many who do not make cut flowers a large feature of their business, they do not appreciate the care necessary to put the goods on the market in the proper shape, and the wholesaler has to put a good deal of work on the stock to get anything like the right value for the crop.

The Hanna wedding at Cleveland made a call for good stock Monday. Bassett & Washburn shipped Smith & Feters 1,500 white peonies among other items.

Kennicotts have had Canterbury bells this week, but found little call. The peony occupies the center of the stage just now.

Robert Northam, of Weiland & Risch, and Miss Robinson were married on Wednesday evening. They will be in Wisconsin for a month on their wedding trip.

E. C. Amling is getting in Beauties from the young stock of the South Park Floral Co.

John Zeck, of J. A. Budlong's, has been at Peoria this week, attending a convention of Foresters.

W. N. Rudd, at Mt. Greenwood, has planted one house of Ivory chrysanthemums and next week will plant two houses of carnations, one of Phyllis and the other of Lawson and its white sport.

The Florists' Club trustees have rented the hall at 417 Handel Hall. This is the room in which the club met a couple of years ago and was all that was to be had for Wednesday nights.

This is visitors' week at Peterson's Nursery, the peonies being in bloom.

A. Dietsch has returned from his winter in Mexico and the southwest. He is much improved in health.

Sinner Bros. have a field of 30,000 plants of Mrs. Lawson in fine shape.

Wietor Bros. are getting a particularly good cut of Meteor and Kaiserin.

Although there has been a big trade in bedding plants, W. N. Rudd, at Mt. Greenwood, reporting an increase of 25 per cent, many of the growers have considerable stock on hand, particularly geraniums.

Walter Kreitling will move, eventually, because the city has condemned the building in which his store has been located for years.

Chas. Balluff has been doing two weeks on jury and says it will take two weeks more to get rested up.

Visitors: C. O. Williams, Batavia, Ill.; Oscar Soderholm, formerly with A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.

Bowling.

Next Tuesday evening will finish the schedule of thirty games. A meeting will be held after the finish of the games by the ten members qualifying to determine on a final schedule to select the team for Milwaukee. Tuesday's score follows:

Player.	1st.	2d.	3d.
G. Stollery	209	110	171
F. Stollery	178	156	179
C. Pruner	154	124	161
C. Balluff	188	140	223
P. J. Hauswirth	121	172	170
W. Kreitling	114	111	105
E. F. Winterson	178	156	147
Jno. Sterrett	153	111	161
G. Scott	130	185	202

PHILADELPHIA.

Business is much quieter this week than last; in fact, it is a trifle disappointing. The quantity of roses coming into town is enormous. One grower with two 150-foot houses planted with Brides and Maids sent in 1,600 blooms on Monday. Many others cut nearly as well proportionately. Carnations are not so much overdone. There is a fair demand for the good stock, of which there is a moderate supply. The best seen come to Pennock from H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md. Prosperity and Genevieve Lord are superb, giving evidence of the advantages of culture and cool mountain air during the summer months. Sweet peas, outdoor grown, are daily becoming more plentiful. They are in fair demand, as also are valley. Lilies, both Harrisii and candidum of good quality, with long stems, can be had in quantity. Both smilax and asparagus are in demand. Gladioli don't seem to sell. Mignonette is over.

The June meeting of the Florists'

Club, held last week, was well attended and interesting. The paper on pipe read by Walter Whetstone was worthy of a good deal of thought by the growers. A discussion followed. Then matters pertaining to Milwaukee in the future and to Morrisville next week were taken up (I hope you are going on both trips), which was followed by a lively debate. The bowlers, with the handsome trophy won for the second time in the league tournament, feel that now is the time to make the alleys of regulation length. The members generally want to do as the bowlers wish, but thought the change necessary in the club room unwise and voted against it.

Notes.

Wednesday, June 17, 8 a. m., steamer Riverside leaves Chestnut street wharf for Trenton, thence to Morrisville to visit the nursery of Samuel C. Moon.

W. E. McKissick and Miss Bessie Chaundy were married Wednesday evening. Mr. McKissick is well and favorably known as right hand man to Leo Niessen. His friends, and they are many, wish bride and bridegroom health, wealth and happiness.

Robert Craig & Son had the decoration for the wedding of A. J. Cassatt's daughter on Monday. Harrisii lilies, American Beauties and plants were used.

Stephen Mortensen is sending some extra fine tea roses to S. S. Pennock.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons are sending some nice, long-stemmed Harrisii lilies to the Flower Market.

William J. Baker is receiving the first Lilium candidum which I have seen here this season.

The June meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society was held on Monday evening in Association Hall. It was rose night. Some fine displays were made, though the season is far advanced. Joseph Meehan read a good paper on pruning shrubs.

Bowling.

Eighteen players have entered the contest for places on the team of seven—six regulars and one substitute—who will represent this city in the tournament at Milwaukee in August. Twenty-one games will be rolled by each competitor, three each evening for six evenings on neutral alleys and three on the final evening on the home alleys. Wednesday has been selected as play night, although the excursion to Morrisville may make it necessary to choose another evening for next week. The REVIEW is indebted to Captain George M. Moss for the first night's scores. In each game the seven players having the high scores take one point each. The seven players with the largest number of points will form the team. This is believed to be an improvement on last year's method of choosing, as every game counts the same.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The demand for cut flowers during the past week was a great deal better than was expected, and the supply at the wholesale houses was fairly good. The glut has disappeared and the wholesale men claim that very little stock is going to waste at present, and that stock of the first grade is selling out clean, not enough of it coming in for the demand. Some very elaborate decorations for weddings were made by West End florists, which called for a big lot of choice stock. A large amount of smilax was used for these weddings. Most of our florists claim that the month of June will be a good one for business, as school closings are also on for this month, and that a large number of orders have already been booked for these occasions. Funeral work was plentiful the past week, and some very large and elaborate designs were made up. The plant trade, which is now at an end, is reported as the best in years by some, while all say it was up to the average. Stock of all kinds was plentiful, and some have a large number of geraniums left over. The prices, too, were much better than last year.

The past week it rained almost every day, while in the east we read that they are very much in need of rain. But, then, this is always the way in our business; one has too much of a thing and the other has nothing. We have no reports as yet of any damage from the flood around here, and we hope that none will be reported. All trains are late, and the expressmen report this morning (Monday) that the chances are no trains will be in from the east tomorrow, as the tracks on the east side have been washed away. This is a bad state of affairs, for if nothing comes in from the east flowers will be very scarce by the end of this week.

Prices on stock have dropped somewhat since Decoration day, and the supply has been better. Sweet peas are having a great demand. A good many of them come in water soaked from the heavy rains we have had of late. The best bring 50 cents per 100. Long Beauties are having a big call, but the flowers are poor and small and the supply is limited. The shorts seem to have better flowers and the supply is larger. Some of the best Brides and Maids that come in are badly mildewed, owing to the very cool nights. Meteors and Liberties are much better, both in flower and foliage, and are not mildewed. The same can be said of Perles, Gates and Carnots. These were in good supply all of last week, with a big demand, the prices ranging from $3 to $6 per 100. Carnations are small, but the supply is about equal to the demand. White has the call. Very few fancies are in the market. From $1 to $2 is asked for the best common sorts. Callas and Harrisii are about out of the market. So are peonies. Good valley seems scarce. Gladioli are not overplentiful as yet. In greens, smilax is in fine and is quite plentiful, with a good demand. Some new fancy ferns are coming in, and this seems to please the trade very much.

Notes.

Harry Balsley, the pot man from Detroit, is in town. Harry has many friends here who are always glad to see him.

Quite a few of our nurserymen will leave to-morrow (Tuesday) for Detroit to attend the convention of the American Association of Nurserymen.

Park Commissioner Aull has not yet appointed the new superintendent. Mr. Aull says that the appointment will be made just as soon as Mayor Wells returns from the east.

The first Sunday opening of Shaw's Garden this year attracted a record-breaking crowd, thousands coming and going all day long. Prof. Trelease and his large staff of assistants were in their glory, and many questions had to be answered by them. The garden is in tiptop shape and many new collections have been added since the last Sunday opening. The orchid house, which is under the care of young Mr. McClure, late of Buffalo, is in fine condition.

Bowling.

The bowling club on last Monday night rolled four games with a large attendance, twelve being present, with a visitor, Harry Balsley, who refused to roll. The rolling was a great improvement over last Monday. The scores were as follows:

Player.	1st.	2d.	3d.	4th.	T'l.
J. J. Beneke	213	165	193	159	730
Carl Beyer	188	166	146	...	500
F. C. Weber	150	164	170	...	484
C. A. Kuehn	136	173	139	149	607
Will Adels	167	155	132	103	557
John Young	112	115	140	149	516
Frank Ellis	135	154	76	138	513

Theo. Miller	120	111	143	...	374
Louie	123	104	227
C. C. Sanders	109	109

The bowling will be continued every Monday night, so as to get a line on the boys to make up a team for Milwaukee.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The past week reminded us somewhat of the good old winter time, as there was a general rush to secure stock. Everything was in demand and buyers did not stop to discuss the price. This was caused mostly by the numerous school commencements. In the end there was plenty of stock to go around, as large quantities were shipped in from out of town. At present the demand has quieted somewhat, but the coming week is expected to bring good trade, as there are many wedding decorations. Shipping trade is very good, as most small florists are out of cut stock.

Roses are about equal to the demand. American Beauties are somewhat improved in quality, the color being very good. The majority of Brides and Maids are of poor quality. The cool weather of the past few weeks helped them somewhat, but they cannot last much longer. Meteor and Liberty still continue scarce. Franz Deegen is in fine form.

Carnations, with some growers, are holding out nicely. The general supply is about equal to the demand. The heavy rains made havoc with outdoor sweet peas and indoor ones are about over. Some good corn flowers are in and sell fairly well. A double variety of this flower is very pretty and sells quickly. There are plenty of greens.

Various Notes.

Saturday evening, June 13, is the annual meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, when the election of a board of directors will be held. It is hoped that a large number of members will be present. The two flower shows that will be given in this city during the fall festival in September will be held under the direction of this society. There is $1,000 offered for prizes and competition is open to all. The question of an outing will also be brought up. The outings of the past couple of years have not been very successful, and suggestions are in order. A trip to the Soldiers' Home at Dayton has been spoken of and there seems to be a popular desire to go there.

F. W. Ball spent a day in Chicago last week buying stock.

Ed Murphy was the host of a large gathering of his relatives and friends at his home during the past week. It was a jolly crowd.

F. W. Hardesty is spending the summer among the green hills of Kentucky; that is, in the Highlands. He has turned into a first-class farmer and can talk potatoes, beans, tomatoes, etc., with the best of them.

Albert Grey was on the sick list during the past week.

Rodger Peterson is home after a long stay in Philadelphia. He is contemplating a trip to Europe to put the finishing touches on his floral education.

C. P. Dieterich, of Maysville, Ky., was a recent caller.

C. J. OHMER.

DETROIT.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the club on Wednesday last it was practically decided to go to Milwaukee in August via the Grand Trunk to Grand Haven and across Lake Michigan by boat, and it was voted to invite all brethren of the craft to journey with us and enjoy the night's rest on the boat. Those from Buffalo and vicinity can come by boat on Sunday evening and spend Monday in Detroit, and those from Cleveland can come either by boat Sunday night or day boat on Monday and join us, leaving by train at 5 p. m. on the Grand Trunk, and we shall be pleased to have our Canadian brethren also. The railroad people promise to furnish special cars, etc., for us, and a merry time can be had from 5 p. m. until 11, at which time we leave Grand Haven by boat. The fare also is less by this route, being only $9.60 for the round trip from Detroit, including berths on the steamer, as against $15 on all-rail routes, including berths (fare figured at the reduced rates). The D. & B. and D. & C. boat lines will sell tickets to Milwaukee via Grand Trunk from here, thus making a very cheap rate for all. I shall be pleased to reserve berths on steamer and make all arrangements here as to special cars, etc., if notified of the number who wish to come and join us, and we hope that many will.

Notes.

We had on Saturday the heaviest rainfall that has occurred since 1870, there having been no less than 3.02 inches fall in three hours, or over one and one-half gallons to the square foot of surface.

Every one has pretty well sold out of all kinds of bedding stock and is feeling cheerful and happy.

If I have not made my information plain as to the convention route, will Brother Scott please call me again?

A BARGAIN. Big Greenhouse Plant

Owing to other large business interests Brant & Noe, Forest Glen, Chicago, offer their large Greenhouse establishment for sale. Have 12½ acres of land with a quarter mile frontage on West Peterson Avenue. Greenhouses cover three acres, part of them iron frame, built during last three years; hot water is the general system of heating, with steam in every house; reserve boilers in each of the three adjoining ranges. One large steam-heated residence, two dwellings, big barn, stables, wagon house, ice house, two storage buildings, nearly 300 feet of sheds, 20 to 30 feet wide. Local sewer to north branch of Chicago river, upon the bank of which the property is beautifully located. Between two lines of railways, the depot of one on our street, the other station near; electric cars in vicinity. Plenty of sod on this land; piles of sod and manure put up last year, sufficient to fill houses. Fine stock of young roses and carnations for replanting houses now under way. The plant is fully equipped. The improvements have cost over sixty thousand dollars ($60,000.00). Beginning within 300 feet of this property, 140 lots have been sold at $225.00 to $400 per lot. This land will cut into 125 lots and always increase in value. Title is guaranteed by Chicago Title and Trust Co. The investment is both safe and inviting for the land stripped of all its valuable improvements will soon be worth what the whole can now be bought for. Will sell at a big bargain and make terms easy. Might consider a partner, if right one. Good and sufficient reasons for selling.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Walter P. Stokes, Philadelphia; First Vice-Pres., Chas. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y and Treas., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn. The twenty-first annual convention will be held at Philadelphia and Atlantic City, June 23, 24 and 25, 1903.

W. W. BARNARD is on his farm at Le-Roy, Ind.

The demand for tuberosc bulbs has been rather light this season and dealers are in no hurry to place contracts for 1903 crop.

THE railroads make a special rate of one and one-third fare for the round trip to the seed trade convention at Atlantic City.

CALIFORNIA reports promise a full crop of the yellow varieties of onion seed, with white up to the average and red somewhat short.

VISITED CHICAGO.—John T. Buckbee and R. H. Shumway, of Rockford, Ill.; James B. Kidd, representing the Cox Seed Co., San Francisco.

MODERATE rain has helped the cabbage seed crops on Long Island, but it came too late to repair the serious results of the extended drought.

H. B. BEATTY, traveler for W. W. Barnard & Co., has quit the seed business and has taken a position with Spink's Shoe Co., as head salesman.

JOHN ELDERING, formerly partner of Eldering Brothers and of late years connected with different bulb houses in New York, died May 27, in Newport, R. I., aged 40 years.

BEAN planting in the Michigan districts is well under way, two-thirds of the total acreage being already sown. The weather and soil conditions are very favorable for a good start.

W. W. Rawson & Co., Boston, report as follows: "It has been a most satisfactory season to us. Although prices have been extremely high, we have experienced no difficulty on that account."

THE damage to the onion set fields in the flooded district is more serious than was at first anticipated. The difficulty has been to get on the ground in time to do anything toward saving the crop.

THE latest report from the California bean growing district mentions some of the pole varieties as having rotted in the ground. Previous reports gave very good accounts of all beans in the coast district.

THE summer wholesale lists of the seedsmen so far received show that prosperity may strike the seed trade. The majority will agree that the inclination to advance wholesale prices is quite proper.

CLEVELAND, O.—The firm of A. C. Kendel has just purchased the site which it has occupied for fifty-one years, originally by John Stair, then by his son, B. H. Stair, and finally by the late A. C. Kendel, who came here as a small boy shortly after the business was first moved to this spot, and whose sons have for the past ten or twelve years conducted the business.

Burpee's Seeds Grow

Mention the Review when you write.

SEED exports for the nine months prior to April 1 amounted to 15,276,000 pounds of clover seed, 16,105,000 pounds of timothy seed, 3,866,000 bushels of flaxseed and other grass seed valued at $565,000.

H. F. HENRY sails for Bermuda in a few days. He estimates the Harrisii crop as 20 per cent under last year. Mr. Stumpp, of Stumpp & Walter Co., sails for Bermuda June 20, accompanied by his wife and son.

THERE is a great lack of practical seedsmen. Some of the large employers of labor in this line say that the young men graduating from the several agricultural colleges become good seedsmen in a shorter time than those taking up the work with any other training.

THE Leonard Seed Company, Chicago, is getting its trial ground in shape. It is expected that several thousand different tests of garden vegetables will show up in it. The aim is to make it as complete a test ground for vegetable varieties as is possible.

REMITTANCES from the June 1st statements of the wholesale seedsmen are coming in full and strong. There seems to be a healthy tone to all letters accompanying same. This speaks well for the 1903 campaign of the traveling seed sellers; they are a cheerful lot and deserve all the orders they get.

SEED TESTING AT ST. LOUIS.

One of the interesting seed exhibits at the St. Louis World's Fair is to be a five-acre tract given over to grass, the purpose being to demonstrate the character and utility of the many lawn mixtures, ornamental and economic grasses. The seed production section will occupy a large area. Here the seeds grown in all parts of the world are to be tested side by side by officials of the Department of Agriculture. As an example, seed wheat grown in Washington, the Dakotas, Maine, Florida, and in Europe, Asia and Africa, are planted in adjoining sections. Other experiments with all the other important agricultural products are similarly to be made. Another section west of that devoted to seed production is one equally important and interesting, illustrating the fibre plants, their growth and the best approved methods of handling.

ONE thing in favor of the REVIEW is that it is not run in the interest of any one florist.—F. W. HECKENKAMP, JR., Quincy, Ill.

BOSTON.

There is nothing of unusual interest in the market at present, but it is strange, in view of the great production during the past month, the plants do not at length become exhausted and suddenly cease blooming. This is the way my memory tells me the case has formerly been, but now the supply seems to keep up as if unlimited, especially so far as roses and carnations go. But the greater portion of them are small in size and of inferior color, so that returns average very low. Another feature is that the very dry weather has hurried up the outdoor Jacques, as well as everything else; they are not only unusually early but very poor in quality. Peonies, rooting deeply, have withstood the drought in better shape, and are quite good.

Next week will be no better. The crowd will be drinking pink lemonade and eating peanuts at Barnum's, and they don't use bouquets at the circus.

S. J. MANTER.

TORONTO.

Trade during the last couple of weeks has kept up equal to, if not ahead of, other years, while some of our best retail stores far exceed last year's business, on account of the big call for flowers during the stay of the governor general and the special interest taken in our races by society, on account of the vice regal party attending. June weddings are in full swing and we notice a strong demand for good Brides and Maids, which have kept decidedly good thus far this season. Carnations have been overplentiful, especially the cheaper qualities, and we notice them being advertised by our department stores down as low as 9 cents a dozen, retail.

In his trip around during the week, your correspondent noticed some orchids grown by W. Hill, of Yonge street, who is a special orchid fancier, and who is gradually working up a fine collection. An Oncidium incurvum in bloom with two sprays, each measuring over six feet in length, was certainly a fine sight. We also noticed some Oncidium Harrisonianum and Lælia tenebrosa in bloom, which were fine.

C. Turp, of Bloor street, who is increasing his greenhouses this year to a considerable extent, has two houses of carnations which are in fine condition now. As Mr. Turp has always grown good carnations, it will add considerably to the supply of the commission house, where he has been sending his stock for the last year or more.

We take especial pleasure in inviting all the "Old Boys" back to Toronto, for the great home coming July 1, 2, 3 and 4. Come and bring your friends. S.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The Florists' Club held a well attended meeting June 2, it being the last indoor meeting until fall. There were a number of invited guests present, and a most enjoyable evening was spent. After business a social session followed. Refreshments were served and R. S. McGee and R. Simonds gave a number of comic recitations which were much enjoyed. It was voted to suspend regular meetings for the next three months and during this time meetings will be held at the call of the president. Arrangements are under way whereby a joint outing of the Hartford Florists' Club, the New Haven Horticultural Society, the New London Florists' Club and the Bridgeport Florists' Club will be held in the near future. J. F. Huss made an exhibit of flowers of a large number of perennials and gave a very interesting talk on them. Robert Karlstrom, gardener at Elizabeth Park, brought in ten varieties of rhododendrons, also fourteen varieties of azaleas and a very striking and beautiful poppy. Certificates of merit were awarded to Elizabeth Park nurseries and to Mr. Huss for their exhibits. The judges for the evening were G. A. Parker, W. W. Hunt and H. J. Koehler.

H. J. Koehler, forester at Keney Park, and one of the charter members of the club, is soon to leave the city, and this announcement was listened to with much regret. Resolutions were unanimously voted making him an honorary member of the club.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Business continues fairly brisk, with commencements and weddings calling for considerable stock, but all prices have dropped since last report. The best tea roses can be had for 3 cents, and carnations for 1 cent. The qualities hold up very well for so late in the season. Beauties are rather plentiful and sell at from $1 to $2 a dozen.

There was a large attendance at our monthly club meeting on June 3. Peter Bissett exhibited some very fine hybrid roses. At our next meeting Mr. Bissett will present a paper entitled "The Most Profitable Outdoor Flowers."

The tendency of values was downward all through the week, until on Saturday the lowest prices of the year prevailed. It was all supply and no demand, until the accumulation had to be sold in bulk to get rid of it at all. "Slaughter" expresses the condition of things better than "sacrifice." Everything is plentiful and business already languishes under the early influence of mid-summer dullness. The only shortage seems to be in the crop of June brides.

We are having copious rains and fine but not too warm summer weather, and as a consequence cut flowers are very abundant. This week began with trade rather lagging, but last week showed great activity and pretty much all offerings were promptly absorbed at fair prices. Weddings and commencements continue and orders booked give assurance of a steady demand during all of June.

AUBURN, IND.—A. F. Fleming is not only doing a good business in cut flowers and bedding stock, but also in sweet potato plants.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.

This city is now a bower of roses, the spring season of bloom being at its height.

W. E. King recently had an order for 2,000 feet of Asparagus plumosus to be used in a decoration at one of the hotels.

Thos. Thompson's carnations are a credit to that gentleman's ability as a grower. They rank with the best anywhere. He supplied several very attractive floral arrangements for Memorial day, cyclamen flowers being very effectually used in addition to carnations, roses, tuberose and adiantum.

E. Leedham has several acres of dahlias that promise to be very interesting this summer. Flower buds are already showing on some of the plants. His cut of daffodils was large this spring and will be still larger another season. His paper-roofed house has been very helpful in bringing in some of his bulbous flowers early and in lengthening their stems.

Geo. Butler & Son are preparing to devote their glass entirely to cut flowers and will make carnations a specialty.

Dr. Parker has some gloxinias that are remarkably well furnished with foliage. Each pot is placed in a saucer and they are watered from the bottom only. G.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Business since Easter has kept up fairly well, funeral work making up the greater bulk of the amount done. The weather since Easter has been almost entirely without rain and there has not been any outdoor stock to amount to much and most of the indoor stock is very small and pinched.

Decoration day brought plenty of business and plenty of stock. There were pinks from all quarters, good, bad and worse, with Christmas prices asked, but not always paid. The average price was 3 cents. Roses were of all grades and prices. Some lilies brought 6 to 8 cents. It's too bad the poor florists have to work so long and hard for so little at this time. The public wants something large and showy for very small amount and after making 150 per cent at Easter it's hard to come down to 50 per cent or less at Decoration time and have to handle about the same amount of stock.

Metal goods did not go as well as some seasons.

Next rush will be school work, and then away on our vacation. R. I.

THE MANUFACTURE OF PIPE.

BY WALTER WHETSTONE.

Read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia June 2, 1903:

The subject of pipe is a very exhaustive one, and I doubt whether I can cover the subject except in a very superficial manner, owing to the fact that the time is limited. Without referring to the good pipe of twenty-five years ago, I will, in brief, sketch out the process of manufacture of the two kinds of pipe made today, namely, iron and steel, and will attempt to show you that one is superior to the other; in other words, that iron is preferable to steel in the majority of its uses.

Considering the primordial cause of pipe, we will take the ore, which is principally Lake Superior ore or Cuban ore, both of which are high grade materials. This is put into a furnace and melted and poured into pigs and called pig iron. These pigs are then put into a puddling furnace, which is a small pan-shaped affair, over which heat is played, and puddled entirely by hand into what we term "muck bar." The reason for puddling the pig iron is to rid it of its hardness by extracting the carbon from the iron and is performed by hand labor, simply stirring the molten metal with a long poker, so that the oxygen of the air comes in contact with every particle of the boiling mass and extracts the carbon, forming a carbon dioxide.

When this is done there is produced a more ductile substance called wrought iron. It is a rough looking material, yet is very much refined and is produced in slabs about six inches wide by three-fourths of an inch thick, but varying in length. These slabs are piled one on top of the other and fastened together with a wire and are called billets. These are put into a furnace again to be heated, preparatory to putting them through the sheet rolls. When they are heated to the proper welding point, they are put through rolls and made into sheets, and these sheets rolled to the exact width and thickness to correspond to the different sizes of pipe that the sheet is to be used in making.

Right here comes up a point as to distinguishing iron pipe from steel. It has been claimed by some that when pipe contains a blister or seems to be made of successive rolls of iron that the pipe, because it is hard is necessarily steel. The matter of pipe peeling off in layers is a conclusive test that the same is wrought iron, but the cause of it would be that some air has gotten between two successive layers, which has not permitted the iron to weld at this point. From this point on iron and steel pipe go through the same stages before the finished product is produced, so we will consider now the manufacture of steel pipe up to this point.

By the Bessemer process the pig, together with any steel scrap that the manufacturer may have, regardless of its quality, is put into the Bessemer furnace and reduced to a molten mass. In the bottom of this furnace there are a number of small holes through which a blast of air is introduced for the purpose of ridding the entire mass of its carbonaceous properties. If the blast of air performed its function as well as the puddler we would have no cause for complaint against steel pipe, but the difficulty is that the air cannot touch every particle of the molten mass. We, therefore, when this mass is run into ingots, as we term it, rather than "muck bar," find that the ingots contain too much carbon, and this ingot is really a low grade of steel, containing probably from 1 to 2 per cent carbon.

A high grade steel contains about 4 per cent of carbon, and when the steel contains this amount of carbon it will not weld. You will therefore see that a perfect weld can be made with a substance containing no carbon and that the degree of welding is dependent entirely upon the amount of carbon the iron contains, so that with no carbon we have a perfect weld and that anywhere from this point to 4 per cent carbon we have an indifferent weld. This is the fault found with most grades of steel pipe, not that it will refuse to stand the pressure exerted against it, but that so frequently the slightest work attempted on the pipe opens it up in its seams. To finish with the manufacture of steel pipe, this ingot is welded again and put through the rolls and made into sheets the same as in wrought iron.

I might say here that the process of puddling by hand to make wrought iron has never been improved upon; that is, no mechanical means has yet been invented to do the work of stirring that hand labor is now employed in doing. A great many inventors have tried to solve this problem, and the latest report that we have on the solution is that a man is constructing a plant now in Pottstown to experiment with mechanical puddling devices and we trust that he in a short time will have solved the problem, because iron pipe is not destined to last in this market very much longer, as most buyers today are looking for a cheap article, and price, rather than quality, is the thing that counts with the buyer. Just the other day I had a talk with a large manufacturer of wrought iron pipe with whom I have very close connection, and he told me that if they had to sell iron pipe for the price that steel pipe is quoted today they would have to go out of business inside of six months. It seems very strange at the same time that there are not more people willing to pay for a superior article of this kind, inasmuch as the best wrought iron pipe only costs 10 per cent more than what is termed a good steel pipe.

It has been said that iron pipe, to conform anywhere near to the price of steel pipe, is diluted with scrap iron. I do not know how all manufacturers make iron pipe, but I do know from personal observation that there is a mill with the product of which I am very closely identified that uses nothing but Cuban ore in the manufacture of its pipe. The only scrap used is wrought iron scrap that they make themselves by cutting off the ragged edge of a piece of pipe preparatory to its going to the machine for threading, and this entire amount of scrap amounts only to between 3 and 7 per cent of the output.

I have never had a close intimacy with a manufacturer of steel pipe, so do not claim that they use scrap, but if they used a high grade ore I would still contend, and rightfully so, that their finished product would not be as good as the iron product on account of the amount of carbon it must contain.

The finishing process of iron and steel pipe is exactly the same. The skelp, or sheet, is piled into the furnace until it reaches a certain temperature, when it is drawn out and put through scarfing rolls. This is for the purpose of flattening the edges so that when they lap over in the rolls there will be more bearing surface for the lap weld. The scarfing rolls are nothing more than two concave solid wheels working in conjunction with each other, through which the sheet passes and, only having a bearing on the outer edges, flattening the same on one side. This furnace would be termed a welding furnace and is used to manufacture pipe from 2-inch up. Smaller pipe than 2-inch is manufactured in the same way, but is put through what is termed a bell furnace. In other words, the pipe is drawn through a bell-shaped affair, and the weld, instead of being made by one side lapping over the other, is made by contact of the two edges. This is called butt weld. Here is where the steel manufacturers find their greatest difficulty, as it is difficult to get steel pipe to weld only by contact. Pipe, after it leaves the scarfing rolls, is again heated to a welding point and is then drawn through the rolls, between which is put and held in place a conical ball over which the pipe passes, and the pressure exerted on the rolls presses the edges of the pipe together, forming a tight lap weld. This, then, is marketable pipe, except that it has rough edges in it which have to be cut off and the length threaded, socketed, marked and shipped.

This covers the manufacture of pipe as it is done today, and now to refer to its uses and the life of the two kinds, I can only say this, that those people who have had experience with both kinds of pipe, both as regards the life of it and the ease in working it, prefer iron. Why is it that the manufacturers of boilers, in nearly every case, specify that the tubes in the boilers shall be charcoal iron and not steel? It is for this reason: They know that while the steel tubes will stand the same pressure, yet for some reason that has not been discovered a chemical action takes place on the steel tube that pits the tube full of pin holes, and this is done long before wrought iron tubes are worn out.

It has often been proven that steel pipe only lasts three-quarters as long as iron pipe in oil well work, but the reason that a great deal of steel pipe is used in the oil fields is that so much of the oil field work is prospecting and until a man strikes oil he is not willing to pipe the well with the material that will last longest.

THE LARGEST MAP.

Growing on six acres of a gentle southern slope of Tesson Hill at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, St. Louis, is to be the largest geographically correct map ever constructed. The map is 480 feet long from east to west and extends from north to south 240 feet. The map is to be the main feature of the large open air exhibit by the Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture, and is personally superintended by D. A. Brodie. The idea is to show the United States, with growing crops planted as per the natural distribution.

The several acres were fenced off early in April, and the entire tract was richly fertilized. The ground was plowed and harrowed, the soil pulverized, and the entire tract sowed to cow peas. This crop not only enriches the soil, but prevents the growth of weeds. When an exhibit is ready to be installed the gardeners simply pull up the cow peas covering the space required, for the ground then requires but little work.

A belt of blue grass lawn 20 feet wide establishes the boundary and coast lines of this gigantic map. The boundary lines between the states are marked by cinder paths three feet wide. That part comprising the fourteen states and territories of the Louisiana Purchase is marked by a white gravel walk. Not only will the products of each state be shown on this map by growing crops, but the section of the state on which each commodity is most grown will be shown.

WOODSTOCK, ONT.—A. H. Ewing reports a lively interest in the Canadian Horticultural Association, which holds its sixth convention at Toronto September 2 and 3.

MIDDLETOWN, O.—Henry Behrens has his stock in good shape in his recently remodeled greenhouse.

DES MOINES, IOWA.—The articles of incorporation of the New Iowa Bird Company declare its objects to be to buy and sell seeds, floral stock, cut flowers, birds, aquarium supplies, etc. The incorporators are P. W. Madden, G. E. Madden and T. G. Rickman.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—The World's Fair rose garden has now been increased to six acres. The site has proven all that was expected and the plants are making splendid progress.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.—Reports as to the season's work of Queen Louise carnation seem to have justified J. L. Dillon's faith in it.

OTTUMWA, IA.—C. Kranz reports the spring trade seriously interfered with by the continuous wet weather.

BIG RAPIDS, MICH.—C. M. Buskirk is building two greenhouses 18x100 for roses and carnations.

THE AMERICAN CARNATION

HOW TO GROW IT.
FULLY ILLUSTRATED.

By C. W. WARD.

A PRACTICAL work on Carnation growing: complete in every particular, including the full calendar of operations for the year, with chapters on Soils, Fertilizers, Insects, Diseases, Heating. Each and every phase of commercial Carnation culture treated clearly and comprehensively. The book contains 290 large pages, finely printed. It should be in the hands of every grower.

Sent carriage paid on receipt of $3.50.

Florists' Publishing Company,
Caxton Bldg., Chicago.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL by WILLIAM SCOTT

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid.

Florists' Publishing Co., CAXTON BUILDING, Chicago.

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., Chas. A. Degenfritz, Monroe, Mich.; Vice-Pres., D. S. Lake, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-seventh annual convention will be held at Detroit June 10, 11 and 12, 1903.

PETERSON'S, Chicago, report the past season as showing a good gain over last year.

SPRING VALLEY, MINN.—G. A. B. Howell is now sole owner of the Spring Valley Nursery.

At the Iowa Agricultural College, at Ames, a series of experiments is being conducted to determine the value of evergreens as shelter belts for orchards, etc.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The Graham Nursery Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000. The directors are E. O. Graham, Cora M. Graham and J. M. Campbell.

GEORGE C. ROEDING, of Fresno, has been asked by the state commissioners to take the management of the horticultural exhibit of California at the St. Louis World's Fair.

CHARLESTON, W. VA.—The J. M. Neil Co. has been incorporated to succeed The Nursery & Seed Co. The capital is $10,000 and the company will deal in seeds, nursery stock, implements, etc. J. M. Neil is secretary and treasurer.

THE twenty-seventh annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen was opened yesterday with a very satisfactory attendance. There is an interesting program but it is the business transacted between the members which makes the success of the meeting.

NURSERY stock can now be sold in the state of Washington only after an annual license has been secured (dating from April 1) and bonds of $2,000 are filed with the state horticultural commissioner, by principals. Dealers are required to pay a fee of $5 for license and their agents $2.50 each for permits to do business.

STROUDSBURG, PA.—A new industry has sprung up in Monroe county owing to the great demand for rhododendrons. William Elwine, Young Price and James E. Gravel are all working on contracts getting rhododendrons for shipment to Boston and other points. Over 100 carloads have been shipped from Cresco station during the last year. Thirteen carloads were shipped from Milanville.

CLEVELAND.

New Stores.

Cleveland, as a flower market, is growing very fast, and in order to supply the increased demand several new retail stores have been opened in the past few weeks. Mr. Harrison, formerly with the J. M. Gasser Co., has opened an up-to-date store on Pearl street, near Franklin. This location is one of the busiest on the west side. A few blocks further south, at 621 Pearl street, E. A. Wilhelm has established a fine trade. At 716 Lorain street the Ehrbar Floral Co. has been located for some time and is doing a good steady trade, with about all the design work they can possibly handle at present. A short distance further west on the same street C. J. Hippler has opened a new store and reports that trade has been far beyond his expectations.

Various Notes.

In the East End A. Graham & Sons are very busy with plant trade and bedding. They have the cream of the trade in that section of the city. The F. R. Williams Co. has just finished planting a house 35x150 to roses. They are making a specialty of roses and maiden hair ferns, having 12 large houses devoted to Maids, Brides and Meteors, and two houses to adiantums for cut fronds. The foreman, Mr. Brown, has every reason to be satisfied with the condition of the place. The cut is all sold at wholesale from their store at 224 Huron street, where they do a general wholesale and commission business.

At the corner of St. Clair and Eddy Road J. W. Wilson has a fine place devoted to carnations. Mr. Wilson makes a specialty of this flower and has had very good success with it, sending in the finest blooms seen in the Cleveland market. His young plants in the field are as good as anyone could ask for.

On the same road are located the Kunze Bros., who grow a great many geraniums and bedding plants and who have a good trade established. Near them is Fred Ponting, who grows about 20,000 geraniums each year.

A. Schmidt, of Burton avenue, Glenville, seems to be very unlucky with his horses, having one of them run away the first part of the week, smashing the wagon. One of his other horses is very sick. Only a short time ago he lost one, which slipped on the pavement. Mr. Schmidt drives none but the best horses, consequently the loss is heavy.

Speaking of horses reminds us that Geo. Smith, of Wade Park avenue, has just purchased a fast one. He says it can beat a 2:20 clip. This is the gentleman who grows the seedling carnation, Magdaline, a very beautiful flower, and evidently a money maker.

H. R. Carleton, of Willoughby, Ohio, had a severe loss by hail on the night of May 24, nearly $800 on glass alone, not to mention the damage to the plants, of which he had a large stock ready for Decoration day.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

We are surrounded today by smoke from the forest fires in the vicinity. We are not having as bad fires as they are having in Maine, but there are hundreds of acres of pine forests burning and the air is full of smoke. We have had a two months' drought, broken only by a little rain in the small hours of the early morning of May 30, when the tired florists were busy putting up their orders for early delivery. It did not wet the ground more than a quarter of an inch. If we do not get rain pretty soon all plants in the field, and all crops, will be ruined.

Memorial day was a record breaker for the store men, partly because there was so little outdoor stock available, which was quite a loss to some of the growers. All cut flowers were sold out, about the only outdoor bloom available being snowballs, and many of these had gone by. Plant trade was immense, particularly on geraniums. There was also a large sale on metallic designs.

R. E. Nofftz is planning a trip to Europe on Memorial day profits, and expects to sail the first week in July.

W. G. Kraber will leave us the last of June to start in a new field.

H. V. Sowle has opened a store in the North End.

KANSAS CITY.

Notes.

This city has just had a most disastrous flood, all our small towns close around suffering alike. It rained here for forty-eight hours steadily. The water was fifteen feet over low water mark. There were 15,000 people out of homes, some of them being left with just the clothes on their backs. Our east and west bottoms were all under water. That is where all our factories and wholesale implement houses and our old Union Station are. The water was nine feet all around it. Our stock yards were a sea of water. All our bridges on the Kansas side were gone, eight in all. Our city was out of city water for forty-eight hours, and then such water! You have to boil it and strain it before you can use it.

The only florist who was flooded was D. Freudenthal, on Union avenue, opposite the Union Station. His place was water to the ceiling and he is on the ground floor. Everything was a loss.

There was no flower business done. Nobody in town wanted any flowers and we could not ship any out of town, as there was water all around us. But everything is coming around in good shape now. Some of the florists did a little business at the tail end of the week.

Visitors during the flood were Mrs. Burns, of Leavenworth, Kans., and George M. Kellogg and "Billy" Bastin, of Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Quick Profits! Low Prices!

THE ANNA FOSTER FERN

This Fern is fast growing in popularity. There is no fern grown which will return profits so quickly. Being a female frond Plant it reproduces faster than any Nephrolepis yet introduced. The price is so low the buyer is sure of large profits. The $20 per 100 plants will make $1 and $2 plants by Fall. This Fern once seen sure to sell. I am now ready with as fine a lot of plants as was ever offered. 3-inch pot grown, $20 per 100. Plants from bench for 5-inch, $6 per doz.; for 6-inch, $9 per doz. Plants in pots, 6-inch, $12 per doz.; 7-inch, $24 per doz.; 8-in., $36 per doz.; 9-inch, $4 each; 10-inch, $5 each. These are beautiful plants for immediate sales. The call for large plants in New York, Chicago and other cities has been such I have been unable to fill my orders since January 1st until this month. These plants are grand for summer decoration.

BOSTON FERNS Also now ready 20,000 Boston Ferns at $25 per 100, cut from bench. I hope to have 100,000 Small Boston for summer delivery at $5 per 100; $40 per 1000. Book your orders early. Bostons will be in great demand next season. Pot plants now ready, 6-inch, $6 per doz.; 7-in., $9 per doz.; 8-in., $15 per doz.; 9-inch, $24 per doz.; larger plants, 10-inch and 12-inch on application. Also 10,000 Kentia Palms. 10,000 Alternanthera, 2 1/2-inch, good, $25 per 1000.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Decoration day business was good, although I do not think it was any better than that of last year. Flowers were very plentiful, very cheap and of good quality throughout. Shipping business was better than last season. I refer to the sending of flowers to the interior of the state and also to Oregon, Nevada, Utah and Arizona. We have about a dozen florists in town who seem to handle most of the out-of-town orders and they had about all they could do. The weather was all that could be desired.

Roses are a glut at present, but the quality, owing to the few weeks of warm weather we have had, is nothing extra and poor color and poorer stems are the rule. Bridesmaids and Brides are offered in large quantities at almost any price. Carnations are also nothing to brag of, but a few good fancies are exhibited in some of the windows. Sweet peas are good and cheap; the price averages 50 cents per dozen bunches, wholesale. Other outdoor stuff has very little value.

The Bride gladiolus was a good seller and brought $1.50 per hundred spikes. Calla lilies have been in some demand and sold at $1 per hundred blooms.

Notes.

Thos. H. Stevenson reports a splendid trade in his new store in the Palace Hotel. Mr. Stevenson keeps a good supply of the best flowers on hand and his business is steadily growing in the right direction.

F. Ludemann has taken his son, Fred, Jr., into his office as a bookkeeper. This position was occupied for several years by his daughter, recently married.

Wm. Kohler has assumed entire control of the greenhouses formerly owned by Chas. Haselbacher, at Oakland, and lately managed by his widow.

A visit to the nurseries of Chas. Abraham, on Greenwich street, shows everything in good shape and plenty of propagating being attended to preparatory to another season's business.

E. Grotting has taken charge of the grounds of the Sacred Heart Convent on Webster street, Oakland. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

We were recently honored with a visit from the nation's chief executive, and we gave him a genuine northwestern reception. We gave him a regular Oregon baptismal, for it rained a hundred and one times in as many minutes. We fed him on Columbia River salmon and Oregon strawberries, a diet, as the President expressed it, well adapted to those leading a "strenuous life." The veteran Pfunder decorated the President's carriage, and Martin & Forbes, who have the Portland Hotel trade, did the decoration for the banquet tendered by the leading citizens. While in Portland the President laid the corner stone of the monument dedicating the Lewis and Clark Fair.

That the people of the northwest are not lacking in patriotism was fully demonstrated by the liberal way in which flowers were used on Memorial day. In our temperate climate there is usually an abundance of good outdoor material at this season, but this year most of the early stock was gone or spoiled by the heavy rains, thus giving the florists an advantage. We had an immense call, both for cut flowers and design work. Roses and carnations were on in full crop and prices advanced 25 per cent. Some good peonies were to be had and retailed at $2 per dozen. The white pond lily, grown only in limited quantities here, sold readily at $1.50 per dozen. The first sweet peas made their appearance on the 29th and commanded immediate recognition. There was also a good demand from the rural districts, and, as a large percentage of our population is from the middle west, flowers were shipped to points as far distant as Minnesota, Nebraska and Iowa.

Every one reports a general clearing up of bedding plants. This branch of the business shows a most satisfactory increase every year. Clarke Bros. are the leaders in this line, and a neat little plant catalogue, issued annually and circulated through Oregon, Washington and Idaho, has proved so valuable an advertisement that it takes the capacity of a big range of houses to supply the demand.

We were pleased to have a call from and to compare notes with Frank Milang, of New York City, who was recently touring the northwest.

MONTREAL.

Considering the busy season, the last club meeting was well attended. The executive committee's report was presented by W. Horobin, the secretary. It was decided to go to St. Rose for the annual picnic and make it "the best ever." G. Vreugde, of Lachine, read an essay on grafting and budding, illustrated by specimens. Upon request of the club Mr. Gibb, of the Civic Garden, consented to prepare a paper to be read before the C. H. A. at the annual convention. A. Wilshire was elected to the executive committee.

Trade is keeping "so so," with an oversupply of roses and carnations. Bedding plants are moving fast, but coleus and tender stuff is scarce, owing to the late frost. After two months of drought it is useless to speak of outdoor flowers. The young carnations are planted, but in some places only after the fields had been watered for days. Nothing grows.

C. Gorman is building a new house for mums and P. McKenna & Son one for miscellaneous plants.

W. Alcock is convalescing after an operation in the hospital.

A BEE.

ORANGE, N. J.

The monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held June 3. The display of flowers, fruits and vegetables filled the entire center of the room. Peter Duff's collection of vegetables and an adiantum grown by D. Kindsgrab received the maximum number of points. The names of the donors of the four silver cups were made public for the first time and were Sydney Colgate, John Crosby Brown, O. D. Munna, J. Van Gasbeck and W. Jenkins, all of Orange. A paper read by Andrew Grierson, gardener for Mrs. Hicks Arnold, Port Chester, N. Y., on the cultivation of outdoor roses was listened to with marked attention.

On June 5 the rose contest for the silver cup donated by Major Isaac Schoenthal was held. Considerable care had been given to the decoration of the room, in addition to the roses which filled the center. All the near-by private estates were represented in one way or another. The winner of the cup was D. Kindsgrab, gardener for Wm. Runkle.

(REGISTERED)

Greenhouse Fumigating Powder

Is the newest and best article on the market to-day for the complete destruction of all insects that infest Greenhouses or Conservatories, being a special boon to Rose and Beauty growers and prepared particularly for the destruction of Greenfly and Thrips. There is nothing injurious in it to plant life, even the most delicate fern. It is especially recommended for Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Smilax, Asparagus, Palms, Ferns, etc., and we claim that insects will be entirely eradicated when the houses are thoroughly fumigated with the powder. It is put up as follows:

1 lb. Tin Can.....$.25
5 lb. Tin Can.....1 00
25 lb. S-al d Box.....4 50

(NEPHROLEPIS PIERSONI.)

There is nothing that you can plant that will increase in value so rapidly as this fern. The demand has been so great, and our advance sales so large, that we have not offered it recently, having only just completed filling advance orders. We have a nice lot of young stock coming on, and can fill all orders received from this date promptly on receipt. Even at the present high price it has been impossible to keep up with the demand, and there is sure to be a tremendous demand for it another season when it can be offered at lower prices. Now is the time to invest in it and get the benefit of the tremendous demand and good prices which are sure to prevail another season. The Boston Fern, although it has been cultivated many years, is still scarce. As Nephrolepis Piersoni will sell better and be in greater demand even than the Boston Fern, we predict a scarcity of Nephrolepis Piersoni for several years to come and at big prices. Owing to the great and continued demand, we do not expect to be more than able to meet the demand this spring, so that customers can rest assured that there will be no change in price this season.

We offer strong young plants, 2 1/4-in. pots, at $9.00 per doz.; 50 plants at 80c each; 100 plants at 50c each; 500 plants at 45c each; 1000 plants at 40c each.

Extra large plants, 6-in. pots, $27.00 per doz; 50 plants at $1.80 each; 100 plants at $1.50 each. These large plants will make fine stock for growing on into large specimens for fall trade, and they are also very nice for immediate sales.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Valley.

Many of us will be growing a few hundred valley during the summer months, some from pips we have in our own ice houses, and some getting them weekly from the firms that keep them in cold storage and send them on to the retail growers. In the early summer months they usually flower very satisfactorily if treated at all right. Chop off but a half inch or so of the ends of the roots; give them a depth of sand in the boxes or beds equal to the length of the root; have the glass over them rather heavily shaded; but what is most particular of all is not to let any draughts strike them, such as open doors may cause. Give them water daily and on very hot days twice. What may not be known to all, yet which is of vital importance, is not to wet the bells after they begin to color, or rather to whiten. Water the sand, but don't wet the flower spike. I have never been able to see that the valley flowers develop much if any after they are cut, so they should not be cut until every bell is white. Yet it is always most desirable that the spikes should be cut twenty-four hours before being sold or used and put into a jar of cold water, because they do not then wilt, as fresh cut flowers do, and this applies to almost all the flowers we use.

The use of some green foliage with many flowers that do not supply their own is more and more in use and is only good taste. The eye soon tires of any color—red, pink, yellow—unless subdued and softened by nature's color, green. And of all the pretty foliage, the maidenhair fern is queen and there is no king.

Smilax.

Before I speak of adiantums, etc., let us be reminded that the good old smilax has been in great demand and very scarce this past winter and spring. A few years it went slightly out of fashion, sold cheap, and growers dropped it, which accounts for its scarcity, and when an article is hard to obtain it is in fashion. It is so simple to grow and the simplicity of its culture so well known that I am merely going to say now that a bed or bench the size of your requirements should be on every retailer's place. When you want fifty strings you can buy them, but when you want five strings in a hurry it is nice to have them on the place. And I believe that a house of smilax, well grown, is just as profitable as a house full of carnations or many other things.

Smilax should be planted by the first of July, then by the next July you will have cut four crops. It should be replanted every year with strong, 3-inch pot plants. It should have six to eight inches of heavy loam, with a fourth or even more of animal manure. Whether it is on the floor or on a low bench matters little, except that you want head room, and it is more convenient to tie when it is planted near the surface of the house. To be profitable it should have 60 degrees at night throughout the winter, and lots of syringing to keep down red spider. Always begin at one end of the bed and clear it off as you need it, because then the plants are at once deprived of all their growth as they are when you cut a string. They should not be watered until they have started to make new growths or the fleshy roots will rot.

Adiantums.

Adiantum cuneatum is the fern most generally grown for cutting. A. decorum is preferred by some, and now Mr. Crowe, of Utica, is sending out his grand form of this fern. Whether it is a fine form of decorum or a distinct variety, either originating from a spore or a sport, it is, as he grows it, a splendid fern and its origin is of no great importance. He has named it A. Croweanum and well may he crow over the success he has had and the immense stock that he has to distribute.

It is nowadays most desirable that we should have a bench of adiantum to cut from in case of emergency, even if you don't grow a tenth of what you use. I think an ideal bed for adiantums would be brick walls of 18 inches in height filled in nine inches with rubble stone and on that the soil. There is no particular soil for adiantums. You can see them growing freely in a peat soil, in a heavy loam and in a sandy loam, and all thriving. A good, turfy loam, not clayey nor yet sandy, and well rotted will be found the best soil, and a fifth or sixth of well rotted stable manure will help them to grow faster and stronger. I know a man who grows the maidenhair equal to any one in the country and who says "I use the same soil as for roses."

The great and frequent failures with the average grower of adiantum is caused by the plants being thrown in five or six inches of soil on a bench that has three or four hot water or steam pipes. That is all wrong and the shriveled fronds and failures that occur are often attributed to tobacco smoke and other causes, when the real trouble is dried up roots. A bench with six inches of soil and no pipes beneath it may be as successful as the brick or stone bed, only the latter is permanent.

Aphis seldom troubles the adiantum. When it does tobacco dust will keep it down, and its great enemy, the little slugs, can be kept under by a profuse dusting of slaked quick lime, which does them no harm. Get the dusted lime well down on the crown of the plant, for there is where the slug makes his roosting place, and being hungry about the time the sun sets, he feeds on the tender young fronds that first catch his eye or touch. A warm atmosphere, say 60 or 65 degrees at night, will do for them, and a house that gets no direct rays of the sun is the one.

Don't forget to prepare for planting Asparagus Sprengeri about the first of July. You can help largely to pay your coal bill by growing this graceful foliage plant. More anon about this.

Keep your Lilium lancifolium shaded and give them all the ventilation you can. Our hot days under glass make them short lived. A rather good business prevents these notes being longer.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

GERANIUMS.

Please name for me a half-dozen of the best bedding geraniums, also three or four of the best of the ivy-leaved section. What color is the variety E. G. Hill? Last year Mr. Scott wrote something about a variety named Richmond Beauty. Is that a new one not yet sent out or an old one taken into favor again?

X. Y. Z.

New varieties are annually sent out, and some of them are undoubtedly improvements over existing varieties. The French are the most prolific in the new zonale pelargoniums, as they are called in Europe. In England they are grown largely for summer decoration of the conservatory and are worthy of it, too, but many beautiful varieties, splendid for that purpose, would be a failure in our flower beds here. It is "bedding" varieties our inquirer is after, and here are half a dozen, all semi-double, that can be relied on as satisfactory "bedders": Alphonse Ricard, brilliant orange scarlet; Beauté Poitevine, the best salmon pink; Jean Viaud, soft pure pink; S. A. Nutt, crimson scarlet, indispensable; Mme. A. Chevelliere, white.

There is also Le Soleil, I think an improvement over that wonderful variety, S. A. Nutt. It is much newer and therefore has more vigor. Mrs. E. G. Hill is a single salmon, very free and robust, with an immense truss, very desirable. Mrs. J. M. Gaar is a single white, very free. Last fall we were solicited to buy a few dozen of the new scarlet semi-double, Trego. You will see it advertised in the trade papers. It is said to be a wonderful bedder. That I can't swear to, but we now have it in flower and it is the most charming bright scarlet of all geraniums and every one of you must have it. It stands out in brightness among other zonales as Jupiter does among the other stars and planets.

Richmond Beauty is one of E. G. Hill's, as its name would imply. It is a beautiful single flower. The raiser's description is: "Brilliant scarlet crimson, with large white feathering on two upper petals and fine, rounded form." As a pot plant for spring sales it attracts every one.

Freedom of flower is what is wanted in the ivy-leaved section. We use them only for edging to vases and veranda boxes. The pink varieties are most in demand for that. Four good varieties are: Galilee, light rosy pink; Garden's Glory, bright scarlet; Souv. de Charles Turner, deep, bright pink; Jean d'Arc, white. Above I mentioned that the ivy-leaved section are used by us only for vases and flower boxes. Of course, as a market plant thousands are sold. Their beauty sells them.

Late floral news from Washington announces that the first lady of the land is going to have flower boxes on the east and west terraces of the White House on the recommendation of Architect McKim. The cost of the boxes is to be $760 without filling. Buffalo has for twenty years been pre-eminent in its use of veranda boxes. No other city that I have ever visited has even begun to have so much of that kind of decoration and it is rather on the wane here, but now look out for its being the style and Mrs. Goldrocks and Mrs. Beef Trust, wherever they are found, will want them.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

SYSTEM IN ACCOUNTING.

Elmer D. Smith, of Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., has evolved a modern system of accounting as applied to a wholesale and retail florist business. The records are complete but compact and the plan commends itself for its simplicity as well as its accuracy. Mr. Smith recently described his method in "System," as follows:

"The system was installed last winter. It consists of a set of cards 4x6 for each department, wholesale and retail, and a set 5x8 used as a day-book or blotter, whereon all transactions are entered in both departments. The system also embraces a day-book card, a monthly card and catalogue files.

"In order to present the system understandingly and in detail it may be stated that in the retail department duplicating slips are used for original charges. The following day these items are entered on ruled cards. These simple day-book entries are found to be the most convenient, as they obviate the necessity of looking elsewhere in making out bills at the end of the month—simply copying the entries from the card to the bill.

"The wholesale card gives the date and the amount of sales only. On the day-book card all transactions are entered and these items are recapitulated each day on the reverse side, which is blank. At the end of the month these recapitulations are all entered on the fourth branch of the system which, as will be seen gives the total sales, as well as an itemized expense account for that month.

"At the end of the year a similar card is used upon which the totals for each month are entered, and the footing of gonias, geraniums, pelargoniums and roses.

"In this way the most important growers of all or any of these flowers are kept on one card. Two drawers of the cabinet are used for catalogues, one for plants and the other for florists' requisites, such as glass, moss, boiler, paints, etc. Cultural notes are taken from the various publications and are filed and indexed in the same manner as catalogues. The cards are headed with the name of the species and the special subjects are enumerated below.

"The adaptability of this system to any wholesale or retail business is readily shown, and the added feature—that of recording the annual statement on cards so that it can be referred to in an instant—is especially advantageous, as it enables the business man to know at all times whether his business is growing and whether his expenses are in conformity with the business done."

MUMS DAMPING OFF.

I cannot root chrysanthemums in summer; the cuttings damp off. The bench is one foot from the glass. Is that too near?

G. W. B.

I think it is too near the glass for rooting cuttings in summer unless the propagating house is situated on the north side of the range in such a manner that the sun never strikes it. I would imagine the trouble is caused by the hot sun causing the cuttings to wilt too much and get hard and withered before they root. Cuttings should not damp off in May and June. They need, and in fact must have, lots of spraying and watering to keep them plump and soft. I imagine most people who are not successful in rooting chrysanthemums in summer fail because they do not water their cuttings enough.

If I were G. W. B. I would root my cuttings in a frame outside, putting the frame somewhere under a wall or a good shade tree, and shade the glass in addition when the sun is hot. In such a position, if kept well syringed and not exposed at first to a strong draught of air, cuttings will root as easily as they will in a cutting bench in March. On still, dewy nights remove the glass and let the cuttings get the benefit of the cool, moist air. Don't let the cuttings wilt more than you can help and the only way to prevent wilting is to keep the moisture around. I recall that, seeing the ease with which the side shoots rooted on the cool, moist ashes when stripped from the parent plant and thrown away between the pots, first put me on the track of getting a successful strike in the summer time. A cool, shady spot with lots of moisture and air is all that is needed. I shall be interested in hearing of G. W. B.'s success if he tries this simple method.

Seasonable Hints.

Staking and tying are two of the most important duties which must be attended to now. To give young stock a fair start they must not be neglected in this respect. As soon as possible after planting, and particularly with grafted stock, staking and training should be attended to, so that the young stock may obtain a thrifty and well balanced form.

Delaying or neglecting this duty will lead to the production of thin, scrambling wood which will not be likely to produce good salable blooms, the flowers from such stock being usually very weak in the neck.

The up-to-date method of arranging the supports is to make an upright frame of 1-inch piping, consisting of two uprights connected at the top by a horizontal bar. This is easily done by using elbows. The width of the frame should be six inches narrower than the bench, so that it will rest against the end. The crossbar should be at least 28 inches above the sideboards. The uprights if sunk six inches in the ground will be sufficiently stable to stand the strain of stretching the wire, one placed at each end of the bench and No. 16 galvanized wire stretched above each line of plants. To keep the wires from sagging, a support made of 3/4-inch gas-pipe, the same shape as the end frames and placed at distances of 12 feet apart, and tied to the horizontal wire, completes the arrangement. A coat of white paint adds considerable to the appearance.

Stakes of No. 6 galvanized wire three feet three inches long are then placed by each plant and tied firmly at the intersection with the horizontal wire. There has lately been put on the market a steel wire clasp to be used in place of twine in fastening the stakes to the wire, and which for neatness and expediency is far ahead of string, and affords no shelter for spider or other insect pests.

Beauties can be supported by the same kind of arrangement, with the addition of overhead wires seven feet above the bench, to which the longer stems can be secured by tying.

This is of course a little more costly than the older methods, but it has the merit of being easily put up and taken down and is practically indestructible at the same time, giving the house a smart and airy appearance, and however much we may study the question of returns, taste and neatness cost so little more than what is absolutely necessary that the added pleasure more than compensates for the extra trouble and cost.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Condition of Field Stock.

The long continued drought in this section has at last been broken, much to the satisfaction of carnation growers. Now that the ground is well soaked I wish, at the risk of repetition, to again impress upon your minds the importance of breaking up the surface soil as soon as conditions will permit. By this means we can keep our plants growing rapidly until housing time, even should no further rains occur.

By the way, have you stopped to think that in a few weeks benching will commence? From all appearances the great majority of my plants will be plenty large enough to house by July 1. This leads me to define and give reasons regarding what I consider the size a plant should be to lift.

Varieties differ very much in rapidity of growth and therefore one must study each variety grown as regards this difference. Taking Mrs. Bradt and Nelson, we have two which differ widely in this respect. It is practically impossible to get returns from Bradt unless strong, heavy plants can be had when housing, while with Nelson much smaller plants give the best results, and with very few exceptions what is true of Nelson is true of nearly every variety of commercial value.

I would define a plant of proper size to house as one which is compact in growth, having six to eight strong shoots three to four inches in length, the last topping having been so timed as to allow these shoots to develop to the length named.

I notice some growers still hold to the idea that plants can be allowed to bloom in the field and still furnish good stock for winter, also that plants can without injury be allowed to run into bud, lifted and benched to furnish an immediate crop.

No one can expect to produce first class blooms in the field from plants intended for winter use. A grade still lower can be expected from plants lifted with buds, and these allowed to flower. In either case the resources of the plants are taxed to a degree that will be most manifest when blooms are most in demand at good prices.

I may add that the height of the plant is often misleading when size is being considered, as the most desirable feature is its stocky form; it is the future productive qualities that should be looked after.

There are several advantages in benching what, from my definition, some may call under-sized plants. They can be planted in a more rapid and thorough manner than large ones. In early housing the plant becomes established quickly and in completing its growth in the new soil, the roots radiate in a more natural manner, thus obtaining a firmer hold in the soil, resulting in a more finished plant, well able to stand the strain that is to be put upon it. While it will be seen that I advise benching small or medium-sized plants, I also follow a system of culture under glass as soon as the plants are established which I will treat upon in due time.

An Inquiry.

This week a grower in this vicinity asked my opinion on the following: His plants were benched last August; were healthy and continued so until he was obliged to let them freeze several weeks before Christmas. Nothing has been since disturbed. Would the same soil be suitable to use this season by the addition of more manure and bone?

Not having had any such case come under my observation I could not at once answer, but after some thought on the matter I have advised against the practice, owing to the fact that the plants have been allowed to occupy the same position up to the present time. Several other minor things lead me to believe there would be a risk too great to run, compared to the expense of re-filling with fresh soil. As this matter may interest other growers who were frozen up last winter, I will ask Mr. Baur to give his views or relate experience he or others may have had.

PIPING WITH SOLID BEDS.

I am building solid beds for roses and carnations. Should any of the steam or hot water pipes be run under or through the beds for the purpose of forcing the plants in winter? I have read several articles on the solid bed system but have seen nothing on piping for such beds.

B. W. S.

I certainly would not advise you to run any of your heating pipes under or through your solid beds. You can find plenty of room for the pipes along the walls and along the side of the walks for the pipes. We put one 2-inch pipe in each walk and the balance along the outside walls, where most of them are needed anyway. We heat with steam. There is such a wide variance in the arrangement of greenhouse establishments that each heating system needs to be constructed to suit the one particular place it is to heat. You may do well to hang some of your pipes overhead, but we prefer to have them mostly below.

No doubt many growers have the idea that the reason most heating pipes are placed under the benches is that they should help to force the plants by keeping the roots warm, etc., when really the strongest reason is to get the pipes out of the way. To the rose-grower they are a help in keeping his rose beds from getting too wet during cloudy weather, when he must needs do more or less syringing to keep down red spider. But to the carnation-grower I do not consider them any help whatever, as he does not need to syringe enough to get the soil into a soggy condition, and surely if you know the first principles of growing you will not need a drying plant to keep you from overwatering your plants.

One of the points argued in favor of raised benches has been that they will dry out oftener and that there will be less danger from overwatering and souring of the soil. It has been proven over and over that if you will get your soil into the proper state of moisture, and keep it there, it will be far better for the plants than if you allow it to vary, first dry then wet. Of course there are times when a plant wants more water than it does at other times and different kinds of plants will vary greatly, especially those that bloom in crops. The carnation varies very little in that respect. From the time it has taken a good hold on the soil and started into a vigorous growth it will at all times enjoy a very fair supply of water and any attempt at working the crops by withholding the water or giving an extra supply will only end in bursted calyxes or sickened plants. If the roots will get no water except what you intend that they should have, there ought to be no danger of overwatering, and if the soil does not dry out fast enough to need watering once in a week or two weeks you should be glad that it saves you time and water, but be sure to water only when it is needed. As for souring, there is no danger if you keep the surface loose and work through it occasionally so that the air can get to it.

Entirely too much consideration is given by some growers to the temperature of the water they use for watering, they being afraid that by using cold water they might chill the roots, etc. It has been proven by practical test that the temperature of the water would have but small effect on the growth of the plants. Anywhere between 40° and 100° makes no difference at all, even with such tender plants as coleus. You would be surprised what a slight change it will make in the temperature of the soil when you water with either cold or warm water. Bury a thermometer partly in the soil, just enough so you can see the figures and the mercury and after a half hour, when it registers the temperature of the soil, water with either cold or warm water and see how much it will change the mercury if the ball is buried about three inches below the surface.

Perhaps I have enlarged on this subject a little more than was necessary but I want to impress upon you that entirely too much ado is made of this bottom heat, bottom circulation, etc.

PLANTS FOR CUT FLOWERS.

We have two houses and can raise all the carnations and green that we need, but we have no place suitable for roses. What plants would you recommend to grow to provide blooms all winter that will do for design work and bouquets?

W. G. T.

As W. G. T. knows, the rose is the great essential in bouquets and designs, and if you have carnations, roses, ferns and asparagus, you can get along with but few "of the trimmings." I can scarcely think of any other plant that will produce the greater part of the year, as do carnations. Yet there are many useful things that can be grown in a carnation temperature, and some of these can occupy the benches without any noticeable detriment to the carnations. The double sweet alyssum can be grown on the edge of the benches. Gladiolus Colvillei The Bride, a most beautiful feathery flower, can be planted between the carnations on the benches.

Freesia is better grown on a bench in four or five inches of soil, and plant successive crops. Freesia deserves a bench and good soil and is most useful. Narcissus Paper White and Roman hyacinths can be forced in a carnation temperature, even for Christmas, if planted and brought in early enough. After the middle of February the early single tulips can be flowered in these houses. Then there are the Bermuda lilies, but they would occupy the benches a long time and would not flower before April. The so-called calla lilies would thrive and give some flowers, but should have a temperature of 60 degrees to be profitable. At the ends of the house in boxes could be grown Swainsona alba. Its pea-like blossoms help out, but it is scarcely profitable, only that you can grow it in odd places that would not otherwise be used.

Lastly there is the sweet pea, and to tell you all about them, or what I think I know about their culture under glass, would be too long a story just now. I will merely say that they should occupy a bench of five or six inches of soil, and I also here take the opportunity to say that I used to be under the impression that it was difficult to pick flowers before Easter time. Last year I saw them sown in August and fine flowers gathered from them before Christmas, and before long I shall take the pleasure of letting my friends know how it was done, which is no news to many, but it was to me.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

We have had one of those springs that are very trying on the young stock and if your carnation plants in the field are in good shape it shows that you have looked after them carefully. Late frosts in April, when we usually have fine planting weather, caused either delay in planting out or, if any were out, it did them no good. Soon after that came a long dry spell which prevented the newly planted stock from getting a good start. Then following that came a long very cool rainy spell and now we have good prospects for another prolonged dry spell and the ground is quite dry on the surface already. During the rainy spell the young plants got a good hold on the soil and if you have worked the soil at every opportunity the young plants should be in good shape, but if you allowed the soil to bake before you cultivated, you will be paying for it now. Keep the cultivator and the hoe agoing by all means and cultivate deep. Look after the topping regularly now.

BLACK ANTS.

Will you kindly give me your experience, and what will exterminate the little black ant. I have been greatly troubled with them all the spring. They get into the pots and carry away all the earth, leaving the roots bare. I am unable to drive them away or kill them. They are everywhere and in everything and are not partial to any one thing. Kindly give me your advice. H. F.

I cannot remember that we have ever been bothered with little black ants in the houses. And they are not, I think, the same ants that make such unsightly tufts or little mounds in the soil, and which are very difficult to dislodge without killing the sod. The ants that are troublesome in the houses can, I hope, be destroyed by the following: Sixty grains corrosive chloride of mercury; one ounce of lard. Mix the mercury thoroughly into the lard and smear it on the sides and top edges of the benches or on chips of wood near where the ants congregate, and I trust this will "settle their goose."

WILLIAM SCOTT.

UNDER-GROUND WATERING.

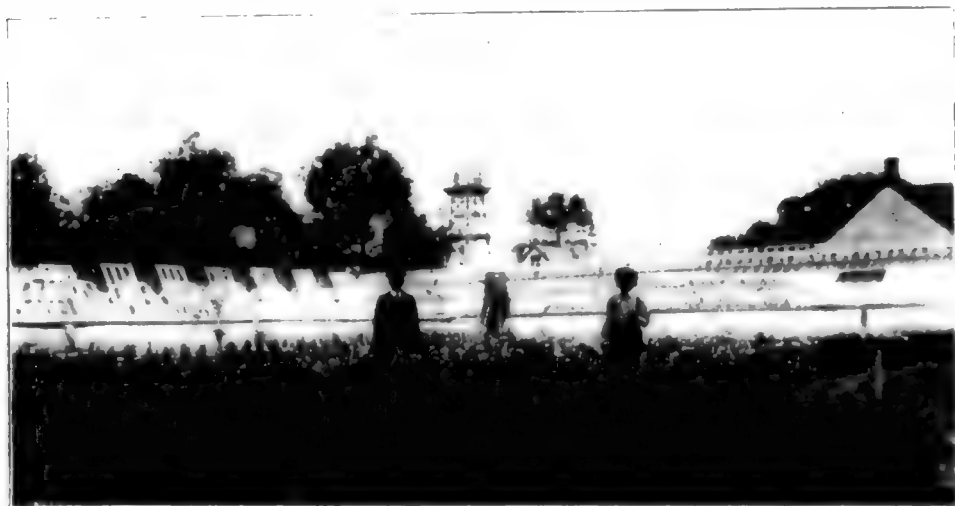

An English writer on gardening recommends the use of "water spears," which are hollow canes to be inserted in the soil and filled with water, the idea being that this would counteract the effects of "the zone of earth that exists in very hot, dry weather, at or near the surface and extending downward to a depth of several inches, which presents an impassable barrier to the principle, or rather action of the principle, of capillary attraction which is the great water distributing power."

Referring to this statement an American horticulturist writes us:

"I cannot imagine any intermittent conditions of the weather that would produce a 'zone of earth' in which the necessary conditions for capillary attraction are eliminated. Some soils in a hot, dry spell bake and become hard, but evaporation from the surface continues just the same, and tillage or mulching is done to prevent the loss of moisture. Tillage breaks up the infinitesimal pores through which the moisture escapes into the air and at the same time produces an earth mulch. This mulch, or one of any character, entangles the moisture as it arises by capillary attraction and retains it for the use of the plant.

"If an 'impossible barrier to the principle of capillary attraction' were formed 'at or near the surface' it would be a good thing for plant life if not of a nature to retard the passage of air to the roots. Mulching and tillage do not produce an impassable barrier but an entangling one.

"Sub-irrigation is often essential. Where a new place is laid out and large native trees are retained on sloping grounds from which the surface drains away readily, they often suffer for want of moisture, especially if not standing in a well watered lawn. Before the place was cleared, when the neighboring trees and undergrowth shaded the ground and retarded the surface flow of water, enough moisture reached the roots to supply these trees, but under the changed conditions they suffer. Four-inch sewer pipes, three feet long, sunk perpendicularly in the ground between the larger roots, so the tops are even with or a few inches below the surface, can be used to advantage, watering through them during dry spells.

PEST TO EGG PLANTS.

We have a little white fly here, so small that one must have good eyes to see it. But it has about ruined the egg plants for two years by getting on the under side of the leaves and sapping them until they dry up. I have tried several remedies without being able to get rid of the pest. What will destroy them?
B. W. S.

The description given is somewhat too vague for scientific determination. It seems probable that the insect is the white fly, so-called, or perhaps a mealy-bug, but this is uncertain. If the egg plants are in serious danger I would advise the use of kerosene emulsion until specimens can be forwarded and identified.
F. H. CHITTENDEN.

BOILER CAPACITY.

I have a portable saw mill boiler 12 feet long, 34 inches diameter, 30 3-inch flues; grate surface 28x52 inches; stack 16 inches in diameter and 34 feet high. The boiler is on top of the ground, so that the returns enter about a foot above the ground. I am heating one house 11x40, one 11x32 and two 22x52. How much more glass can I heat? How much would the efficiency of the boiler be increased by having it about five or six feet below the surface? I am using hot water and using a cheap grade of coal.
L. R. A.

The boiler described, if placed below the ground, would be able to effectively heat houses containing about 7,500 square feet of glass exposure, but placed as it is with its return inlet two feet above the ground its effectiveness is materially reduced, but it would be difficult to say just how much.

Weather and Trade.

Extremes seem to be the rule here this season. The whole week was one of clouds and gloom and unseasonableness, with hardly an interruption. Sunday and Monday were worse, if possible—incessant rain, a March temperature, and business at a standstill. The long drought was productive of fear and almost disaster. Now the "floods came and the winds blew" and excessive moisture and chill thereafter to outdo the damage already wrought. Nature is a fickle jade and her wooing this year is the limit. If the skies continue to weep forty-eight hours longer the same prayers that brought the rain ten days ago will have to be used to invoke the sunshine. However, "hope springs eternal" and doubtless before another issue of the REVIEW the good old summer time will be here to stay. We must have fine weather for July 1, or the outing will not be the success now anticipated. There is still time to send for tickets to Mr. Traendly, and still tickets for sale. It is absolutely necessary to know at once how many will be there so that the commissary department may provide the necessary dinners and refreshments needed on the boat, both coming and going. This is to be the affair of the year "down east." Nearly everybody will carry home a prize, too, for the generosity of the club members has been profuse and the competition promises to be keen and general. If the complete attendance does not total 300, the committee will be greatly disappointed.

Various Notes.

Frank Millang is back from his three weeks' trip to the Pacific coast, quite entranced by his experiences, especially in Oregon, where the possibilities of ranching make one think of Horace Greeley's admonition to the young man to "go west" and grow up with that wonderful country. Kindly give me your advice. H. F.

I cannot remember that we have ever been bothered with little black ants in the houses. And they are not, I think, the same ants that make such unsightly tufts or little mounds in the soil, and which are very difficult to dislodge without killing the soil. The ants that are troublesome in the houses can, I hope, be destroyed by the following: Sixty grains corrosive chloride of mercury; one ounce of lard. Mix the mercury thoroughly into the lard and smear it on the sides and top edges of the benches or on chips of wood near where the ants congregate, and I trust this will "settle their goose."

WILLIAM SCOTT.

UNDER-GROUND WATERING.

An English writer on gardening recommends the use of "water spears," which are hollow canes to be inserted in the soil and filled with water, the idea being that this would counteract the effects of "the zone of earth that exists in very hot, dry weather, at or near the surface and extending downward to a depth of several inches, which presents an impassable barrier to the principle, or rather action of the principle, of capillary attraction which is the great water distributing power."

Referring to this statement an American horticulturist writes us:

"I cannot imagine any intermittent conditions of the weather that would produce a 'zone of earth' in which the necessary conditions for capillary attraction are eliminated. Some soils in a hot, dry spell bake and become hard, but evaporation from the surface continues just the same, and tillage or mulching is done to prevent the loss of moisture. Tillage breaks up the infinitesimal pores through which the moisture escapes into the air and at the same time produces an earth mulch. This mulch, or one of any character, entangles the moisture as it arises by capillary attraction and retains it for the use of the plant.

"If an 'impassable barrier to the principle of capillary attraction' were formed 'at or near the surface' it would be a good thing for plant life if not of a nature to retard the passage of air to the roots. Mulching and tillage do not produce an impassable barrier but an entangling one.

"Subirrigation is often essential. Where a new place is laid out and large native trees are retained on sloping grounds from which the surface drains away readily, they often suffer for want of moisture, especially if not standing in a well watered lawn. Before the place was cleared, when the neighboring trees and undergrowth shaded the ground and retarded the surface flow of water, enough moisture reached the roots to supply these trees, but under the changed conditions they suffer. Four-inch sewer pipes, three feet long, sunk perpendicularly in the ground between the larger roots, so the tops are even with or a few inches below the surface, can be used to advantage, watering through them during dry spells.

PEST TO EGG PLANTS.

We have a little white fly here, so small that one must have good eyes to see it. But it has about ruined the egg plants for two years by getting on the under side of the leaves and sapping them until they dry up. I have tried several remedies without being able to get rid of the pest. What will destroy them?

B. W. S.

The description given is somewhat too vague for scientific determination. It seems probable that the insect is the white fly, so-called, or perhaps a mealy bug, but this is uncertain. If the egg plants are in serious danger I would advise the use of kerosene emulsion until specimens can be forwarded and identified.

F. H. CHITTENDEN.

BOILER CAPACITY.

I have a portable saw mill boiler 12 feet long, 34 inches diameter, 30 3/4 inch flues; grate surface 28x52 inches; stack 16 inches in diameter and 34 feet high. The boiler is on top of the ground, so that the returns enter about a foot above the ground. I am heating one house 11x40, one 11x32 and two 22x52. How much more glass can I heat? How much would the efficiency of the boiler be increased by having it about five or six feet below the surface? I am using hot water and using a cheap grade of coal.

L. R. A.

The boiler described, if placed below the ground, would be able to effectively heat houses containing about 7,500 square feet of glass exposure, but placed as it is with its return inlet two feet above the ground its effectiveness is markedly reduced, but it would be difficult to say just how much.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

NEW YORK.

Weather and Trade.

Extremes seem to be the rule here this season. The whole week was one of clouds and gloom and unseasonableness, with hardly an interruption. Sunday and Monday were worse, if possible—incessant rain, a March temperature, and business at a standstill. The long drought was productive of fear and almost disaster. Now the "floods came and the winds blew" and excessive moisture and chill thereafter to outdo the damage already wrought. Nature is a fickle jade and her wooing this year is the limit. If the skies continue to weep forty-eight hours longer the same prayers that brought the rain ten days ago will have to be used to invoke the sunshine. However, "hope springs eternal" and doubtless before another issue of the REVIEW the good old summer time will be here to stay. We must have fine weather for July 1, or the outing will not be the success now anticipated. There is still time to send for tickets to Mr. Traendly, and still tickets for sale. It is absolutely necessary to know at once how many will be there so that the commissary department may provide the necessary dinners and refreshments needed on the boat, both coming and going. This is to be the affair of the year "down east." Nearly everybody will carry home a prize, too, for the generosity of the club members has been profuse and the competition promises to be keen and general. If the complete attendance does not total 300, the committee will be greatly disappointed.

Various Notes.

Frank Millang is back from his three weeks' trip to the Pacific coast, quite entranced by his experiences, especially in Oregon, where the possibilities of ranching make one think of Horace Greeley's admonition to the young man to "go west" and grow up with that wonderful country. Mr. Millang spoke of the fine modern florist stores in Portland and Denver, worthy of the big cities in the east.

The friends of Mr. Hillman, secretary and treasurer of the New York Cut Flower Co., extend their sincere sympathy to him in the loss of his mother.

James McGarrett, father of Mr. McConnell's bookkeeper, and for some time in his service, died on Thursday, June 11, much regretted, a man of sterling honesty and one of the old time florists, whose life reached back to the early days of floriculture in New York.

The manager of the Botanical Decorating Co., Chicago, was in the city on Saturday, a guest of L. J. Kreshover, of West Twenty-seventh street.

The governor of this state has appointed C. W. Ward, of Queens, trustee of the New York Agricultural Experiment Station, of Geneva, N. Y., succeeding the late E. A. Callahan, of Albany.

F. L. Atkins and wife leave next Wednesday for an extensive European tour which will combine business and well earned rest after the firm's greatest season in its history.

Retail stores easily maintain attractive windows in these days of superabundance of bloom. Chrysanthemums at Thorley's are the greatest novelty.

At Bowe's on Saturday a great bank of Anna Foster ferns testified to the growing popularity of this splendid acquisition. "It's a great keeper," seems to be the universal verdict, and its gracefulness is especially pleasing.

John L. Rayner reports a good call for Adiantum Croomianum. It readily brings $1.25 to $1.50. Mr. Crowe is also shipping to Washington, Pittsburg and other large cities.

George Saltford was at Annandale, near Rhinebeck, last week, as curator in connection with the rose show there, and reports a great three days' success. The judges of the show were John N. May, P. O'Mara and R. W. Allen.

The friends of Alex. Burns, of Woodside, will be glad to know that Mrs. Burns has so far recovered from the serious accident of a year ago as to be able to walk again and great hopes are now entertained for her complete recovery.

In addition to the splendid list of prizes already announced to be competed for at the outing July 1, J. L. Rayner offers prizes of $7 and $3 in cash for the highest scores in a tenframe bowling match, open to all.

Charles Milling is handling some very fine roses, valley and sweet peas. Average prices have been low but he reports something doing all the time.

Bowling.

The first practice game in the preparatory season of the New Yorkers was rolled June 9. Four of the old guard were there and the scores were fair to middling, as follows: Theo. Lang, 150, 176; Alex. Burns, 135, 147; P. O'Mara, 195, 192; F. H. Traendly, 119, 126.

Capt. Lang, as a competitor in the Broadway League, made average of 190½ in ten games and is second on the list of prize winners to date. Mr. Lang and family will leave shortly for their summer outing at their home at Mt. Marion.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Beauties are fair for the season and in adequate supply, but Brides and Maids of good quality are scarce, much of the stock showing much mildew as well as being small and soft. There are large supplies of Liberty of good quality and some of the growers are cutting fancy Meteor. Chatenay, Kaiserin and La France are also fair to good in quality. Carnation cuts are on the decrease, but there are still ample supplies. Prosperity is fine and Genevieve Lord and Ethel Crocker are showing their quality as summer bloomers.

The peony crop is off and the stock is coming out of cold storage. Good bunches of the better varieties are still the best selling item on the list. There are oceans of sweet peas, plenty of lilies, pansies, valley and now, too, of smilax and asparagus. Ferns are short. Shipping demand continues fair, although mostly small orders. Local business is not up to last June.

Death of J. T. Anthony.

With the passing of J. T. Anthony floriculture loses another of her master craftsmen. Born near Providence, R. I., March 7, 1842, Mr. Anthony spent his life in the profession, wearing Confederate lead these thirty years, for he laid down his watering can and trowel to shoulder a musket in the hour of his country's need. He returned to the pursuits of peace with health impaired but with spirit unconquered, and was for years one of the leading figures in the trade. On coming west he spent some time with M. E. Page and then went into business for himself on Michigan avenue, near Twenty-second street. In 1885 he built a range of glass on Prairie avenue, just north of Thirty-fifth street, which was one of the most pretentious establishments of the day. He grew choice material, including a large stock of orchids, and did a nice business, but in the end met with financial reverses which saddened if they did not embitter his later years. Mr. Anthony was the first president of the Chicago Florists' Club, organized in 1886, and was always one of its wheel horses. He was elected President of the S. A. F. at the St. Louis convention in 1893. He was a member of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, of the Grand Army of the Republic and of the Masons. His death occurred June 11, at Geneva, Ill., where he had been in business for the past few years and interment was at Oakwoods. Mrs. Anthony was left without resources, but her immediate wants were cared for by Mr. Anthony's old friends, whose attention was called to her plight by C. A. Samuelson.

Various Notes.

Frank Hayes, of the H. M. Hooker Co., says that there is a big call for greenhouse glass, but that it is not wholly a blessing, for in the days when the sales were not so large the small sizes of double strength could be had at the factory for about the price of single, while now the demand is so big that the natural production of small sizes does not nearly suffice and the manufacturers refuse to cut greenhouse glass except at a premium. Mr. Hayes says that the indications point to an immediate and very large increase in the glass used for forcing vegetables.

There was a well attended meeting on Tuesday, called to plan for the entertainment of those en route to the S. A. F. convention who will pass through Chicago on Monday, August 17. After a general discussion of the proposed hospitalities, a committee on ways and means was appointed, with sub-committees for the several branches of the trade, instructed to raise a guarantee fund of $1,500. Another committee was appointed to see what can be had for the money.

The Foley Mfg. Co. is building a very fine conservatory for Harry Rubens, also extending Harry Selfridge's range at Lake Geneva.

The cold and unseasonable weather has brought on a return of A. Dietsch's illness and he has been confined to his house for several days. It begins to look to him as though he would be compelled to remain permanently in the southwest.

Fred Hills has done very well on Easter lilies this year and is trying cold storage bulbs for an all-season supply.

N. J. Rupp says that the Moninger Co. is again enjoying its busiest season. This has been their annual experience for several years.

Jas. Hartshorne brought a magnificent bunch of peonies to the meeting of the craft last Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Dickinson were at St. Joe Tuesday. Mrs. Dickinson and the pride of the family may spend a part of the summer at the Michigan resort.

Bowling.

The series of thirty games was ended at Anson's on Tuesday evening, with the following score:

Player.	1st.	2d.	3d.
Winterson	179	128	160
Sterrett	140	160	132
Pruner	114	144	120

F. Stollery	164	193	145
Kreitling	118	137	109
Scott	137	158	150

This leaves the following as the ten high men:

Geo. Asmus.....	165	E. Winterson	154
C. Balluff	163	P. Hauswirth	153
G. Stollery	162	Geo. Scott	152
F. Stollery	161	C. Pruner	149
J. Lambros	150	J. Sterrett	142

To decide the convention team a series of twenty games will now be rolled, four each Tuesday evening for five weeks, as follows: June 23, at Michelson & De Propf's alleys; June 30, at Schiller's, Thirty-first street and Forest avenue; July 7, Sheridan alleys, Waveland and North Halsted; July 14, Geroux alleys, East Madison street; July 21, Mussey's.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

At this writing conditions are somewhat better in receiving express shipments, which come by boat from Alton. The early part of the week it was almost impossible to get any shipments by express from Chicago and other points. This had a bad effect on the retail trade, which had a very busy week, with large weddings and school work. At the wholesale houses many disappointed faces could be seen each morning on account of not having the orders filled. The few shipments from the west and from local consignors did not supply half enough stock to go around. Some of the shipments from Fort Wayne, Chicago and Springfield came in a day late and the stock was almost useless. But the worst is over, they say, and by the end of the week all trains will again run on regular time, as the water on the east side is falling fast.

Trade the past week was very good. Everybody was busy with some kind of work in cut flowers, as weddings, funerals and school commencements have been quite frequent. For the latter events there was not nearly so much to do as in former years, as most of the large schools prohibited the sending of flowers to the graduates. Those who had orders for the large weddings found it difficult to obtain choice white roses and the number required ran up into the thousands. At the funerals of Mr. Lucas and Captain Evans, of the salvage corps, a great many large designs were seen. These were mostly made up of cape jasmines, galax and sweet peas, indicating that other stock was hard to obtain. For school work a large number of Perles were used, as yellow was the class color at some of the largest schools. The cool weather of late has made good flowers very scarce, and particularly roses. Shipping orders from here was out of the question, as all stock that came in was used at home.

Prices on stock were somewhat high when one considers the quality of the flowers, roses having been full of mildew. Carnations are getting small, still they bring a good price, $1.50 to $3 for common stock, with fancy stock at $4 and $5. Sweet peas are selling out clean at 50 cents per 100. A few good asters are in, which sell at $2 and $3 per 100. Cape jasmine has a big call, owing to the shortage of white stock; 50 and 75 cents per 100 was considered a big price for them. These are handled mostly by the commission men along Third street, who have them consigned by the car load. The street fakirs were handling them largely the past week, as they were about the only flowers they could obtain, all other stock having brought a higher price than they cared to pay.

Business from now on will be somewhat slow, as most of the social events are past and the flower-loving people are seeking the summer resorts to be gone until fall. Until then the florist of our town will have to content himself with odds and ends from the few stragglers who remain at home.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The June meeting of the Florists' Club was very poorly attended but this time it was owing to the big flood. Our members from the east side, who are regular attendants, could not get over. When the meeting opened there were ten members present. President Dunford was in the chair. Secretary Schray was absent, owing to very important business at home, and J. J. Beneke acted in his place. The trustees announced that the picnic would be held on Thursday, July 23, at Preistor's Park, half way between Belleville and St. Louis; that a band of music and games of all kinds with prizes would be the features of the outing, that invitations would be mailed to all in time, and that a full report would be made at the next regular meeting of the club. Chas. J. Juengel, state vice-president of the S. A. F., was appointed a committee of one on transportation for the Milwaukee meeting. Members who will attend this meeting should send in their names to Mr. Juengel as soon as possible. The members were also requested to send in a report of their business to Mr. Juengel, so that he can make up his yearly report. This should be done not later than the next meeting. The question box, which is always one of the features of our meetings, brought out a good discussion on several questions. William Winter, of Kirkwood, Mo., invited the club to hold its next meeting at his place, which invitation was accepted with thanks. This meeting will take place July 9, at 2 o'clock, at which the nomination of officers will occur. This, with an essay by Fred C. Weber, on "Benefits Derived by Attending Conventions," should make an interesting meeting, and a big turnout is expected by President Dunford and by Mr. Winter.

Notes.

J. G. Bennett, western representative of the Commercial Cut Flower Box Co., of Binghamton, N. Y., was a caller on the trade the past week.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, has been bringing in his cut each day himself, by way of Alton, at a great expense. Fred could not stay at home and let the trade in St. Louis suffer for want of stock, and his efforts helped out a great deal.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers furnished flowers for two of the largest weddings that took place last week, one of which required as many as 1,000 Bride roses. These were hard to get, but she was equal to the task.

Fred Weber and George Waldbart were two very busy men the past week, with floral work of all kinds, and plenty of it, but it required some hustling on their part to get the stock.

The Ellison Floral Co. had a busy week of it with school work, using nearly 2,000 Perle roses to fill its orders. Quite a lot of dinner table decorating is also reported by them.

Theo. Miller is around nowadays looking very lonesome. His family are on the high seas bound for Germany to spend the summer. Theo. will spend part of the next few weeks getting himself in shape to carry off some of those prizes at Milwaukee.

Bowling.

The bowlers met Monday night and rolled three games. Two teams were made up, with five on a side. Some very good scores were made, Beyer and Kuehn being high men. Here is the record:

Exchange.	1st.	2d.	3d.	Total.
Beyer	169	211	148	528
Guy	120	147	151	427
Miller	164	140	151	455

Weber Jr.	112	117	168	397
Total	698	770	747	2212
Review.	1st.	2d.	3d.	Total.
Kuehn	138	174	195	507

Adles	112	124	152	388
Betteken	151	128	140	419
Total	700	740	792	2233

The two teams will roll next Monday night at the new alleys in Urig's Cave, Jefferson and Washington avenues.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The conditions in the cut flower market have changed considerably, for fewer flowers are now coming in, owing to the change in the weather and the replanting. White flowers are very much in demand and quite scarce at times. Sweet peas are coming in in enormous quantities, except on the rainy days. Leo Nissen is receiving some fine iris and larkspur. Home grown gardenias are about over, though a few are coming in from out of town. Beauties are very much in demand, but prices have not advanced. The indications point to this being the closing week of the wedding and commencement season, but a heavy demand on Monday created an unexpected scarcity, especially for Beauties and lilies.

Afternoon with Mr. Harris.

Were you to ask any one of our leading store keepers whether the growers, as a class, were good business men, he would probably smile and call your attention to a handsome vase of sweet sultan or giant daisy; but were you to ask him whether he considered that Wm. K. Harris' place was run on business principles, he would answer most emphatically in the affirmative and tell you that there is no better business man to be found among the growers. Mr.

Harris' success as a grower is remarkable. His stock is uniformly well grown, and so great is his reputation that the buyers come to him—an unusual condition nowadays. His system is so perfect that he probably requires as little, if not less labor than any of his competitors in proportion to the size of his place. I was fortunate in finding both Mr. Harris and Mr. Mills last Sunday afternoon and spent a pleasant hour or two with them in the houses. Dracaena terminalis, one of Mr. Harris' pets, entirely fills one house and will fill another later. Those in 6-inch pots were especially fine, giving promise of great beauty in the fall. Under a new method of culture better results have been obtained than before, as shown by comparison. I should like to be able to tell about his method, but unfortunately I can't.

The new type of Boston fern with broad foliage, beautifully crested, habit compact, is very promising. It has not been decided whether this type is sufficiently distinct to merit a name. It is more than probable that Nephrolepis Harrisii will ere long be as famous as Lilium Harrisii. Mr. Harris believes that the only way to grow Bostons is in pots from the cradle up, so to speak, and that planting in the bench, except possibly for stock, is a mistake. Several large houses will be filled with these ferns. N. Piersoni is here on trial. Pandanus Veitchii and otaheite oranges complete the list of varieties now occupying the French plate glass houses. Mr. Harris is a believer in this glass for producing finely colored foliage and flowers. He also firmly believes in the automatic ventilators, which he thinks worthy of general use. The other foliage plants grown are rubbers, both single stem and branching in great profusion, arecas, kentias, Pandanus utilis, crotons and a few others.

The chrysanthemums for cuttings have just been benched. Of these, Florence Harris, which blooms about November 1, and Our Dear Friend, blooming at Thanksgiving, are each given a full center bench. Both are seedlings raised on the place, large in size, color a canary yellow. Mr. Harris considers Our Dear Friend as one of the best varieties obtained during the past ten years. He has not disseminated the stock of either, believing it better to keep these gems at home. Grace, a light sport from Maud Dean, is another variety of merit given a place of honor. Ivory, pink and white Mrs. Jones, Maud Dean and Major Bonaffon are also here. Gardenias are planted out in the bench, grown in one of the small houses and will be forced again this season. The quantity of bulbs forced will be increased next season.

Very large quantities of Easter plants will be grown as in the past. Several houses have just been reglazed. Outside 4,000 Hydrangea Otaksa in 6 and 7-inch pots, to say nothing of a couple of thousand smaller plants, make a fine display in the frames. They are plunged in hops and sand. Climbing Clothide Soupert is planted out, also Ramblers. Peonies have done very well this season, the Flower Market averaging 6½ cents for the cut blooms.

Various Notes.

Edward Reid shipped 15,000 carnations, some Brides and Maids and 500 valley in one order to Wadena, Minn., one day last week.

F. & H. Mergenthaler are cutting some fine Kaiserins in quantity, also Brides and Maids.

Eugene Bernheimer has been receiving 10,000 sweet peas daily. He visited the Floral Exchange place at Edgely lately. The new house just completed is now planted with 3,000 Queen of Edgely. In one house the cut for last month was 39,787 roses. In this house the plants are all in solid beds, and a few rows of grafted stock look much better than their neighbors on their own roots. Another interesting house was one of tea roses that have been in for four years and will be left in another year.

John Holt, of North Wales, has been sending some snapdragon and other specialties to the Flower Market. He reports excellent business with the truckers in tomatoes, cabbage and other vegetable plants in his locality.

The Camden business has been very good. Thoirs has had a number of weddings and commencements and has been very busy.

C. W. Lamley also reports good business especially in the line of bedding plants.

Adolph Farenwald has had considerable trouble with the carpenters at work on his new houses, but has adjusted things satisfactorily and the houses are progressing nicely.

There have been a number of inquiries from seedsmen for young plants of Wootton rose for private planting. Here is a chance for somebody.

The following is to my brethren at Morrisville:

You will make a "scoop" today.
By wrtling about "The Moon."
"Phil" must work while you can play.
But things will be different soon.

PHIL.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Within the last week we have had the warmest weather San Franciscans have experienced for the last eight years. On Friday the thermometer climbed up to 90 degrees in the shade and on Saturday it registered 92 at 3 p. m. This may not seem hot to eastern folks, but to natives of this town it is something almost unheard of. Today, however, the temperature has moderated so much that overcoats are again in order and, as I write, the usual chilly ocean breeze almost makes me forget the torrid weather of two days ago. As a consequence, flowers, especially roses, have suffered severely and I have seen nothing for the last week that could be called first-class stock. Carnations have also that weak, washed-out appearance and Ethel Crocker seems to be about the only variety that is up to color. Some few good Flora Hill are exhibited and occasionally a showy bunch of Estelle is seen, but as to the other varieties, the less said the better.

Bride gladiolus and great bunches of herbaceous peonies help to fill in and it is surprising what use the first-class florists make of them. The general public is always looking for something new and although these flowers are not generally considered as especially "swell" they make a very tasty bouquet when arranged nicely. Sweet peas suffered considerably during the hot spell and burned edges are the rule, but with our usual chilly atmosphere they will be up to form in a day or two.

Various Notes.

I happened to pass through the aster and chrysanthemum district a few days ago and noticed that the crops in almost all the places I visited look very thrifty and speak well for an abundant harvest later on. What a pity that this branch of horticulture has passed almost entirely into the hands of the Chinese and the Japanese. It always seems to me there must be something radically wrong with our system of flower-growing and handling, when the white growers have to give way to Mongolians.

I saw three large cases of Kentia Belmoreana opened this week. Although they had been thirty days on the road the plants were in as good condition as when packed at the nursery. This kind of carefulness speaks well for the grower. They were from the Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O.

Several of our leading carnation growers have invested in boxes of Thrinseide and it is to be hoped it will fill the long-felt want.

The Portland Seed Co., of Portland, Ore., has had its representative in town all week booking orders for florists' moss. Oregon has become the great source of supply for this article.

Domoto Bros., the well known Japanese florists, are erecting on their grounds recently purchased at Fitchburg, four greenhouses 30x100 feet. They are to be devoted to growing roses principally, and American Beauty, Kaiserin, Bride, Maid and Liberty are to be the varieties planted. They will still retain their old place on Central avenue, on which they have made a specialty of Japanese plants, carnations and lilies.

The Misses Worn, on Post street, report a good June business. These ladies make a specialty of decorating and they seem to have the cream of the orders in that line. They have been very successful and, although many of their wealthy patrons are out of town at this season, June weddings have kept them on the jump.

Benjamin Welch reports everything satisfactory in his Geary street store.

MT. STERLING, KY.

Trade in Mt. Sterling is better than in ten years, demand much greater than supply, especially in fine stock, while trashy stock cannot be sold at any price. Our customers have been educated to the highest standard of floriculture, which means high prices.

In looking around over the different towns it makes one feel that some of the florists have no other conception of the business than to stuff the houses full of a lot of straggling, sickly plants, telling their competitors: "I can raise more plants in a given area of glass than anybody else, and don't you forget it." I have seen one house, 50x60 feet, with at least 6,000 plants in it, in from 2½ to 5-inch pots touching each other. Oh! such plants!

Wake up, brother florist, and raise nothing but plants that throw credit on our profession. The twentieth century has outgrown the "it's good enough." Fine specimens are what most people want. It does not cost a cent more to raise good plants than poor ones. Supposing you raise ten 10-cent plants, for which you get $1.00. It takes ten pots, requires from two to three transplantings and takes about six square feet of space; while fine specimens worth $1.00 each can mostly be raised in 5 to 7-inch pots and will require less space. My experience is that well grown plants will bring good returns from start to finish.

EMIL FREDRICH.

MILWAUKEE.

The last club meeting was well attended. C. B. Whitnall gave an interesting talk on his observations in California. Considerable convention business is being now taken up and special meetings will be held from now on. F. H. Holton has sent out sketch of the Exposition building, with diagram of the floor space, and exhibitors should not overlook the opportunity of making a display here. Send in applications for space early, so the committee in charge will not be overrushed at the last minute. The club also bowls twice a month and a strong team will be in the running during the convention.

Trade has been brisk the past week. Many of the schools are having their commencement exercises, and, coupled with June weddings, it keeps stock cleaned up.

STORING BAY TREES.

What is the best temperature to keep bay trees through the winter? Will they keep in a cold greenhouse or grapery?

S. S. P.

Anywhere between the freezing point and 40 to 45 degrees would be the ideal temperature for them but, like many other plants, they accommodate themselves to a great change. For years we kept them in a cool greenhouse, but they are bulky things to occupy valuable space and we now have a shed with plenty of light and a few 1½-inch hot water pipes. We just try to keep the frost out and no more. A cold grapery would be a splendid place to winter bays but, if there are no means of heating, the grapery may get too cold in zero weather. As many florists from Europe know, the sweet bay is a hardy shrub or dwarf tree in the south of England and survives any winter that does not go below 10 degrees above zero. Yet, in the artificial way we grow them, it would not be safe to subject them to anything like so low a temperature. We have left them outdoors all through the early frosts in autumn and perhaps in early December they have been subjected to 15 degrees of frost without harm. But should you keep them all winter in a temperature of 40 degrees and in March, say, suddenly exposed them to 15 degrees of frost, it would kill them. Keep them just above freezing.

BOILER FOR HOT WATER.

I intend purchasing a tubular steam boiler for use for a hot water system. The size is 40-45 inches diameter, 30 flues, 3½-inch, 16 feet long. How many feet of 4-inch pipe will it heat? Also, what is your opinion of the above style of boiler for the purpose? R. F. G.

The boiler described would have capacity for heating about 7,000 feet of 4-inch pipe for hot water. Such a boiler would give excellent results at most economical cost.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

PIPING.

I have two houses 15x50 without partition walls, glass on ends and one row of glass 16x16 on the sides. The gutters are seven feet from the ground and the ridges about 11 feet. I want to heat this with hot water in 2-inch pipes to a temperature for roses. The main flow would run 35 feet through another house before reaching the house to be heated. How shall I pipe?

J. C. F. C.

For the hot-water heating of the rose house 30x50 feet, twenty lines of 2-inch pipes will be required, the arrangement of the pipes depending upon the arrangement of benches, walks and doors, and also being governed by the grade or level of house. The flow and return mains should each be 3½-inch inside, or in any case not less than 3-inch, but the larger size is to be preferred.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

PIPING TO BOILERS.

When using a 60 and a 30 horse-power return tubular boiler hitched together for heating ten or twelve houses 22x100 with steam, first, what sizes should the flow be from each boiler to the houses? Second, what size the return from the houses to each boiler? Should they have check valves. Each house has 1,000 feet of 1½-inch pipe. Boilers are low but much water comes out of the air cocks.

CONSTANT READER.

The 60 horse-power boiler should have a 7-inch steam main and a 4½-inch return. A 6-inch main and a 3½-inch return would answer if five pounds pressure is maintained. The 30 horse-power boiler should have a 5-inch steam and 3-inch return connection. The steam main to each of the greenhouses should be a 2½-inch, with a 1½-inch return connection. The main return to each boiler should be provided with a swing check valve for an extra precaution, but such valves are not an absolute necessity if the pipes are so arranged that there is a complete circulation at all times.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

The Market.

Business still continues in a very healthy state in spite of the lateness of the season. Wedding decorations and commencements furnish the largest calls, but there is also a large amount of funeral work. Julius Baer had four large weddings on last Wednesday and they required large quantities of flowers, besides greens, etc.

Flowers of all kinds are anything but plentiful and many more could be disposed of to good advantage. Prices are averaging high for this season of the year and good stock brings as much as in the dead of winter. Really good stock is very scarce. Roses are small and in many cases poorly colored. Many of them are mildewed, which reduces their value, but owing to the scarcity, they all sell. American Beauties are improving a great deal. Then, too, the majority of the short ones that come in now, are being cut from new stock which is full of vitality and throws better blooms. Kaiserins are doing nicely, but it is not much of a rose to ship, as it bruises so easily. Meteor and Liberty are very scarce.

Of carnations there are not half enough to fill all orders. Anything that looks like a carnation sells. The quality of the stock received is much better than one would expect at this time of year. Some fine longiflorum lilies are coming in. Lilium candidum is also to be had in quantity. Coreopsis sells very well. Sweet peas are still scarce, but the outdoor ones are improving in quality. Green goods of all kinds are plentiful.

Club Meeting.

On Saturday evening the annual meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held. The election of a board of directors for the ensuing year resulted as follows: Geo. Murphy, L. H. Kyrk, Wm. Schuman, Ben. George and C. J. Ohmer. They will elect the officers. A committee consisting of C. J. Ohmer, George Murphy and Mr. Kunzleman was appointed with full power to act in the matter of an outing.

An invitation was extended by D. Rusconi, the well known Cincinnati bulb man, to the Cincinnati Florists' Club to hold its first summer meeting at his residence in Covington, Ky. Mr. Rusconi told of the many Italian dishes that he would serve to those who would come, to say nothing of a cellar full of lately imported Italian wines. The society accepted the invitation with many thanks and the time was set for Thursday, July 9.

E. G. Gillett and Geo. Murphy were appointed a committee to choose the official S. A. F. convention route. They will have full charge of the matter and a letter addressed to either of them as to rates, times of departure, sleeper, etc., will be promptly attended to. All those who go through this city on their way to the convention are invited to join the Cincinnati party.

The two S. A. F. medals to be awarded by the Cincinnati Florists' Society for meritorious plant or flower of American origin were awarded as follows: The silver medal to George & Allan for plant of adiantum; a decided improvement over cuneatum; a much more vigorous grower; throwing fronds 24 inches and over in length. The bronze to Richard Witterstaetter, for carnation Adonis, which needs no introduction. These are subject to the approval of the S. A. F.

Chas. Weltz, of Wilmington, O., was a visitor. C. J. OHMER.

BOSTON.The Market.

The past week has been another staggerer. Growers and salesmen have been fairly wallowing in roses and carnations and seemingly what little trade there was has been for the little odds and ends that are inclined to be more scarce. Somehow or other all this stock has been floated somewhere, with really none too much assistance of the hospital man. Prices, of course, run low, and when comparisons are made with one short year ago we find we are selling good material for much smaller figures than prevailed then. Good material holds out remarkably well, but is now beginning to limber up a little. However, it is an uninteresting proposition at best.

Notes.

Robinson, the "green goods" man, is developing quite a business in connection with his Columbus avenue laurel swamps. His order for decoratives for Harvard, via Contractor Carbone, is keeping him busy just now. They say, too, he has lately drawn $15,000 in a German lottery. Perhaps he is not so green as he—I mean, as his business looks. Pardon the "lapsus penguine."

We all suffer alike from the drought, but so far as I have heard McCarthy is the only florist who is a loser by the forest fires. About fifty acres of his Montrose property were scorched over. The extent of the damage cannot yet be determined.

Among the crop of June weddings is that of Maurice Hambro, of the firm of Hambro & Gomperts, which came off June 14.

The manufacturers of the Cefrey florists' letter, finding it hard to make the business stand alone, have sold out to N. F. McCarthy & Co. This purchase on his part removes this competition in the manufacture of his Boston letter. The field is now open for a fair trial between the latter and Sutherland's Koral letter, for which there is a growing demand.

Lawrence Cotter has taken the superintendency of Thomas Dee's place.

Prof. C. S. Sargent, his son, A. R. Sargent, and John Muir, of Arnold Arboretum, have sailed for Europe on a search for botanical specimens.

The rose show at Horticultural Hall was held Tuesday and Wednesday, the date having been moved forward one week because of the forwardness of the season. J. S. MANTER.

CANANDAIGUA, N. Y.

This has been an unusually good season for all the florists and trade is still holding up well. Bedding plant trade was good.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club held a banquet June 11 in honor of Charles H. Totty, of Madison, N. J. Mr. Totty formerly resided here and we all enjoyed seeing him once more. He gave a very interesting talk on the big exhibition next fall.

The long looked for rains have come and carnations in the fields are fine.

Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Walter P. Stokes, Philadelphia; First Vice-Pres., Chas. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y and Treas., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn. The twenty-first annual convention will be held at Philadelphia and Atlantic City, June 23, 24 and 25, 1903.

THE Carney Seed Co. has been organized at Dayton, O., to deal in farm seeds and machinery.

THE insurance on the H. W. Buckbee seed stock at Rockford, Ill., destroyed by fire June 4, is reported as $78,000.

THE Albert Dickinson Seed Company has sold a tract of 33 acres on the Calumet river, South Chicago, for $217,250.

REPORTS from Manitowoc state that notwithstanding the light frost of last week, peas show up in excellent condition.

THE Wisconsin Seed Co. has been organized at Milwaukee by Ernest Reel, formerly with S. Courteen, and Frank Hase.

THE name of the John R. Watts Seed Co., Louisville, Ky., has been changed to National Seed Co. There is no change in the management.

THERE are no developments in the French bulb situation. The latest advices at hand in Chicago indicate prices at Ollioules as about 90 francs.

W. ATLEE BURPEE, of Philadelphia, has issued invitations to members of the seed trade and their friends for "a day at Fordhook," Saturday, June 27.

In the bean-growing districts of Michigan heavy rains have greatly reduced the prospects of a good bean crop, and unless conditions speedily change the outlook will be worse than poor.

JOHN C. LEONARD and Miss Helen M. Gale were married June 16, at the Church of the Redeemer, Chicago, in the presence of a large gathering of their friends, and left, after the reception, for a two months' tour of southern California. The groom is a son of S. F. Leonard and treasurer of the Leonard Seed Co.

THE condition of the growing seed crops generally has been very materially affected by the weather. Frosts in some Wisconsin pea growing sections have hurt many of the varieties, especially the extra early kinds. Lack of rain in the bean sections, too much rain where vine seeds are grown and the unfavorable conditions for getting a start on sweet corn makes the outlook at this time rather unpromising.

Late advices from the bean growing sections of New York state are not very encouraging. The drought having exterminated the hay crop and prevented the planting of corn, the farmers are not disposed to accept seed bean contracts and are devoting their energies toward getting a crop of hay and corn for their stock for the coming winter. The same is also true of the vine seeds grown in Washington county, of that state. The early pea crop is also reported as having been badly injured by the drought; not over 60 per cent of a crop is predicted, and the crop is not yet safe from future mishaps. Some early and late sorts promise a better yield. Future conditions may greatly alter the prospects.

At Chicago the onion set crop has been retarded by cool weather and lack of rain. The present outlook is not as good as it was some two weeks back. The maggot is working and bare spots show in many places where the seed came up strong at first. At other onion set sections reports are not favorable. This, with the addition of the serious loss to the set crop, occasioned by the floods, is likely to cause a very short crop of sets.

PHILADELPHIA.—The long drought is at an end, but has seriously affected the 1903 crop of seeds in this locality. Radishes, beets, turnips, rutabagas, spinach, tomato and onion seeds will be less than 50 per cent of the expected yield. The late rains will greatly benefit the onion set situation, but it must be remembered that not more than 50 per cent of the usual quantity of seed was sown for the 1903 crop. The large onion crop from sets is also a failure and the market is being supplied by importations from Bermuda and Egypt. The failure of the large onion crop means no seed bulbs for the planting of the 1904 crop. Much of the early planting of sugar corn has failed to germinate, presumably on account of the dry weather, and the demand for second and late planting has been very heavy. The dry weather has also greatly retarded the planting of field corn and, as the season is now well advanced, the demand for early maturing varieties is unprecedented; both white and yellow flint are completely exhausted. Millets, cow peas, soja beans, crimson clover and amber cane are in heavy demand, the timothy and clover crops for hay being an entire failure. The mail trade for May and June was considerably below the average. The Ely Seed Co. is seeking new quarters because of the expiration of their lease on Market street.

SAMPLES OF SEEDS.

Robert B. Armstrong, assistant secretary of the treasury, issued the following order to officers of customs under date of June 9:

At the instance of the Secretary of Agriculture it is hereby directed that, commencing July 1, 1903, and continuing for one year, 2-ounce samples of all importations of 100 pounds or more of grass, clover and forage plant seeds be prepared at the earliest practicable date after entry and forwarded to the Seed Laboratory, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., labeled with names and addresses of consignors and consignees, name of seed as given in the invoice and quantity of the consignment.

SEEDSMEN'S PROGRAM.

Secretary S. F. Willard has mailed to members a very handsome program for the twenty-first annual meeting of the American Seed Trade Association at Atlantic City, N. J., June 23-25. Aside from the president's address, the reports of officers and committees, there is a very strong lot of papers promised, including the following: "Southern Forage Plants," Geo. B. McVay, Birmingham, Ala.; "The Importance of Accurate Descriptions of the Varieties of Garden Vegetables," W. W. Tracy, Washington; "Limiting our List of Varieties," Lester L. IN KENTUCKY.

Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky., write as follows:

"Up to about the first of June the weather was exceedingly dry and all crops, both in the garden and on the farm, were looking very badly. Since that time we have had a good deal of rain and everything has improved wonderfully. Onion sets now promise to be a fair crop and, while the acreage is not as much as last year, we do not anticipate much shortage. Orchard grass has been helped out wonderfully and now promises a pretty fair crop. Kale seed is looking well, as is Seven Top turnip for seed. The onion seed crop will be a fair one. The acreage this year is not as much as usual, but we are not anticipating high prices. Blue grass is reported to be somewhat shorter than last year. Red Top has suffered more or less from the dry weather and the price may be a little higher. Winter turf oats promise to make a good sized crop. There are thousands of acres of these grown in this locality and Louisville is now one of the principal markets on these.

"The demand for all kinds of seeds has kept up remarkably well all during the spring. In May the demand for millet and cow peas was somewhat slow, due to the weather conditions: in fact, no one could plow on account of the dry weather. Since the first of June there has been an unusual demand for these two items and prices have gone up considerably. Nearly all seed corn stocks in this market are exhausted, though there is a fair supply of most other seeds."

SAMUEL S. PENNOCK,

for June Weddings.

Wholesale Florist,
1612 Ludlow St., PHILADELPHIA.

DALLAS, TEXAS.

The past week closes the busy season for the retail and store florists. The season has been a busy one and the past two weeks have been unusually active. School commencements made a heavy demand for flowers, both in and out of the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Nitchie are on their way to visit the home of their childhood in Germany.

Otto Lang is settled in his newly furnished store, having completely overhauled the same.

The Haskell Avenue Floral Co. has its force busy getting in the rose cuttings for another season's business. They will try and double the output of the past season. They will put in about 100,000 in the first lot and this will be followed by from four to six more batches. They have about 50,000 carnations in the field and they are as heavy as they usually are in September, having been pinched back the third time.

LONE STAR.

TORONTO.

The changeable weather of the last few weeks has had a considerable effect upon the supply of cut flowers. The hot weather rushed in a heavy cut, many being of a very inferior grade. The cool weather coming on shortened the supply, but we now note that the quality is again coming up. Some very fine Brides and Maids for this time of the year are being sent in. Crowhurst, of Mimico, is sending in at present the finest Lawsons seen in the city. Stems and blooms as well as color are first-class. Peonies are with us in quantity and give us a lot of work for very little money. However they are an agreeable change and help to make a show.

Good Fortune is the Chum of Opportunity.

This is your chance to lay in a stock of Godfrey Aschmann's tip-top Araucaria Excelsa. Do it now and they will help to fill your treasure box; they will be growing into money for you while you're asleep. We are headquarters for this great favorite among decorative plants. Our houses are full of choice April importations—no seedlings—raised in Belgium from top cuttings only. Here is my very lowest quotation. Who can beat such stock as I offer for the money?

An arbitrary price list is impossible under present conditions, but for form's sake some sort of a list is necessary and so the above is ventured as an average, but when cleaning up hour arrives, everything goes for almost any price that is offered. When the wholesaler shows you about every seasonable flower in profusion and says "we can't give them away," some idea of the situation may be gained by those interested in cut flower quotations.

I wish to state that I am well pleased with Scott's Manual, which I got last year. It is very helpful. No florist should be without one. JOHN L. MEYER, Devon, Pa.

The market is on an even base, weddings and school exercises keeping the stock well cleaned up. Peas are much sought after for these occasions. In roses, Beauties lead, with Meteor a close second. Maids and Brides are small, but color good. Carnations are cleaning up well, but lower grades selling low.

FLORISTS' PUB. CO.,

Caxton Bldg., CHICAGO.

PITTSBURG.The Market.

Trade has been good and, with the usual weddings and school commencements, it should continue so for the balance of this month. Stock is of only ordinary quality. Large quantities of Maids, Brides and Kaisers are arriving, but to obtain 100 choice flowers it is necessary to go over 1,000 to get them. About the only fine flowers are Beauties. The demand for them is good, but prices very reasonable. The supply of carnations is still very heavy, especially on the poorer stock. The better grades, such as fancy white, pink and Prosperity, sell readily.

Local Notes.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. is handling quantities of sweet peas of very good quality, grown by Theo. Beckert, of Coreopolis.

Fred Burki is still cutting very good longiflorum lilies.

Charles Koenig has a very good lot of gladioli coming on.

The recent flower show at Belleville was well attended. Among the exhibitors were Fred Burki, H. P. Joslin, H. C. Frick and E. C. Ludwig.

Mrs. E. A. Williams' window display of gloxinias and gladioli is worth seeing. The gloxinias are simply perfect.

Randolph & McClements had charge of the Mathieu nuptials, which called for an elaborate decoration. Mrs. Williams had order for the large Willock-Christy wedding.

A. W. Smith is busy with several large decorations this week.

Breitenstein & Flemm are receiving their share of June wedding orders.

The Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co., at Bakerstown, is busy replanting the rose houses.

The Florists' Club has selected July 16 for its annual outing. The committee chose Ross Grove, the same place it has been held for the past few years.

E. C. Ludwig had a fine stock of candidum lilies last week, the only ones in the market.

The stock of bedding plants in this section is about all disposed of. All plantsmen report a very successful season.

Robert Nugent, who shot J. B. Ferguson, was found guilty of murder in the second degree.

Visitors: M. Rice and W. J. Boas, Philadelphia. Hoo-Hoo.

CARTHAGE, MO.—B. W. Speece has found trade good, a demand for everything he had to sell.

STAMFORD, CONN.—Mrs. A. Lindstrom will carry on the business of her husband, who died April 10. She has a good trade.

CLAY CENTER, KAN.—C. Humfeld reports that the floods did him much injury by shutting off communication for nearly two weeks.

NEW CASTLE, IND.—Several carloads of soil have recently been shipped to parties in neighboring states who wish to try it for roses.

FORCING TOMATOES.

Bulletin No. 81 of the University of Illinois Experiment Station, Urbana, Ill., is devoted to forcing tomatoes and contains much useful information on the subject. The results of a series of experiments are summarized as follows:

By checking the plants it is possible to secure fruit in fifty days from benching.

To secure fruit by Thanksgiving day the seed must be sown by July 20th and the plants benched not later than October 1st.

Pollen is not discharged during the cloudy weather and advantage must be taken of short periods of sunshine to pollinate by hand. Since the product is most valuable it will pay the grower to pollinate by hand regularly between December 1st and March 1st. The advantages are a larger number of fruits set, and larger, more uniform fruits.

A careful selection of varieties for the midwinter crop is requisite for the greatest success. Those varieties developed under forcing house conditions like Best of All and Lorillard give the best results.

Eclipse gave the largest yields both for the winter and spring crops of 1902. It is not quite so early as Best of All, but it produced the smoothest and most solid fruits.

The yield of Yellow Prince was decidedly inferior to that of the Combination grown under similar conditions.

Plants trained to single stems gave a much greater yield per square foot of bench than those trained to three stems, the yield of the former being one and one-fifth pounds against four-fifths of a pound for the latter.

The average yield for the season, 1901-'02, including both the winter and spring crop, was from two to nearly two and one-half pounds per square foot of bench, or from seven to almost nine pounds per stem.

TEMPERATURE.

One very important point in successful greenhouse work is temperature. In my opinion many failures are due to misuse of the all-important factor, heat. How very rare it is in this section to see a well grown cyclamen! In a walk through the markets nothing but poor, sickly specimens will be seen, due mainly to being kept too warm. And so it is with many other plants, primulas, cinerarias, etc. Cyclamen will develop beautifully in from 50 to 55 degrees, but this depends a good deal upon where the heating pipes are located. If the steam pipes are close to the bottom of the bench upon which the plants stand, obviously the roots must be in a considerably higher temperature than 55 degrees. Mrs. Lawson carnation develops finely here in a temperature of from 50 to 55 and grows nearly as large as exhibition blooms.

On a visit the other day to a grower near here I noticed a remarkable display of buds, but the blooms were small. It struck me at once that the plants were being forced, so I inquired as to temperature. We aim at 50 to 55 degrees, was the answer. For the moment I could not see where the cause of the difference could come in, but it occurred to me to look under the bench and there were the rows of steam pipes within three or four inches of the bottom of the same. Our heating pipes are hot water and two feet below the bench. In fact, the fine Mrs. Lawson grow in a solid bed. This grower thought it paid better to force, claiming to get quantity. For my part, I like to see them fully developed. With such evidence before us it seems to me that the correct thing would be to put the thermometer in the soil and read the temperature from there. I am satisfied that such a proceeding would show a wonderful range of temperature in the different growers' houses. T. H. W.

ANTS IN RELATION TO PLANTS.

It is very commonly supposed that ants are injurious to cultivated plants. This belief appears to be due to the very general occurrence of ants on fruit trees and other plants, rendering it almost impossible to pluck a twig from some trees without being inconvenienced by the ants. It is true that ants are found in enormous numbers on some plants, and that they frequently make nests at the roots, but it has never yet been definitely proved that they do any direct damage to the plants. The ants usually visit the tree or plant for a particular purpose, some instances of which will be cited.

Ants have frequently been recorded as being closely associated with insects known as "green fly," or aphids (aphides), visiting them to obtain their sweet secretion, commonly known as "honey dew." Cases are on record where the ants undoubtedly cared for the green fly, and made use of them in a manner comparable to man's treatment of such domestic animals as the cow.

Other insects, and notably the scale insects and mealy bugs, also excrete a sweet liquid which ants appear to like. Some species of these pests have a characteristic mealy covering, to which they owe their popular names. This covering the ants carry away, often completely stripping the insects.

Plants infested with scale insects or mealy bugs frequently swarm with ants, which may be observed continually going from one insect to another in search of food. Sometimes the ants erect shelters over the scale insects, and sheltered in this way from enemies the mealy bugs live in safety, repaying the ants for their care by supplies of honey dew. This mutual arrangement between the ants and the mealy bugs may lead indirectly to injury to the plant. Ants also make galleries up the stems of plants, under cover of which they ascend and in which scale insects may sometimes be found.

In all these cases the ants themselves do not appear to harm the plants. Any injury is, in all likelihood, due to the scale insects, and the ants must be acquitted of direct damage. It must be noted, however, that indirectly harm may at times result from their fostering care of the really injurious creatures—the scale insects and mealy bugs. Similarly, when ants infest the roots of plants, they are, in the majority of cases, to be found in association with scale insects. There is some reason to believe that, as mentioned above, ants may protect the scale insects from enemies, and may perhaps even carry the eggs or young insects to suitable places on the plants, and thus aid in distributing the scale insects. In cases, however, where ants have been prevented from visiting a plant infested with scale insects, there is no evidence to hand showing a consequent diminution in the numbers of the scale insects, and no good results have as yet been obtained by destroying the ants in preference to the scale insects. On the other hand, many cases of ants infesting plants are due solely to the presence of the scale insects or mealy bugs. The damage done by the latter is attributed to the former, but is easily remedied by destroying the scale insects or mealy bugs, and leaving the ants unmolested.

Many plants have what are known as extra-floral nectaries, which are nectar-excreting glands situated on other parts of the plant than the flowers. The castor-oil plant is an example of this kind. In this case the nectaries are little raised bodies, with a crater-like depression at the top, usually moist with the excreted sugary solution. These nectaries are visited abundantly by ants, which drink the sweet liquid. A plant which attracts a large number of ants to itself may find them of direct value, for they often appear to do good service in warding off caterpillars and other unwelcome visitors. It must not be supposed that it is necessarily a special, or, as some might urge, an intelligent adaptation on the part of the plant to entice the ants to itself. The nectaries play their own part in the life-history of the plant, and the ants merely take an advantage of them, with sometimes beneficial results to the plant.

On the whole, then, it would appear that the ants so commonly to be found on plants should not be looked upon in the first instance, at all events, as actual pests. They often indicate that a real pest, such as green fly, scale insects, or mealy bug, is present. At times they may increase to some degree the damage done by this pest. On the other hand, they may be visiting the plant on account of other inducements, and their presence may even be of direct service in warding off the attacks of harmful creatures.

For the destruction of ants, the fumes of burning sulphur driven into the nests, or a small quantity of cotton wool soaked with bisulphide of carbon appear to be convenient and effective remedies.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL by WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; Vice-Pres., F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

THERE is a shortage of help on the nurseries in central Illinois.

AFTER having met in convention cities three times in the past ten years, the nurserymen turned their backs on St. Louis for 1904.

DURING the nurserymen's convention at Detroit peonies to the value of from $4,000 to $5,000 changed hands. It was a business meeting of business men.

THE program is out for the seventh annual meeting of the American Park and Outdoor Art Association, to be held at Buffalo, July 7 to 9. A feature of the convention will be a trip to Niagara Falls, where an excellent entertainment has been planned. Chas. M. Robinson, Rochester, is secretary.

PEONY SOCIETY.

The American Peony Society was fully organized at Detroit, June 11, by the election of the following officers:

President, C. W. Ward, Queens, N. Y.; vice-president, Guy A. Bryant, Princeton, Ill.; secretary, A. H. Fewkes, Newton Highlands, Mass.; treasurer, J. H. Humphreys, Philadelphia, Pa.

It was voted to incorporate under the laws of New York, to make the life membership, $50, to hold an annual meeting in peony time and to divide the United States into six districts, each to be represented by a vice-president.

Committees were appointed as follows: Executive committee, the officers and C. S. Harrison, York, Neb.; E. A. Reeves, Cleveland, Ohio, and William A. Peterson, Chicago. Nomenclature committee, William A. Peterson, C. J. Malloy, Rochester, N. Y.; John A. Charlton, Rochester, N. Y.; J. F. Rosenfield, West Point, Neb.; A. H. Fewkes. Exhibition committee, Guy A. Bryant, E. A. Reeves, James Wheeler, Brookline, Mass. Press committee, C. Betscher, Canal Dover, Ohio; C. S. Harrison, J. H. Humphreys.

NURSERYMEN'S CONVENTION.

The twenty-eighth annual meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen, at Detroit, June 10 and 11, was one of the best in history. Nearly 300 were present and there was a lively interest in the program, while the usual amount of business was transacted between the members. President Ilgenfritz warned against over-production and brought up the matter of mutual insurance. A committee was appointed to prepare a plan and report next year. Prof. Bailey made his annual address and H. W. Collingwood held up the nurseryman so that he might see himself as some others see him. J. H. Hale discussed the relation of the nurseryman to his customers and Frank B. White presented one of the best of themes, advertising. F. W. Taylor told what the St. Louis World's Fair will do for nurserymen, Wm. Pitkin discussed insurance and E. W. Kirkpatrick told of nursery affairs in Texas. W. C. Barry was down for a paper on the importance of ornamental stock.

Prof. J. B. Smith for a talk on spraying and fumigating and Geo. A. Sweet for a discussion of the cost of a tree. The reports of committees were of the usual order. The treasury was found to contain $2,528, the receipts for the year being $1,495.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, N. W. Hale; vice-president, F. A. Weber, St. Louis; secretary, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; treasurer, C. L. Yates, Rochester. Atlanta, Ga., was selected as the next meeting place. On Wednesday afternoon the party visited the estate of Joseph H. Berry, at Grosse Pointe Farms, and on Thursday went to Belle Isle Park.

During the convention the Nurserymen's Mutual Protective Association and the American Nurserymen's Protective Association met, listened to reports and re-elected officers, as has been their custom for years. RAG.

PACIFIC COAST NURSERYMEN.

The second annual session of the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen was held at Portland, Ore., June 5. Among those present were: S. A. and George Miller, Milton, Ore.; A. Eckert & Son, Detroit, Wash.; C. F. Lansing, M. McDonald, A. M. Gill and F. W. Powers, of Salem; Albert Brownell, Albany; F. W. Settlemier, Woodlawn; J. B. Filkington, Portland; James Skinner, St. John; T. V. Sherman, Mount Tabor; F. C. Walker and H. A. Lewis, Russellville; A. Holiday, Scappoose; C. A. Tonneson, Tacoma; Louis and Marx Remlinger, Vancouver; J. A. Stewart, Christopher, Wash.; H. Freeborough, Montaville; R. A. Lamberson and George Lamberson, Portland; Hon. E. L. Smith, Hood River; A. Van Holderbeke, Tacoma, and Professor Rodgers, College Place, Wash.

The following officers were elected: S. A. Miller, Milton, president; C. A. Tonneson, Tacoma, secretary-treasurer, and a vice-president for each state. The next meeting, in June, 1904, is to be held at Hood River. The American Association of Nurserymen was invited to hold its 1905 convention at Portland during the Lewis and Clark Exposition.

MOLES AND MICE.

I am moved to reply to the note headed "Moles and Mice" in the last issue of the REVIEW, although to attempt to answer a question practically "given up" by W. S. is perhaps presumptuous, particularly on the part of one of the sex for the professional or business abilities of which he often betrays a wholesome (?) contempt.

I have never had any experience with the ground mice mentioned, but have had altogether too much with the moles. Having a large yard which we are very proud of, we were in despair for a couple of years when the moles so undermined it that it was almost impossible to mow it with a lawn mower. Somewhere we saw ricinus seed suggested as a remedy for the torments. Like the butter on the sick baby's elbow, we thought it "could do no harm" and tried it. Since then, some three or four years, we are careful to keep a half pound or so of the castor oil beans on hand and whenever one of the unsightly mounds appears we simply plant some of the beans by thrusting them down into the runway at several points, and in a short time the loosened earth settles back and we know the unwelcome invader has dug his own grave. Not infrequently we find the carcass above ground.

I know nothing of what effect the ricinus would have on the mice but it might be a good plan to leave some around handy for them. Hoping to escape being withered by W. S. for an "old maid's notion," I am respectfully,

1903 Florists' Peonies 1903

Sept. 1 to 15 delivery. We offer the following list of Peonies which have been grown by us for several years for cut flower purposes. The stock has been carefully grown, bloomed the third year and rouged while in bloom. All are good bloomers and shippers and all varieties have been culled out and destroyed that do not flower freely. Prices include packing and a discount of 5 per cent. will be given on all orders where cash is received with the order. The wet Fall and Spring have been very favorable for the growth of peony roots and our stock will be found in excellent condition.

Officinalis Section.

These are the earliest to bloom of all the peonies and for this reason are very desirable, as they furnish cut flowers a week before the Chinensis Section are in bloom.

No. 5. Officinalis Rosea Superba. Brilliant salmon pink tinged rose, 5 to 6-inch bloom; a pure, clear, true shade of pink without any magenta; the most pleasing of the officinalis section; the first good, early, clear pink peony. 300 plants, 3 to 5 eyes, at $25.00 per 100.

No. 208. Officinalis Rubra. The old-fashioned deep crimson peony of Colonial days. 1000 strong plants, 6 to 8 eyes, at $10.00 per 100.

No. 212. Officinalis Rosea. The old-fashioned deep pink variety of our grandmothers' gardens. 600 strong clumps, 6 to 8 eyes, at $10.00 per 100.

No. 198. Officinalis Mutabilis Alba. Opens rosey flesh, fading to blush white; very double 5-inch bloom; the earliest white peony. 500 good plants, 3 to 5 eyes, $20.00 per 100.

Chinensis Section.

This is the most useful of the different sections. The flowers are larger than the Officinalis and are borne upon longer, stronger stems and are richly fragrant. The blooms are especially valuable for cut flower purposes and are consumed in enormous quantities in the cut flower markets of Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Buffalo, Chicago and other large cities. The sorts we offer have been thoroughly tested for a number of years and the blooms sold upon the New York, Philadelphia, Buffalo and other markets where they are in steady demand.

Early White Varieties.

No. 4. Queen Victoria. Guards light rose, center creamy white, with a few petals edged or tipped with light pink, flower finishing white. Good grower, 24-inch stem. 5 to 5½-inch bloom, very free, fragrant ships well and is a good keeper, a standard double white peony for all purposes. 500 strong plants, 4 to 5 eyes, at $25.00 per 100.

No. 200. Achillea. Guards delicate rose, center delicate rosey flesh fading to creamy white; vigorous, erect grower; strong stem, 30 to 36 inches long; bloom 6 inches in diameter; a chaste, beautiful variety; good keeper and shipper. 500 plants, 3 to 4 eyes, at $20.00 per 100.

No. 270. Marie Lemoine. (Early variety.) Guards delicate rose with center of blush white, flower finishes a tender bluish white; strong 30 to 34-inch stem; erect, vigorous habit; 5-inch bloom; delicate, pleasing fragrance; good keeper; abundant bloomer. 300 fine roots, 3 to 5 eyes, $20.00 per 100.

Early Pink Varieties.

No. 201. Grandiflorum Roseum. (Sometimes known as L L L Pink.) Bright rose with silvery reflex, general effect clear, bright silvery rose; vigorous grower; 28-inch stem; 5-inch bloom; strong, rich fragrance; exceptionally free bloomer; good keeper and shipper. 600 strong plants, 6 to 8 eyes, $20.00 per 100.

Early Red Varieties.

No. 71. Rubra Triumphans. Entire bloom a most brilliant shade of crimson throughout; vigorous, erect grower; stem 30 to 36 inches long; bloom 5 to 6 inches in diameter; the best very early dark red peony. 200 strong plants, 4 to 8 eyes, at $15.00 per 100.

No. 271. Rosea Grandiflora. Guards deep red-dish rose, center light rose tipped with light pink; strong, erect grower; 30-inch stem; 6 to 7-inch bloom; delicate fragrance; extra free bloomer; a distinct, striking variety; ships and keeps well. 100 strong plants, 3 to 5 eyes, $20.00 per 100.

Mid-Season White Varieties.

No. 9. Pulcherrima. (Early mid-season.) Guards white, veined rose pink, center very full, creamy white; strong, erect grower; 2½ to 24-inch stem; 5 to 5½-inch bloom; very fragrant, free bloomer; ships and keeps well; a first-class white for all purposes. 500 plants, 4 to 8 eyes, at $20.00 per 100.

No. 203. (Sometimes sold as Humea Alba.) (Early mid-season.) Guard delicate silvery pink, center creamy yellow fading to ivory white; vigorous grower; 30 to 36-inch stem; 6 to 6½-inch bloom; rich, delicate fragrance; very free bloomer; ships and keeps well; one of the best of its class. 200 one year plants, 3 to 5 eyes, at $30.00 per 100.

Mid-Season Pink Varieties.

No. 1. Lohengrin. Guards deep rose, center light rose with a few crimson tipped petals; vigorous grower; 18 to 24-inch stem; 5 to 6-inch bloom; delicate, rich fragrance; free bloomer; good keeper and shipper. 200 plants, 4 to 6 eyes, at $15.00 per 100.

No. 49. Rosea Elegans. Guards light rosy pink edged white, center bright rose tipped white, surrounded with creamy white collar; strong, erect grower; 30 to 36-inch stiff stem; 5 to 6-inch high-built bloom; free bloomer; delicate, rose fragrance; good keeper and shipper. 50 plants, 4 to 6 eyes, at $25.00 per 100.

No. 206. Baron Rothschild. Guards deep rose with reddish tinge, center lighter rose shaded with rosy cream; vigorous grower; 26 to 30-inch stem; 5-inch bloom; exceptionally free bloomer. 500 very strong plants, 8 to 10 stalks, at $6.00 per 100.

No. 2. Edulis Superba. (Syn. Pink Beauty.) Guards bright rose, center silvery rose; good grower; 20 to 24-inch stem; 5 to 6-inch bloom; free bloomer; delicate fragrance; good keeper and ships well. 500 plants, 8 to 10 eyes, at $8.00 per 100.

No. 3. Queen Emma. Guard petals light rose pink, center opens creamy white, fading to blush white, with a tuft of flesh pink petals in center; flower 5 inches in diameter; strong, 24-inch stem; good grower; free bloomer; keeps and ships well. 300 strong plants, 3 to 5 eyes, at $10.00 per 100.

Late Pink Variety.

No. 11. Humei. (Syns. Humei Rosea, Edulis and Thorbeckii.) Entire bloom pure, bright, deep rose; very vigorous grower; 24 to 28-inch stem; 6 to 7 inches deep; full, heavy bloom; strong, rich, cinnamon fragrance; one of the finest colored of the very late peonies. 1000 strong plants, 4 to 8 eyes, at $8.00 per 100.

Late Red Variety.

No. 259. Grandiflora Rubra. Entire flower deep blood red, forming a huge globe 7 to 8 inches in diameter; strong, vigorous grower; stands handling; ships and keeps well; 30 to 34-inch stem; one of the latest as well as one of the largest. 200 strong roots, 4 to 5 eyes, at $20.00 per 100.

To get the best results Peonies should be planted as early in September as possible.

Orders accepted strictly in rotation. 5 per cent. discount for cash with order.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The various florist establishments are taking on their usual mid-summer appearance. Benches that were filled to overflowing a month ago are empty and ready for another start for a fall crop of some kind. Many will be planted to mums. We are to have a show this fall and it is for this that these early plantings are made. We have some crack mum growers in our city and some grand blooms should be seen this fall. The rose growers are in the midst of replanting and some of the carnation growers are preparing to replant early this summer. Qualities in roses and carnations are poor with but few exceptions, mostly Crocker and F. Hill. Peonies are gone and like the chrysanthemums we are glad to see the first ones and are just as glad to see the last ones. They sold well. There are good supplies of hardy flowers from the fields, except in white. Funeral work stuff is really scarce just now and will be so until asters come in.

Last week was graduation week at the high school and on account of the class having chosen the daisy as their flower there was a great demand for anything that looked like a daisy. One party sold 10,000 daisies and another firm sold 6,000 coreopsis.

There have been many weddings that required decorations of average quality, but the decorations that Wiegand put up for the Russell-Lilly wedding was one of the finest things that the writer has ever had the pleasure to see. In the church they used their large specimen palms to excellent advantage and these, with large quantities of cut roses, made a great show.

At the house they used a lot of fancy-leaved caladiums and when the lights were turned on these made a rich mass of color that was simply grand. There ought to be a great future for these fancy-leaved caladiums for high-class decorating. Only roses were used in the way of cut flowers, but there were thousands of these and the way they were arranged showed a high degree of artistic skill.

The Bertermann place, on East Washington street, was struck by lightning June 7 and a great deal of glass broken.

KANSAS CITY.

Business was quiet all last week, but from the actions of all the buyers at the wholesale houses this morning every one anticipates some business this week. Everything was bought up at once.

The Alpha Floral Co. has dissolved partnership, A. Ebberfield buying out Max Eller.

Mrs. Edgar, one of our first lady florists, is closing her place of business for the summer and going to Colorado for her health.

John Schneider, our oldest Wall street florist, has closed for the summer and can now be found at his country place south of the city.

W. L. Rock has returned from a fishing trip, but he does not say how successful it was.

Byrns & Katzung, of Leavenworth, Kan., have become buyers in our market and they seem to be doing a good business in the city and with the soldiers, at Fort Leavenworth.

Carl N. Stark is a visitor today from Holdenville, Ind. Ter. L. M. S.

CLEVELAND.

Cleveland has been blessed with several nice rains, and everything is growing finely, especially carnations in the fields, and the plants will be ready for very early planting. Outdoor sweet peas are coming in and are very nice. The demand for all flowers is good and June promises to be the banner month for the florists. Our normal school commencement was held on Tuesday and all the high school commencements come on the 18th, which means a big week.

There have been a number of large weddings this season, but nothing to compare with the floral display at the Hanna-McCormick wedding, for which President and Miss Roosevelt came on from Washington. The J. M. Gasser Co. and Smith & Fetters had the decoration. The presence of the President and many other distinguished guests made a busy week socially and gave all the leading florists good business. E.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.—Announcement is made of the marriage of John R. Fotheringham and Miss Adelyn L. Coley, which took place June 11. Mr. Fotheringham is widely known in the trade through his connection with the F. R. Pierson Co.

BALTIMORE.

Hail.

We have had a week of phenomenally cool weather, and on one day a hail storm of unusual violence. Fortunately the latter was limited in its extent and we hear of no great damage done. C. Hess, Edw. Kress and Wm. Christie lost some glass, the first named being protected by insurance, and a great many sweet peas were destroyed, with some other outdoor stock.

The Market.

Trade the past week was not overactive in the fore part, considerable more stock accumulating than the demand required, but toward the end calls were more pressing and most of the material in sight was worked off at figures which are on the declining grade. This week will about conclude the commencement season, and from now on for some months to come a very much less volume of business may naturally be expected. A good many houses are being emptied and planting out is in order. Doubtless the demand and supply will quickly adjust themselves to the situation. Some fine white Cochet roses grown under glass are now in evidence, but the character of almost all other stock is declining.

Death of W. H. Perat.

It will not be out of place to record here the death of one who, though not a gardener or florist in the general acceptance of these terms, yet was both in reality—Wm. H. Perat. This gentleman was for many years president of the Maryland Horticultural Society, and by his intelligent interest in the cultivation of plants and the production of flowers probably did more than any other single citizen to develop a taste for this branch of gardening. He was a merchant, doing a large business, and with a great fondness for horticultural pursuits, which he followed with a knowledge at once practical and unusual. He was not content, as other men of wealth generally are, to erect a range of glass, employ a gardener and enjoy the products. On his beautiful estate, which was a model of neatness, and on which could be found the best kept lawns and the rarest and finest specimens of all kinds of ornamental trees, he built modern houses in which was one of the earliest and most complete collections of plants ever gathered in this locality. He was acquainted with all of them, knew the treatment they required, and was able with his own hands to attend to the details of their cultivation, which he took great pleasure in doing. His collection of orchids was one of the most valuable ever gathered in Maryland. Mr. Perat's fondness for gardening was contagious and influenced many of his friends to follow his example. He was a man of the highest character, of unimpeachable mercantile honor and greatly respected in the community. B.

Chas. T. Siebert, Station B, Pittsburgh, Pa.

KIND WORDS NEVER DIE.

Bellevue, Pa.

Chas. T. Siebert:—Please book my order for 100 lbs. of Zinc Never Rust Glazing Points. I have used five different kinds in the past 12 years, and none of them gave me satisfaction like yours. They will stay in, are easy to drive, no rights or lefts, will hold the glass in place, and do not rust away like all others I have used. Your Zinc Points are easy to take out when making repairs. I have used about 100 lbs. of your Zinc Points in the last two years, and I am perfectly satisfied with them.

Yours truly,

F. BURKI.

Cleveland, Ohio.

Chas. T. Siebert:—In our 25 years' experience with glazing points of all kinds, I can say your zinc points are the best to date.

CHAS. H. WILSON,

Mgr. for Grant-Wilson Floral Co.

Lockland, Ohio.

Chas. T. Siebert:—I must say the Zinc Points have given great satisfaction. I have over 100 lbs. on my houses, and feel justified in stating that they are the best point on the market.

Yours respectfully,

W. K. PARTRIDGE, Florist.

"Thripscide"

(REGISTERED)

Greenhouse Fumigating Powder

Is the newest and best article on the market to-day for the complete destruction of all insects that infest Greenhouses or Conservatories, being a special boon to Rose and Beauty growers and prepared particularly for the destruction of Greenfly and Thrips. There is nothing injurious in it to plant life, even the most delicate fern. It is especially recommended for Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Smilax, Asparagus, Palms, Ferns, etc., and we claim that insects will be entirely eradicated when the houses are thoroughly fumigated with the powder. It is put up as follows:

1 lb. Tin Can.....$.25
5 lb. Tin Can..... 1 00
25 lb. Sealed Box..... 4 50
100 lb Sealed Box.....16.50

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Too Much Rain.

Many parts of the country that experienced a severe drought, have, for the past two weeks, had almost too much rain and a low temperature. Look out for plants like azaleas, acacias, etc., which are plunged in frames in pots. See that they do not stand in an inch of water, nor yet let the pots fill up with water, because it does not pass off. These conditions would be most harmful to any so-called hard-wooded plants, and if aggravated would be death.

With land that is not actually flooded, the excessive rains do no harm, except that it is hard to keep weeds down. Last year we read of many large growers, notably around the big city of Chicago, having great difficulty in preparing their rose and carnation compost in June and July, and we in a small way are experiencing some of these troubles just now. Soil handled when wet or in a sticky state is in very poor condition for good root action, and no treatment that can be given it after it is once in the house can restore it to its proper natural condition.

The Compost Shed.

This leads me to believe that in all establishments, large and small, a soil shed is a most essential feature of a grower's plant. It need not be boarded up on the sides; in fact, it is all the better not to be so. I use a good, sharp pitch to the roof and have it high enough for a wagon to pass under it, and wide enough so that rain storms cannot drive through it. The floor of the shed should, of course, be a few inches higher than the surrounding ground. Here men can work chopping and mixing the compost in any weather. There is always plenty of fine weather in fall or spring to haul your soil to the shed and plenty of opportunity to cart it to the houses, but when entirely unprotected there are often serious and annoying delays. Such a shed for piling up a thousand loads of sod I remember seeing at the Dale Estate, in Ontario.

Sod for Roses.

It is a little out of season to go into the question as to whether sod is better ploughed and piled up in the fall or in the early spring. You will notice in very large establishments that some of the rose beds show little evidence of the sod, it being pretty well rotted, and in other beds the grass from the sod is growing lively, or trying to, having recently been ploughed and carted into the beds. And in results there has been little difference except that the fresh sod has given you much labor to keep down the grass. I will venture my humble opinion that sod procured in very early spring is better for roses than that stacked up six months earlier, for in the decomposition of the fibre and roots there is a chemical change going on that is beneficial to the roots of the roses and many other plants. If this is not the case, then all the benefit there is in sod is purely mechanical. It is raining hard again as I write, so I repeat, whether it is for sod, well rotted compost, manure or leaf mold, let us have a roof over it so we can work.

Asparagus.

Last week I meant to say a little more about plants that furnish us with green sprays, which are almost as necessary nowadays as the roses and carnations. Next in importance to the graceful ferns are the several species of asparagus. Growing A. plumosus is rather confined to the specialists who have lofty houses, giving it more height to grow than many of our houses afford. Still, when you have from nine to ten feet from the surface of the bed to the glass, it is profitable enough. Both A. plumosus and A. Sprengeri are simple plants to grow if their principal requirement, root room, is remembered. But to return to the beautiful plumosus, for it is the most graceful of them, if strings are desired, it should have six or eight inches of soil on the surface of the house, with no boards, tile, or stone between it and mother earth. If the natural soil of the house is dug and heavily manured a foot below the surface, you will have a still stronger growth. But whether you raise the bed a foot above the surface or prepare the soil of the good growth it ceases to send out its useful and profitable sprays. If given a bed with 18 inches of rich soil (I should prefer it raised above the surface of the house) and planted in July, you can cut grand sprays continuously for the next twelve months. I have more than once alluded to a rose grower in central New York who has a connecting range of rose houses with no partitions, and beneath the gutters he has a lot of imported glass boxes. You know, perhaps, that European glass comes 100 feet to a box. So these boxes, which held 16x24 glass, are two feet long, sixteen inches deep, and nine or ten inches wide. These are filled with rich, heavy soil and three plants of A. Sprengeri are planted in each. The roots can go down sixteen inches and won't get exhausted in a few months. It is a great success and goes a long way toward paying the fuel bill. It is entirely an extra crop, without in the slightest detracting from the welfare of the roses. You may not have such a place at your disposal, but you are sure to have some ends and corners that can be utilized. A heavy loam with at least a fourth of manure and lots of room for the roots grows Sprengeri profitably. And plumosus, when wanted for sprays, should do in the place.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Planting.

Planting on the benches will very probably be delayed this year, in many sections, because of the weather, but if any way possible get your plants set out this month, especially if they are getting pot-house, have nothing to prevent its roots going down to China. Anywhere between 55 to 60 degrees at night will grow both plumosus and Sprengeri profitably, but don't give it less than that. Plumosus is no more useful as a long string or vine than it is in sprays for use with bunches of roses and carnations, and for this purpose it is grown on raised benches, but does much better if it is in a solid bed or bench.

A Pillow Which Was Made Up to Sell for $75.00.

And this brings to us the useful A. Sprengeri. You see handsome hanging baskets of this and you see it grown in pots and shallow benches, but after one bound. The drought this spring kept back much work that ordinarily is out of the way by June, and now for a week or so the soil, owing to excessive rains, has been too wet to handle, at least in the eastern section of the country. While chrysanthemums will be planted for six weeks yet, the early and midseason varieties are better set out in June, if you are figuring on growing the top grade of flowers. This is, of course, assuming you have from three to six feet of head room. If the house is low the only thing you can do is to plant later, which is far easier than pulling and twisting the stems in every direction to keep the flowers from the glass.

There is no need to say much about the preparation of the soil, which need not differ in any essential from that made up for roses or carnations, although if it be a heavy clay a fair proportion of sand may with advantage be added. If the soil is very wet when wheeled in, let it drain on the benches for a day or two before planting. It is a mistake to handle soil when it is wet, but at times one cannot help it.

Distance Apart to Plant.

The space needed for each plant is not less than 8x9 inches, and if you think you can afford to make it 9x10, so much the better for your plants. This is, of course, for single-stemmed plants. They can be, and often are, planted much closer, but the quality of the flowers is in direct ratio to the space the plants are given in the bench. You cannot take four or five flowers from a foot of bench surface and have them first quality, although where your market will only take a medium to small flower, close planting will pay better. As has been often stated in these notes, a man has to grow the stock he can sell at a profit. As a rule, in the large cities there are far too many of the small grades thrown on the market, and the consequence is a glut which pulls down the price of everything. The difference in the cost of growing good stock and poor stock is slight, oftentimes, in fact, nothing more than a little additional care, but the difference in the returns is considerable.

In planting set each variety by itself and, as far as possible, put the early kinds all together on the same bench. If this is done, when the crop is cut the space can be utilized at once for something else, and this at a time when the question of room is an important one, when so much stock has to be housed from the frost.

After planting get a brick and pound the soil down solid, level it with the hands and then give the entire bench a good watering. This will settle the soil evenly around the plants and water will not be needed again at the roots until after the plants are on the move. Do not water so much at first that the soil gets green and sour, but use a little common sense.

The soil should be stirred up once a week to keep the weeds killed down and the soil from getting baked and crusted. This is really an important item and yet is often neglected. The doors and ventilators should be left open wide as soon as the house is planted, and left so night and day except during a storm. If one has side ventilation in addition to the top it will be found of great advantage to keep the house cooler.

If there is any shade left on the glass that has been put there for the benefit of any previous crop, wash it off. The chrysanthemum does not need any shade and, though the house will get very hot on bright days, a good syringing a time or two during the day will materially lower the temperature and benefit the plants. Don't forget that it is very important to spray the under sides of the leaves, because it is there that the red spider makes his home, and a spraying over the tops of the plants does not inconvenience him in the least.

A DOUBLE CALLA.

A. E. Crooks, of Benton Harbor, Mich., sends us a photograph of a calla which flowered on his place with a well formed double spathe. Prof. Bailey says that these sports often occur, even with a triple spathe, and illustrates a double one in his cyclopedia, but seldom are they as well formed as this. Mr. Crooks has rebuilt his place and has everything in nice shape. He reports business good.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

During the growing season and until the young roots begin to approach the surface, cultivating should be closely attended to. When the soil is light and friable this can be performed with the hand, but with soil of a stiff, clayey nature a small hand hoe or cultivator is necessary. In using any kind of an instrument due care will have to be exercised so as not to go too near the neck of the plant nor deep enough to in any way interfere with the roots, one inch deep being all that is required if cultivating is practiced as it should be, once a week.

During hot, dry weather, when young stock has to be watered frequently and in larger quantities, the soil will require more frequent stirring to break up the surface and so prevent too rapid evaporation. In clayey soils, which are deficient in fibre, this crust forms with almost every watering during warm weather, and should be broken up as soon thereafter as possible.

When the feeding roots begin to appear near the surface it is time to stop stirring the soil and apply a light mulch. A little study and care in the preparation of our mulching material would save a great deal of hard and unnecessary work at the time we want to use it. By having it in proper condition we may expect better results than if we are forced to use the crude and raw material in its hastily prepared state.

There is, also, little doubt but that carelessness practiced in collecting and preparing our mulching material is a fruitful source in supplying the colonies of insect pests, such as eel worms, thrips and grubs; which make neglected soil and manure piles their favorite breeding spots.

The materials for a mulch compost should be collected during the summer and piled up in nearly the same manner as with rose soil, the proportions being two of manure to one of soil, with a generous sprinkling of air-slaked lime to sweeten it. This should be chopped up a little finer than rose soil for planting, and should be turned over every three or four weeks during the summer, choosing bright, sunny days for the work, and never allowing a crop of weeds to take possession.

To have it in good condition for using during the winter months, it should be put under cover so that it may escape the drenching fall rains which greatly impoverish it. The bone meal to be used should be added just previous to applying.

For a first application the mulch should be passed through a 4-inch screen. This makes it fine enough to entirely cover the surface without having to put it on too thick, half an inch being deep enough. It is also more easily assimilated in this state than if applied in chunks.

This should be repeated at intervals of six weeks, or as the material becomes exhausted, which will happen sooner in Beauty and Meteor houses than among Bride and Bridesmaid. RIBES.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

A Slight Review.

As the busy season draws to a close, it is a good time to review the work and experience of the past winter. It will be found that some errors, if I may so call them, were made, for errors will occur even with the best of plans, and from this very fact the divine flower has been brought to its present high position.

With the advent of so many new varieties, some superior in one direction, others in another, also the wide difference in treatment required to grow certain varieties, it is but natural that errors have been made.

Growers throughout the country have given their time, money, space and study to place those varieties possessing commercial value in a true position. Many varieties have fallen by the wayside, but I think no reflection should be cast upon the growers, a deduction which stands out more boldly when it is considered that the best qualities of many varieties have been brought out by growers who have studied their requirements, the originator supplying cuttings only.

It is but lately that the custom has been to supply the purchaser of new introductions with cultural directions, hence the failure of some varieties to create a favorable impression the first year, but it is a pleasure to note that at present almost every variety is accompanied by printed matter giving the method of growing employed by the originator, or, thanks to the trade papers, the subject has been taken up there.

It is to the advantage of any grower who has purchased varieties of this year's introduction to acquaint himself with their special needs as to texture of soil, temperature, feeding, watering, etc.

To the Smaller Growers.

There are those who grow a general stock in connection with carnations and of necessity are limited to some degree as regards heat, light, ventilation and location of benches, and as these notes are for the benefit of all, I will give a few points coming under my observation which may be of interest to such growers:

The location of a bench has much to do with the success of a variety. It may be a side bench having no ventilator or a bench alongside a partition, which interferes with both light and ventilation.

If other plants are to be grown in the same house, your knowledge will tell you what is best suited to the carnation temperature, or choose a variety of carnation best suited to the temperature required for the other crop.

If bedding plants are grown for spring sales, contrive to plant those varieties of carnations least in demand during April and May and let them be early bloomers.

These matters should have careful consideration before planting time. Plan to place those varieties you intend to cut from during the summer where they can be well ventilated and gotten at on both sides. Carnations can be grown at a profit with other plants, but Mr. Scott takes good care to supply you with the list.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

In last week's issue Mr. Osborn asks my opinion regarding the use of the soil that had carnations planted on it last year up to Christmas, at which time they were frozen up. I am inclined to think, judging from the information at hand, that Mr. Osborn's advice was correct. Under certain conditions I would not hesitate to use the soil again this year, but if it was allowed to remain just as it was when Jack Frost took possession, plants and all, it certainly would not be advisable to use it again. If the plants had been taken out and the soil loosened up soon after they were frozen, I would not hesitate to plant carnations right into the same soil again after having mixed in some more old manure and bone. There is too much danger of stem-rot, though, as it is.

Preparations for Replanting.

Most of the school commencements are over and the June weddings, too, and you will need but few carnations, except pink and white. You will be able to throw out everything except a bench or two that may still be yielding fairly well and the sooner you begin the job the better you will get through it. You will not need to begin planting any earlier on account of it, but think how nice it will be next month if you can begin planting and keep right at it until it is done and perhaps plant the last ones when many of the late beginners are just commencing to plant.

There is no danger of planting too early as long as you have fair-sized plants, and, in fact, there is everything to be gained. Every year we plant a little earlier and we have never had cause to regret it. By fair-sized plants I do not mean what you would call a fair-sized plant in August or September, but rather, as Mr. Osborn describes, six or eight strong young shoots. That means about after the third stopping. If you propagated last December you will have such plants in plenty by July 10 to 15 and such a plant benched at that date will give better results than a plant double the size benched late in August. We will have more on this subject a little later, at planting time.

Now we want to consider the refilling of the benches, or beds, as the case may be. If you are able to completely empty the house of all plants it will pay you to fumigate it with sulphur in order to kill all insects that may be in the corners and odd places. If you plant on benches you should apply a heavy coat of hot lime wash before filling in the soil. Of course you will see that there are no weak boards to break through next winter, when there is a fine crop of buds on; that is when they always give way.

After allowing the lime wash to dry, put on the bottom about an inch of manure, which should be well along in process of decaying. We prefer cow manure, and as we can get plenty of that kind we use very little other. If you have good stable manure it will answer the purpose, perhaps, just as well. On top of this fill in your soil about four inches deep. We proceed in the same manner with our solid beds, except that we do not whitewash at the bottom, but only on the sides.

Be sure that you break up all the lumps when you bring the soil in. You can do that with your shovel as you fill your wheelbarrow, and it will take up very little time. No good grower will screen the soil, as was often done a few years ago. Another thing you should be careful of is that you do not handle the soil when it is too wet. Some soils are ruined more quickly in this way than others, especially those of a clayey nature. It should always be in such a state that it will crumble readily. After filling the bench or bed we do not water it until the day before we want to plant, unless it should become powder dry, in which case it may take several waterings to wet it through. Do not make the mistake of planting in a soil that is moist only half way down and dry at the bottom; you could do nothing worse.

I do not believe in encouraging the weeds to come up and pulling them up before planting the carnations. I think that first crop of weeds does more good and less harm than most growers realize. Have you ever noticed a spot here and there where only a few scattering weeds came up and how much quicker a green scum will form over the surface of the soil? What is the reason? It is because twisting the stems in every direction to keep the flowers from the glass.

There is no need to say much about the preparation of the soil, which need not differ in any essential from that made up for roses or carnations, although if it be a heavy clay a fair proportion of sand may with advantage be added. The materials for a mulch compost should be collected during the summer and piled up in nearly the same manner as with rose soil, the proportions being two of manure to one of soil, with a generous sprinkling of air-slaked lime to sweeten it. This should be chopped up a little finer than rose soil for planting, and should be turned over every three or four weeks during the summer, choosing bright, sunny days for the work, and never allowing a crop of weeds to take possession.

To have it in good condition for using during the winter months, it should be put under cover so that it may escape the drenching fall rains which greatly impoverish it. The bone meal to be used should be added just previous to applying.

For a first application the mulch should be passed through a 3-inch screen. This makes it fine enough to entirely cover the surface without having to put it on too thick, half an inch being deep enough. It is also more easily assimilated in this state than if applied in chunks.

This should be repeated at intervals of six weeks, or as the material becomes exhausted, which will happen sooner in Beauty and Meteor houses than among Bride and Bridesmaid. RIBES.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

A Slight Review.

As the busy season draws to a close, it is a good time to review the work and experience of the past winter. It will be found that some errors, if I may so call them, were made, for errors will occur even with the best of plans, and from this very fact the divine flower has been brought to its present high position.

With the advent of so many new varieties, some superior in one direction, others in another, also the wide difference in treatment required to grow certain varieties, it is but natural that errors have been made.

Growers throughout the country have given their time, money, space and study to place those varieties possessing commercial value in a true position. Many varieties have fallen by the wayside, but I think no reflection should be cast upon the growers, a deduction which stands out more boldly when it is considered that the best qualities of many varieties have been brought out by growers who have studied their requirements, the originator supplying cuttings only.

It is but lately that the custom has been to supply the purchaser of new introductions with cultural directions, hence the failure of some varieties to create a favorable impression the first year, but it is a pleasure to note that at present almost every variety is accompanied by printed matter giving the method of growing employed by the originator, or, thanks to the trade papers, the subject has been taken up there.

It is to the advantage of any grower who has purchased varieties of this year's introduction to acquaint himself with their special needs as to texture of soil, temperature, feeding, watering, etc.

To the Smaller Growers.

There are those who grow a general stock in connection with carnations and of necessity are limited to some degree as regards heat, light, ventilation and location of benches, and as these notes are for the benefit of all, I will give a few points coming under my observation which may be of interest to such growers:

The location of a bench has much to do with the success of a variety. It may be a side bench having no ventilator or a bench alongside a partition, which interferes with both light and ventilation.

If other plants are to be grown in the same house, your knowledge will tell you what is best suited to the carnation temperature, or choose a variety of carnation best suited to the temperature required for the other crop.

If bedding plants are grown for spring sales, contrive to plant those varieties of carnations least in demand during April and May and let them be early bloomers.

These matters should have careful consideration before planting time. Plan to place those varieties you intend to cut from during the summer where they can be well ventilated and gotten at on both sides. Carnations can be grown at a profit with other plants, but Mr. Scott takes good care to supply you with the list.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

In last week's issue Mr. Osborn asks my opinion regarding the use of the soil that had carnations planted on it last year up to Christmas, at which time they were frozen up. I am inclined to think, judging from the information at hand, that Mr. Osborn's advice was correct. Under certain conditions I would not hesitate to use the soil again this year, but if it was allowed to remain just as it was when Jack Frost took possession, plants and all, it certainly would not be advisable to use it again. If the plants had been taken out and the soil loosened up soon after they were frozen, I would not hesitate to plant carnations right into the same soil again after having mixed in some more old manure and bone. There is too much danger of stem-rot, though, as it is.

Preparations for Replanting.

Most of the school commencements are over and the June weddings, too, and you will need but few carnations, except pink and white. You will be able to throw out everything except a bench or two that may still be yielding fairly well and the sooner you begin the job the better you will get through it. You will not need to begin planting any earlier on account of it, but think how nice it will be next month if you can begin planting and keep right at it until it is done and perhaps plant the last ones when many of the late beginners are just commencing to plant.

There is no danger of planting too early as long as you have fair-sized plants, and, in fact, there is everything to be gained. Every year we plant a little earlier and we have never had cause to regret it. By fair-sized plants I do not mean what you would call a fair-sized plant in August or September, but rather as Mr. Osborn describes, six or eight inch young shoots. That means about the third stopping. If you propagate last December you will have such in plenty by July 10 to 15 and such a plant benched at that date will give better results than a plant double the size benched late in August. We will have more on this subject a little later, at planting time.

Now we want to consider the refilling of the benches, or beds, as the case may be. If you are able to completely empty the house of all plants it will pay you to fumigate it with sulphur in order to kill all insects that may be in the corners and odd places. If you plant on benches you should apply a heavy coat of hot lime wash before filling in the soil. Of course you will see that there are no weak boards to break through next winter, when there is a fine crop of buds on; that is when they always give way.

After allowing the lime wash to dry, put on the bottom about an inch of manure, which should be well along in process of decaying. We prefer cow manure, and as we can get plenty of that kind we use very little other. If you have good stable manure it will answer the purpose, perhaps, just as well. On top of this fill in your soil about four inches deep. We proceed in the same manner with our solid beds, except that we do not whitewash at the bottom, but only on the sides.

Be sure that you break up all the lumps when you bring the soil in. You can do that with your shovel as you till your wheelbarrow, and it will take up very little time. No good grower will screen the soil, as was often done a few years ago. Another thing you should be careful of is that you do not handle the soil when it is too wet. Some soils are ruined more quickly in this way than others, especially those of a clayey nature. It should always be in such a state that it will crumble readily. After filling the bench or bed we do not water it until the day before we want to plant, unless it should become powder dry, in which case it may take several waterings to wet it through. Do not make the mistake of planting in a soil that is moist only half way down and dry at the bottom; you could do nothing worse.

I do not believe in encouraging the weeds to come up and pulling them up before planting the carnations. I think that first crop of weeds does more good and less harm than most growers realize. Have you ever noticed a spot here and there where only a few scattering weeds came up and how much quicker a green scum will form over the surface of the soil? What is the reason? It is because the soil is allowed to lay undisturbed and, from the watering it gets, a pasty crust comes over it, which keeps the air out of it, while the carnation roots are still inactive.

Wherever the weeds and grass come up thickly they keep the soil loose and they take up the properties that by decaying cause the soil to sour. When you pull them up after the carnations have been planted about two to three weeks the roots loosen up the soil to some extent half way down and the carnation roots, having become active again, will have the same effect on the soil as the weed roots had. I believe this is one of the reasons why sterilized soil has not been the success that was predicted. Of course I do not mean that you should allow these young weeds to grow up and cover the carnation plants, but I am speaking of the good they do up to the time they are large enough to pull readily. After they are about three inches high they become voracious feeders and will soon rob the soil of its plant food, and that is when you want to stop them short.

We have, today, had a fine soaking rain and it will put the carnations in fine condition, even if we do not have much more rain before the middle of July. An occasional shower now and then will be all that is needed.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

BACKGROUNDS AND ACCESSORIES.

A rummage in the well-stocked work-room of a floral decorator would be enjoyed by any artist, for there he ought to see the choicest flower receptacles produced. A small army of baskets of varied character—tall, low, slender, graceful, round, square, coarse, delicate, great and small—should forever dispel a suspicion that these useful and ornamental articles may go out of style. There might be some improvement in coloring of basket materials over what we now have. As it is, the mixed patterns, greens, browns and yellows, are easily procured; but why do not the manufacturers give us more of the rich solid colorings on the body of the basket? Crimson, heliotropes, delf blue and ultra marine ought to be favorably received.

One of the many accomplishments useful in our line of work is the making of Indian baskets. Sizes and shapes of baskets unobtainable on short notice can thus be supplied at home, and some of the designs and colorings are very pretty even for first choice.

We should also be able more easily to obtain baskets finished on the bottom. When one wishes to suspend a basket overhead, it takes some maneuvering to hide a flat or rough outside bottom.

The vase supply need not be so varied as to material nor size as that of the basket, but their capacity needs careful inspection. Narrow-necked vases are more of a nuisance than a help, ordinarily, and they are usually the kind that we are expected to use in decorations at private residences. Their graceful shape becomes an aggravation when the inside proportions are tested. Natural-colored pottery, jugs and pitchers may be utilized for odd studies for display purposes.

Other desirable flower receptacles are china hanging vases, decorated with conventional patterns, and Japanese pockets of china and bamboo. With the latter quaint outline designs can be traced around a window, door or mirror frame, while the stems have the advantage of remaining in water.

Besides accessories for cut flowers and foliage there are numerous helps and settings for plants. In every first-class establishment will be found jardinières, birch bark, raffia and paper-pot covers, sheet moss, ferneries, pedestals, jardinière stands, and wire or galvanized mantel pans. In grouping plants it is decidedly monotonous to see all the pots covered in the same way, no matter of how fine a quality the material may be. A small proportion of jardinières, a more liberal supply of birch bark or raffia covers, a few crepe paper wrappings, more of sheet moss and some uncovered, is a suggestive way of proportioning the number of pot covers. This recipe is about as definite as the kitchen "pinch of salt," but its very adjustability will add to its convenience.

In addition to the foregoing, useful help will be found in bits of draperies, silk cord, once in a while tulle,—and in the natural materials, Florida moss, bark, gravel, sand, and autumn leaves pressed and varnished.

With some such assortments it is not so difficult to "dress up" for special occasions, but even then there is more or less begging and borrowing to do. For a patriotic occasion or a convention in town, it is both complimentary to the guests and profitable to the dealer to devise a window decoration for the occasion. It is seldom advisable to work out emblems to the smallest details; but select some part or parts that are graceful and suggestive enough not to need a label, and then give it a good setting and bring in the business end in a prominent place.

For instance, we entertained in our town, once upon a time, the state D. A. R. convention. Their badge is the wheel of a spinning wheel and a distaff with encircling band,—suggestive, of course, of the employment of the Revolutionary dames. Borrowing a complete spinning wheel, we gave it the place of honor in the window on a bed of blue cornflowers, and on the cross-beam of the frame set a generous bunch of white peas and Sprenger, training the long sprays through the spokes and away up in among the flax on the distaff. Banked up behind and around was the usual stock of palms and ferns for out-of-town trade. The members of the convention in their carriage ride through the city changed their route to pass our window, and also deposited some pin money with us before they left. The public is not always the cold-hearted, unappreciative person for which it gets credit.

A tent among the palms and jasmines was used effectively for some G. A. R. celebration. Another excellent opportunity for a good display was the meeting of the National Grain Dealers' Association. A shock of corn formed a background in the window. In the far corner was a shock of oats just as it stood in the field. But hidden in the heart was a prosy paper vase filled with American Beauties, which peeped out here and there through the hanging grain. The floor of the window was covered with autumn leaves, and over these and between the shocks of grain were the plants and flowers offered for sale. The grain dealers bought. This same design would be suitable for a Harvest Home or Thanksgiving occasion.

If no such opportunities are offered for complimentary displays, current events, local and world-wide, could be presented. Read like a caricaturist and there will be more material at hand than can be used. Or the seasons could be represented. Here is a scheme for winter: Have some fancy evergreens and display them with their natural settings,—cones and pine needles. Then for a vase gather up some patches of mosses that grow around the hydrants and under the benches, and have a few lycopodium ferneries filled for sale. Finish with lycopodium draperies. For a summer scene have a miniature lake with pond lilies, and a birch bark canoe filled with small flowers hauled up on the beach, or a few fishing-rods with a china hanger in camp-kettle style. Drape a fish-net with some vines over the top.

The first, last and always between law of successful window displays is scrupulous cleanliness. Dusty plants are unattractive, no matter what their fine points are. Another requisite is frequent and complete changing. A window full of one kind of plants is a good aid to sales with an advertised announcement. Speaking of advertising, it pays better to cut out program, club directory, year book and all such hold-up advertisements, and invest the same amount of money in a good window and liberal spaces in the best newspapers. Keep in mind that one element of the artistic is the striking, which in its best sense is by no means unnatural or vulgar.

Several grades of heavy wire are a great help for large bunches of flowers, extra basket handles, etc. A bronzing outfit with silver, green, gold and copper paints is very convenient. Wire frames, plant stands and brackets need freshening once in a while. The ready-mixed bronze paints are not as satisfactory nor economical as what can be mixed with the dry paint and liquid in bulk.

A large mounted mirror is a most useful adjunct, as well as a few table mirrors. Their rent in decorations will after a while pay for their cost. They will last for years with careful handling and protection from direct sun rays.

The ability to draw free-hand is more than helpful. In planning a decoration with a customer, illustrate if possible. The average imagination is not stretchable beyond the visual angle. "What it will look like" in black and white may gain the job. A few photos of your best work will demonstrate your abilities, but a customer likes something designed for her special benefit. Put in the spare moments getting a few new schemes ready. A small blackboard is as good an investment as a box of paints. After getting started new ideas will develop. The more one does the more he is able to do, and the more quickly he can call his powers into use. There is no danger of exhausting one's resources. Draw out your plans even if you feel obliged to apologize for the crude draft.

All these helps cannot be picked up at once nor can the attainments be developed quickly, but it is here a piece and there a piece, for a good stock of accessories accumulates, like experience, only with the years.

JOHN F. WILCOX.

We have pleasure in presenting herewith a portrait of Mr. John F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia., who has a host of friends in the trade and whose immense range of glass is undoubtedly the largest in the country west of Chicago.

Mr. Wilcox was born Feb. 3, 1864, on a farm in Wisconsin, and his parents were not blessed with a large amount of worldly goods. At the age of 9 years he started to work for other people on the farm and continued until he was 13. His parents were then living in Darlington, a small Wisconsin town, and as they were still in poor circumstances, he went home and for three years helped to support them by grubbing out trees and chopping them into cord wood and sawing wood around town. He has related that he walked five miles night and morning to get to his work and many times ate a frozen dinner.

At the age of 16 he went to Iowa and entered the employ of L. A. Casper, Council Bluffs, at $15.00 per month. Mr. Casper was then in the vegetable growing business, but he later on started growing cut flowers. Mr. Wilcox was here but a short time before he was made foreman and continued in this position about seven years. He married in 1885. He and Mr. Casper finally bought a small tract of land just outside the city and they became equal partners in the vegetable business, Mr. Casper devoting the major part of his time to the florist business. Later Mr. Wilcox bought Mr. Casper's interest and became sole proprietor.

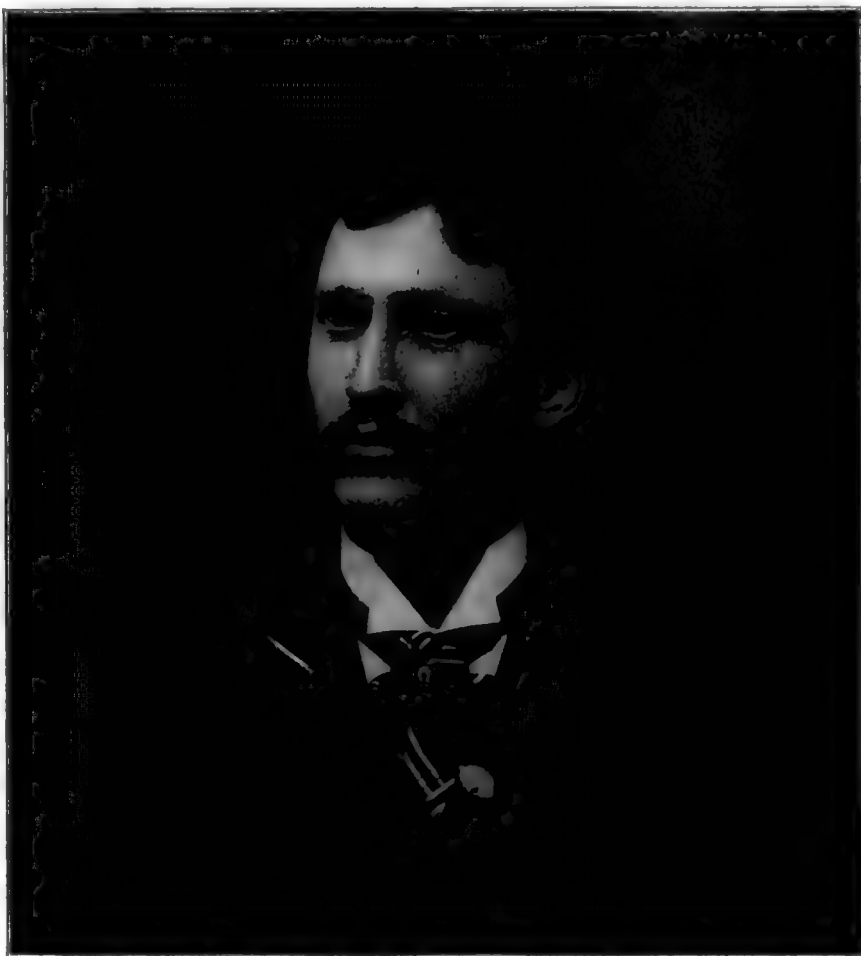

To accomplish this Mr. Wilcox worked almost day and night, personally supervising everything and getting up at one, two and three o'clock in the morning in all kinds of weather and many times not getting to bed again until 11 p. m. He succeeded in paying for the place and a few years later bought Mr. Casper's flower and plant growing establishment.

He now employs from 65 to 125 people and has the largest expanse of glass west of Chicago. He has built a handsome modern residence and is beginning to enjoy the fruits of his rather strenuous life.

He and his charming wife have been frequent attendants at the conventions of the S. A. F., and have quickly made warm friends of all who met them.

POT CULTURE OF MIGNONETTE.

To grow this plant in pots with success requires much more care and study than if it is planted in the bench, as along with its cramped root quarters it has the same insect enemies and diseases to contend with. The roots are also very sensitive to the fluctuations of temperature to which their position in the pot exposes them; consequently, owing to our extremes of cold and bright sunshine, it is rare to see a really well grown specimen in a commercial place in this country. A few florists in private places produce some handsome specimens, but as a rule these florists are of the imported variety.

Among commercial growers in Europe, and especially in England, this is one of the best selling and most remunerative of winter blooming plants, and is grown in large quantities. No doubt it will some time become a favorite here also, as with its bright, shining foliage and delicately fragrant blossoms, and its adaptability to window culture, there are few of our greenhouse plants that can compare with it and in its class it has no rival.

I will endeavor to give a resumé of the most successful method of treating this annual as a pot plant, which if followed closely will give good results.

The first and most important part is in the selection of suitable seed from a recognized good strain, as all the care that can be bestowed on an inferior strain is simply thrown away. Every grower who makes the culture of these plants equally important and is prepared to give them as much of his attention and skill as he does his cyclamens and primroses, usually has his own favorite strain, which he tries to improve year after year by carefully selecting and gathering the seed from those plants which have a good habit of growth and are free bloomers.

The capsules on the lower half of the flower spike usually contain the most perfect and best ripened seed. These should be gathered before they are perfectly ripe, as they shed the seed very easily, and put into a paper box without any covering and stored in a place where there is no danger of dampness.

For plants to bloom during the winter the seed should be sown early in July. Well drained 2-inch standard pots are large enough to sow the seed in, as to be successful with this plant the roots of the seedlings should never be disturbed in the slightest.

The soil most suited for seedlings is composed of two parts fibry loam and one part decomposed leaf mold, with an addition of clean sand in the proportion of one-eighth of the entire bulk. This compost should be made fine by passing it through a half-inch screen. The pots should then be filled flush and packed firm. Make a slight depression in the center of each pot and place in each five or six good sized seeds, and cover to the depth of about four times the size of the seeds.

To keep the pots from drying out too quickly they should be plunged in moss or some such substance and placed in a deep frame facing the north, and carefully protected from heavy rains. As soon as the seedlings begin to form the character leaf the strongest one in each pot should be selected and the rest pulled out. After a few days they should be repotted into 2½-inch pots, using the same kind of compost with an addition of about a sixteenth part of finely sifted, well decomposed cow manure.

During all the growing period it is best to keep these plants away from the direct rays of the mid-day sun, as this has a tendency to ripen the foliage and stem, which will surely ruin them. When the plants have acquired eight or ten leaves it is time to begin training. This is done by merely nipping out the tip of the growth; pinching off three or more eyes will cause a stuntedness from which they rarely recover. Care should be taken that they never approach being pot bound, as this will cause premature and imperfect blooms.

During the first week of September they should be moved inside, as if they are allowed to remain outside till frost compels their removal and are then subjected to artificial heat, they are liable to drop their foliage. A house with a temperature of 55 degrees is just the temperature suited.

To have some of these specimens in bloom in November the stopping will have to be discontinued before October, but the best specimens are those which have been trained up to the middle of November. If properly trained and cared for these plants will continue to bloom until hot weather commences again.

In England they grow these plants on single stems and keep them growing and blooming for five or six years, entirely changing the character of the plant from an annual herb to that of an apparently hard-wooded shrub. In a future article I will endeavor to describe exactly how this is done.

RIBES.

THE HOLLAND BULBS.

BY HENRY F. MICHELL, OF PHILADELPHIA.

Read before the convention of the American Seed Trade Association at Atlantic City, N. J., June 23 to 25, 1903:

You are all aware that the trade in Holland on Dutch bulbs is constantly on the increase, caused by the gorgeous displays which can be had during the winter and spring with very little outlay of money and the ease of cultivation. I will endeavor in this paper to make only rambling remarks as they come before me, as I have been too much occupied to prepare a more complete essay.

I shall start with tulips, the gorgeous beauties, and mention herewith the choicest sorts which are rather high in price as yet, but are well worth the price.

Albion, or White Hawk.—The finest pure white variety in cultivation, either for bedding or for forcing, produces a very large snow white flower of great substance. It is a good keeper; the flowers remain perfect longer than any other white tulip and stand handling and shipping without danger of bruising.

Couleur de Cardinal.—This variety is considered to be the choicest bronzy scarlet sort, produces heavy petaled flowers on long stems. Good prices can always be had and a ready market is sure if the true variety is grown.

Le Matelas.—Another exhibition flower, very large pink bloom, edged with white.

Mon. Tresor.—A fine large, golden yellow specimen, especially adapted for forcing because it blooms quite early.

Rose Applatie.—Beautiful light pink flower, perfect shape, quite the rage in London and Paris, a good forcer.

The above are just a few of which I make special note. You are all aware of the best standard sorts, so that I will make no remarks about them. The up-to-date bulb importer has them all listed and described in his catalogue. I wish to state here that it is very important if you want La Reine tulips for forcing to be pure white in color, the bulbs must have been grown in sandy soil. La Reine tulip bulbs grown in heavy soil are liable to have green tips when forced. For outside planting it does not matter much where grown.

Parrot Tulips.—It is important that only large bulbs should be ordered, which can be depended upon to produce about 80 per cent to bloom. Small parrot tulip bulbs will bloom only from 50 to 60 per cent. Good flowers of parrot tulips bring high prices. They can be forced moderately to bloom in March and April.

Late flowering single tulips should be more extensively planted in this country. In London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna and other large European cities great quantities are used. The display of color in this class is marvelous. The most showy and satisfactory sorts are:

Bouton de Or, golden yellow, a perfect, beautiful flower of great substance, makes an elegant cut flower because after it is cut and placed in water it lasts nearly a week in prime condition.

Another handsome show tulip of the late flowering class is Grand Gesmeriana Spathulata, a dazzling scarlet, with a rich violet center, mammoth in size, favorably comparing with the Oriental scarlet poppy.

One of the daintiest in color is Picotee, sometimes called Maiden's Blush, a white flower with distinct pink border.

For a handsome mixture in late flowering tulips the Bizarres and Bybloemens contain every imaginable color of the rainbow. Recommend the late tulips to your customers, informing them at the same time that they bloom considerably later than the earlier, but still early enough to be done blooming before summer plants are planted in their beds. An important fact to remember in all late tulips especially, is to order and insist on strictly first size bulbs, as smaller bulbs frequently do not bloom.

I shall now say a few words about the favorite, well known hyacinths. Hyacinth bulbs in Holland are grown on land which has been heavily manured in the spring. Pure cow manure is used for this purpose. A crop of potatoes is grown on this land in order to take certain ingredients out of the manure which may harm the hyacinths. In August, after the potatoes are taken up, this land is carefully dug and the manure which is now thoroughly decomposed, is placed at such a depth that the roots of the hyacinth can easily reach it for their food. After the hyacinths are once grown on this land, it cannot be used to advantage for three years to grow hyacinths. As a rule tulips are grown on the ground where hyacinths have been grown the previous year. The ground is sufficiently rich for tulips, which do not require such rich soil. After a crop of tulips is grown on that land it is followed with narcissi or crocuses. After the third year, it is ready again for hyacinths, but the ground is dug quite deep and the sub soil or sand is dug to the surface.

The method used for the propagation of hyacinths is to cut the old, large bulbs at the bottom into three divisions, or scooped out. It takes from three to five years for the small bulbets produced from the parent bulb to become of age and sent out as first size bulbs. The scooping method produces the most bulbets, as many as 40 from each parent bulb.

One of the greatest difficulties in growing hyacinths is to guard against the diseases which the hyacinth is subject to. Three different diseases attack it. The black and white diseases affect the bulbs; the yellow disease affects the foliage first, then penetrates to the bulbs. Great care and constant watching are needed to prevent these diseases from spreading. Every careful, reliable bulb grower watches these pests hourly and as soon as any bulb shows signs of disease, it is immediately removed, and often the surrounding bulbs as well.

Hyacinths grown on pure, rich, sandy soil are the best. This special ground is very expensive in Holland and sells for more money than city property. The reason that Holland is better adapted for growing perfect bulbs than any other place so far discovered, is on account of the perfect drainage of the ground. Whether there is an excessive rainfall or drought for weeks at a time, the water is kept almost at the same height constantly by either having the surplus water pumped out, or let in through the dikes. All the beds are laid out in perfect squares of about 100 feet, surrounded constantly by water.

One of the queer and confusing features of the hyacinths is that a number of evidently different varieties bear the same name, but come in different colors. For instance, the Baron Van Tuyll comes in red, white and blue. The original Baron Van Tuyll was a blue hyacinth; the other two colors are sports from the blue. La Grandesse is the handsomest hyacinth of all, a most perfect, mammoth pure white spike, single flowers. There is now, however, a double La Grandesse, which is quite expensive as yet, but it will be bought, nevertheless, by hyacinth fanciers. Another hyacinth of extraordinary merit for forcing is the Koh-i-Noor, large, perfect, semi-double, rich pink spike. This will be one of the leaders for prizes.

There is such a great number of perfect spiked varieties now to be had, and all listed in the leading catalogues, that I will not go into more details or descriptions. I forgot to state that the General Society of Bulb Growers in Holland is now proceeding to have a better nomenclature in bulbs by giving each new offspring or sport a distinct name. Let us hope that they will soon alter the names of the red, white and blues in Baron Van Tuyll, Chas. Dickens, etc., and prevent a great many mistakes, which probably occur in this confusion of colors in the same name.

The demand for narcissi is certainly enormous in all the classes, both the hardy as well as the forcing or Paper White grandiflora types. As an example of the constantly increasing demand for hardy narcissi, one of our customers ordered of us 200,000 bulbs for outside planting.

When you want the proper double daffodil, Von Slon, for forcing purposes, be sure and secure the Talemionus Plenus variety. This is a beautiful double, cup-shaped flower and very seldom shows any green ribs or tips. Narcissi, especially the Horsfieldii variety, should be planted, if possible, as soon as they are received in September. Early planting of all narcissi is advisable to secure large blooms.

There is such a great variety of bulbs now in cultivation and on the market that I will not dare to speak any longer. One item, however, is of great importance and that is the Spiraea Gladstone. This is the champion of all spiraeas, produces immense plants if grown in 8 or 9-inch pots.

I will close by giving a list of the best standard satisfactory varieties according to my experience, and which will always give the best results, as follows:

DUTCH ROMAN HYACINTHS.

Chas. Dickens, Gigantea, Gertrude, Moreno, pink; La Grandesse, Mme. Van der Hoop, L'Innocence, white; Czar Peter, Grand Maitre, Queen of the Blues, blue.

NAMED SINGLE HYACINTHS.

Roi des Belges, Von Schiller, Queen of Hyacinths, red; Baron Van Tuyll, Cavaignac, Chas. Dickens, Gertrude, Gigantea, Lord Macauley, Moreno, Rosa Maxima, pink; Albertine, British Queen, La Grandesse, L'Innocence, Mme. Van der Hoop, white; Captain Boyton, Czar Peter, Enchantress, Lord Derby, light blue; Chas. Dickens, Grand Maitre, King of the Blues, Queen of the Blues, deep blue; Ida, King of the Yellows, yellow.

DOUBLE HYACINTHS.

Bouquet Tendre, red; Koh-i-Noor, Lord Wellington, pink; Isabella, La Grandesse, La Tour de Auvergne, white; Blocksberg, light blue; Chas. Dickens, deep blue; Minerva, yellow.

EARLY TULIPS.

Belle Alliance, Couleur de Cardinal, Pottebakker, Scarlet Vermilion, Brilliant, scarlet and red; Chrysolora, Gold Finch, King of the Yellows, Ophir d'Or, Mon. Tresor, Yellow Pottebakker, Yellow Prince, yellow; White Hawk or Albion, Duc van Tholl Maximus, La Reine, Nelly Pottebakker, White Swan, white; Cottage Maid, Proserpine, Rose Griselin, Rose Applatie, Rose Luisante, pink; Grootmeester Von Malta, Joost van Vondel, Keizerskroon, Standard Silver, variegated; Prince of Austria, Thomas Moore, orange; Wouwerman, violet, for outdoors only.

DOUBLE EARLY TULIPS.

Couronne de Or, yellow, valuable especially for forcing; Imperator Rubrum, scarlet; La Candeur, white; Murillo, pink, especially for forcing; Salvator Rose, pink, especially for forcing; Tournesol, red and yellow.

Yellow Prince, with variegated foliage.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business continues very fair for the season, though it is not quite so brisk as last week. Flowers are a little more plentiful and prices easier. Choice stock finds ready sale at high prices. Really good Beauties are very scarce and bring more than during the first half of the month. Carnations are also higher, especially white varieties, which average about 50 cents per 100 more than the colored. Sweet peas are very plentiful and immense quantities are sold. Valley moves fairly well. Leo Niessen received 4,000 one day last week. A good deal of smilax has been shipped out of town. Harrisii lilies are pretty nearly done. They have proved better stock this month than even at Easter, though the demand is, of course, limited.

A Visit to Wyncote.

A perfect day, a beautiful walk after leaving the trolleys, a cordial welcome of the genial, whole-souled kind, and a lot of well grown stuff combined to make a visit to Wyncote very pleasant. So much more time was spent in talking than in making notes that when my hour was up I ventured to ask for an idea or two to fill out, but my host thought that was shirking and told a story to illustrate his point. It is not a long story and he tells it well. If you ever feel like shirking your work or putting it on somebody else while you take it easy, just get Mr. Heacock to tell you that story and you will take off your coat and pitch in again like a good fellow.

June is usually the month of apologies from the growers who are unlucky enough to have visitors. The old stuff looks rough; the young stuff looks small; repairs are under way; everything is out of gear. This was not the case at Wyncote. Plants are in flourishing condition and the place looks well generally. Joseph Heacock has always been known as a grower of fine roses and a few other cut flowers, chiefly carnations and "cyps." Palms have grown and grown with him until today he has even more palms than roses on his immense place. These palms are almost entirely made up of three varieties, Areca lutescens, Kentia Forsteriana and K. Belmoreana. The demand for specimen plants of large size has cleaned up pretty much everything over 8-inch. In 8-inch pots there are a fine lot of arecas, nice bushy plants, growing well. Two hundred of this size of areca were to leave two days after, but these would not be seriously missed among so many. The arecas in 6-inch pots were also fine; 400 of this size had just left. The foliage all through was of a deep, rich green. In kentias there were shapely madeup as well as single plants. Kentia Forsteriana in 7-inch pots were especially well done. The north side houses devoted to seedlings are worth seeing—arecas in thumb pots and kentias in the bench, so thick that their condition of perfect health made you wonder.

The roses were nearly all replanted; by this time the work must be finished. The majority of the houses are in Beauties, with one each of Liberty, Bridesmaid and Bride. All are strong stuff from 4-inch pots, the earlier planted houses breaking nicely. One and a fraction houses of Beauties in ground beds will be carried over. The cut of Beauties during May has been phenomenally heavy, the special grade being numerous. Fully 20,000 young Beauty plants have been sold this season.

Various Notes.

The trip to Morrisville last week proved delightful. A member of the party spoke in glowing terms of Mr. Moon's hospitality and of the interesting trip through the nursery. Mr. Moon gave a very interesting account of the experience of the past fifty years, the business having been established by his father in the early fifties.

William L. Walton, of Oxford, Pa., is bringing in some fine Prosperity and Portia to the Flower Market.

Miss Mary C. Henrici and William Reynolds were married Tuesday evening, June 23. After a very pretty ceremony an elaborate wedding supper was served, in which many of the retailers and wholesalers were participants. Amid groom left that evening for a month's honeymoon at Hightstown, N. J. Mr. Reynolds is with E. Bernheimer. "Billy," we all wish you many years of happiness.

Cut Crimson Ramblers sold well on Thursday of last week, a church holiday using lots of these flowers.

Thomas Foulds is much sought after these days on account of the white petunia flowers he carries.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons had a big job in New York in which they used some very choice stock. Some choice orchids found their way to this place.

Frank W. Whiteley is a gentleman of leisure these days, but he does not forget to visit his old friends once a week.

Tearing out and replanting is in full swing just now and there will be several more houses of Liberty planted next year. John Stephenson's Sons, Oak Lane, will have a house of this variety next season.

J. Wolff, Jr., has been busy with weddings and decorations, of which he makes a specialty. He is well equipped for this work, having a large stock of decorative plants at his Sedgely avenue place.

Mrs. Edgar, of 2307 Ridge avenue, had a very good spring trade. She was unfortunate in having had an attack of typhoid fever earlier in the season, but has now entirely recovered.

Albert Woltemate has almost finished his planting out. He has sold a great many crotons this year and says that he is cleaned out nicely of all salable stock.

E. A. Hutchinson is building a new carnation house, 20x50, at Oxford. Mr. Hutchinson is a beginner who wishes to experiment before regularly embarking in the business.

Robert Gaul, cousin of the manager of the Century Flower Shop, and Max Janow, late with William J. Moore, form the new pony battery of the Flower Market.

Edward Reid lost a valuable hunting dog. After one week of advertising (not in the REVIEW) and fruitless search John McIntyre did some clever detective work, locating the dog on South Broad street and following him to the home of his temporary master. A raid on front and back entrances simultaneously resulted in restoring the lost canine to its rightful owner.

John I. Heibeck, of Oxford, Pa., is tearing down the greenhouses on a property lately acquired, with the intention of rebuilding in more substantial style.

Bowling.

The third series of games for places on the team to represent this city in Milwaukee took place on the Unique alleys last week. Wm. Stevens was unable to participate. The following are the scores of the other seventeen competitors and the points won to date:

NEW YORK.

Picnic Plans.

The "good old summer time" is still off the track somewhere and the weather for three weeks has been a disgrace to itself and a menace to humanity. Not content with eight weeks of drought, we have been literally swamped with three weeks of rain. Weather prophets now predict a change with the moon on Thursday and a 90 degree temperature thereafter. In any event, we must have fine weather on July 1, for the club's outing will be the greatest gathering in its recreating history. The demand for tickets is great, Mr. Traendly says, and he is far in advance of last seasons' record at the same date. Whole families are going, and while moderation in all things will prevail, it is now an assured fact that the boat will be full. Some idea of the numbers may be gathered by the knowledge that J. Reimel, of Woodhaven, has sent for eight tickets, and Louis Schmutz, of Flatbush, for six, while many of the club members have purchased four or more, and about every active or prominent member will be there. The athletic part of the day is well attended to. In addition to the splendid prizes already announced, Chas. Schenck will give a consolation prize of a handsome parasol for a girl's race, under ten, to be competed for by all who failed to win in the other races. And gallant David Mellis has offered two prizes for a married ladies' fifty-yard dash, that should furnish the most exciting minute of the afternoon. Don't forget the date—next Wednesday, July 1—and don't miss the boat, which leaves promptly at 9:30.

Convention Suggestions.

J. S. Wilson, of Western Springs, Ill., arrived in the city Monday and will have a week of much needed rest here and in Boston and Philadelphia. He is doing some fine missionary work for the Milwaukee convention and predicts a great attendance. That $1,500 generous provision by the Chicago florists for the entertainment of visiting conventionists is much commented on and greatly appreciated by the eastern contingent. New York hopes to arrive in Chicago on the Monday preceding the convention, with a special train load of 100, loaded with enthusiasm and ready for a western welcome. Now that the convention is less than eight weeks distant, we hear it discussed frequently and a great many are arranging for the delightful trip and the happy yearly reunion, which once enjoyed, possesses a fascination which is difficult to resist. We rather expect to have Milwaukee have the record for attendance when the noses are counted at White Fish Bay. A great many express a desire for a musical and literary evening following the president's reception, the program to be made up from the ranks of the visiting florists. There is no arrangement that could draw so potently and interest so many, and Vice-President Pollworth would make an ideal manager for such an innovation.

The bowling practice goes merrily on. The New York club will doubtless have a great team with Lang, Traendly, O'Mara, Raynor, Burns, Siebrecht and Haffner to draw from; while Flatbush with the Daillidouze brothers, Riley, Irwin, Thielmann, Zeller, Schmutz and Mellis on hand will do itself justice. Riley has been averaging 200 lately, and last Thursday led the club with a score of 234.

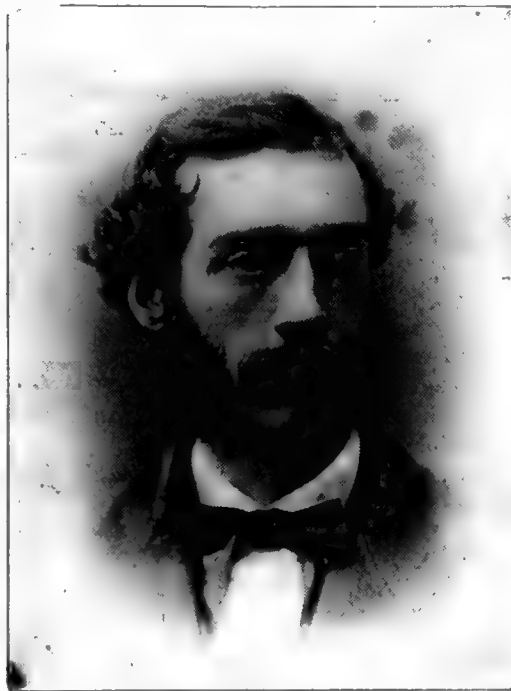

Death of Jas. W. McGarrett.

Jas. W. McGarrett died June 11 at his home in New York City, of a complication of diseases, after an illness of over a year's duration. Mr. McGarrett was one of the oldest members of the trade in New York city, his first employment commencing with Bridgeman & Co. In the early '60s he was a member of the national guard and during the civil war patriotically responded to the government's call for volunteers, participating in the battle of Gettysburg and in other active service both with the 12th and 84th regiments, S. N. G. of N. Y. After his return home Mr. McGarrett served many years among the trade in New York, having been with the late Walter Reid for 18 years and with Riddock & Co. for many years. His last employment was at J. W. Hauser's, on Madison avenue, where he remained for ten years, until the time of his last illness. He had also been a respected employee of Chas. Thorley and Alex. McConnell. Mr. McGarrett was held in high esteem by all, especially in the trade, where he was well known. He was of strong character, conscientious in the discharge of his duties, never swerving from what was considered just and right and faithful to all trusts. He leaves a widow, four sons and four daughters. One son, George, is bookkeeper with Alex. McConnell.

Among the Growers.

A trip over the acres of nursery and through the many greenhouses of Bobbink & Atkins, at Kutherford, the day before Mr. Atkins sailed for his annual trip to Europe, demonstrated the remarkable rate of growth of this firm in the past four years. Three new greenhouses 130 feet long are being built this season for decorative stock, and several houses are filled with large and medium sizes of kentias. There are bay trees in all sizes and thousands of them, evergreens and conifers in tubs and baskets, box, weeping trees, blue spruces, rhododendrons, herbaceous plants innumerable, over 150 varieties of tree peonies and 300 specimens of topiary work, of this latter novelty the largest importation ever brought to America. Much shipping is still going on, notwithstanding the nearness of the end of the season. The rains came just in time to safely establish the immense plantings of the firm.

A. Schultheis, whose plant at College Point consists of thirty houses, is building three more 25x125 to be devoted entirely to ericas, of which fine decorative plant he has an immense stock, including all the best varieties. He has added 10 acres of valuable ground to his premises this year and has just closed one of the best seasons in his career. He has ten houses devoted entirely to kentias and a fine lot of pandanus, latanias and arecas of all sizes. His grounds are laid out with much taste, a fine hedge of Crimson Ramblers being especially noticeable. The Ramblers, Dorothy Perkins, etc., are all plunged in pots and can be shipped at any time with safety.

While Julius Roehrs, pere, is in Europe, which will be until October, Julius Roehrs, fils, has assumed the responsibility of the immense plant at Carlton Hill, where quality and quantity have served to make a national reputation. Five new houses are in process of construction and constant repairs keep the great plant up to date in all respects. The latest importation of orchids, over 10,000 plants, largely cattleyas, includes some grand specimens. The demand for these plants has far exceeded expectations. Mr. Roehrs will have a fine exhibit at the convention, although unable to be present personally. He has a fine stock of Piersoni and Anna Foster, Phoenix cahariensis, Cibotium Schiedeii, dracenas, Farleyense, cocos, livistonas and bays, all in perfect shape.

Personal and Trade Notes.

Retailers report the usual results of bad weather, and aside from steamer trade and an occasional funeral order there is nothing doing.

The President can no longer make reflections on the family question to John Young's genial salesman, Mr. Hildebrand. It is a boy and all's well.

The days of auction opportunities are going fast. The end comes the last of the month and Mr. Elliott will celebrate the close of a great season at the July outing. He has had the field entirely to himself.

John Kral is at Portchester enjoying an early vacation. In the meantime Mr. Nash, of Moore, Hentz & Nash, finds the burden of his absence demonstrative of his abilities.

R. Vincent, Jr., and Mrs. Vincent, of White Marsh, Md., sailed for Europe Tuesday. Wm. Scott, of Tarrytown, sailed for Scotland Saturday.

Rudolph Asmus will soon move to Bogota, N. J., having sold his New Durham, N. J., plant to Herman Schoelzel, of Union Hill. Mr. Asmus has rounded out nearly forty years of horticultural experience and well deserves the competence and rest which have crowned his labors.

Last week the United States Cut Flower Co., of New York City, was incorporated at Albany, with D. Wolf Weaver, G. C. St. John and A. H. Mattox as directors. Some weeks ago the daily press, you will remember, announced a scheme whereby branches of some such organization would be placed in many of the large cities of the country. It is possible this is the consummation of that prediction. There is no limit to the ambition of some florists, and the wonderful part of the ambition is that it has generally culminated in practical success.

Messrs. Stumpp, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., and Henry, of Henry & Lee, start on Friday for Bermuda. B. Suzuki left for Japan Friday. Mr. Kenyon, of the Elizabeth Nursery Co., leaves this week for Europe, and Fred Atkins, of Bobbink & Atkins, starts this week Wednesday for a ten weeks' business trip, visiting France, Holland and Belgium before his return in September.

The Market.

This is generally looked forward to as one of the busiest weeks in the year and, indeed, shipping trade is very heavy, but it is doubtful if the week's record will be anywhere near last year's taking the market as a whole. One of the reasons for this is the scarcity of good roses with which to meet requirements. There are still large receipts of low grade stock, although now and then sees a day with the market pretty bare and Tuesday found Brides hard to get. Beauties are not plentiful and cuts in general will now be light, for replanting will be rushed from this on. Carnations are holding up very well and moving satisfactorily. The cold storage peonies are moving this week and some superb stock is offered at 75c and $1 a dozen. A. Kennicott said that they still had most of their crop on hand Tuesday night, but figure on moving it all this week. Sweet peas are very abundant and the quality never better. Harrisii is selling steadily if slowly, but candidums are hard to move.

At Wienhoeber's they say that they have had a number of complaints where they sent out peonies fresh from cold storage. They think they must be brought on slowly in a cool room for 24 to 48 hours else they wilt down at once on being put into a customers' home. E. E. Pieser says that peonies from cold storage should be unwrapped by the storekeeper, the stems shortened a half inch, the paper replaced loosely around the bunch and set away in water in a cool, airy place for a day or so, when they will keep equal to stock just cut.

The general report among the better class of retail stores is that June has not been up to last year. There have been some good wedding jobs but the European hejira seems to come earlier every year and this season there has not been the usual call for flowers for commencements in the many private schools about the city and suburbs. Funeral work, too, has run light this month.

C. H. Fisk has been under the weather but is now feeling like himself again. He was in St. Louis for two or three days while the flood was on.

The Glen View Floral Co. has been incorporated by Maurice W. Barnhart, Hans P. Gerhardt and Jas. P. Gascoigne. The capital stock is $3,000.

Louis Wittbold and family have returned from a two weeks' visit at Wheeling, Ill., Mrs. Wittbold's old home.

Peter Reinberg has had a fine cut of Liberty this month, but next week will throw out the two-year-old plants and begin to dry off the year old stock, so does not expect much for July and August.

The Schramms will each build one more house this season.

The E. F. Winterson Co. report something doing in the supply line. One order this week was for 36 dozen wheat sheaves.

George Reinberg is getting well along with his rebuilding and adding five houses and 700 boxes of French glass are beginning to be anxiously awaited. He has a tremendous field of carnation plants in fine shape.

Peter J. Schumer, whose place adjoins Weiland & Risch, at Evanston, and who has had half his establishment in vegetables, will have twelve 175-foot houses of carnations next year. Weiland & Risch will market the cut.

Harry Smyth, of Wienhoeber's, is feeling fine. He spent four weeks in the hospital just after Easter recovering from a surgical operation which cured a rupture.

Some of the growers report trouble in rooting cuttings of W. H. Chadwick chrysanthemums.

Bassett & Washburn report this their best June, wholly out of town demand.

Weber Bros. will be in in a day or two with a crop of 4,000 auratum lilies.

Sinner Bros. are going ahead with three new rose houses 30x200.

A. F. Amling is sending in a nice crop of Harrisii, from about 500 bulbs.

Wietor Bros.' season's addition has developed into ten houses 30x350, which at one time would have been considered quite a sizeable little place in itself.

Stollery Bros. have had a very busy season and are well cleaned out on bedding plants. They are not cutting much of anything at present, but have a few hundred lily bulbs which will be in shortly; however, they are not pleased with the experiment of waiting for the sun to bring the flowers.

Leo H. Bather, with his bride, was a visitor last week. He is a son of Andrew Bather, of Clinton, Iowa.

Mrs. J. D. Thompson and daughter went to New York last Thursday for a month's visit.

The Garfield Park Floral Co. has marketed a fine lot of large hydrangeas in pots and tubs. They are in good demand for porch and lawn decoration.

Fred Wittbold has a new baby boy at his house, born June 7.

George W. Wienhoeber was at Cornell for the commencement.

N. J. Wietor is at Woodruff, Wis., fishing this week.

W. S. Garland, at Des Plaines, has had a very steady cut all season, and it's the steady crop that pays.

Neat cards advertising the Milwaukee convention are hanging in all the wholesale houses.

A. L. Randall and family are at their summer home near St. Joe, Mich.

FROM OUR ENGLISH EXCHANGES.

The Gardeners' Magazine.

Average Height of Ornamental Grasses and Space Needed.—Agrostis pulchella, Briza gracilis, and B. major all grow about a foot high, while Chrysurus aureus is only about nine inches high; all these should be thinned out to from three to four inches apart. Agrostis nebulosa, Briza geniculata, Chloris barbata, Coix lachryma, Eragrostis elegans, Hordeum jubatum, Lagurus ovatus, and Panicum capillare grow about eighteen inches high and need from four to six inches space, the latter for preference. Avena sterilis, Pennisetum longistylum, Tricholena rosea, and Paspalum elegans are taller growers, rising from two to three feet high, and consequently needing to be thinned out to from six inches to one foot apart.

Spiraea Opulifolia Aurea.—With the solitary exception of Spiraea prunifolia, whose leaves die off in the autumn brightly tinged with red, this is the only spiraea remarkable for its colored leafage. It belongs to that class of golden-leaved shrubs that are seen at their best when the foliage is first expanded, while some others almost green in the spring become richly tinted as the summer advances. Another shrub that behaves in a similar manner is the golden-leaved variety of Ribes alpinum pumilum, which by midsummer is quite green; while in Weigela Looymani aurea, the golden elder, and Cornus Spathi the golden color deepens throughout July and August.

Uses of Electricity in Plant Growth.—The experiments by Dr. Lemstrom, of Helsingfors, in the uses of electricity in stimulating the growth of vegetable and other crops gave some interesting results, and a German translation of the report on them has been issued by Dr. Otto Pringsheim. The experiments appear to have been suggested by an attempt to connect the luxuriant growth of plants in high latitudes with the influence of electric currents associated with the Aurora Borealis. The experiments showed that for plants growing on arable land of medium quality an increase of 45 per cent in the crops is obtainable. On poor soil the effect is trifling. Certain plants, such as peas, cabbages and turnips, only lend themselves to electrical treatment after being watered. It is, however, injurious to most, if not all, plants to submit them to the influence of electricity in hot sunshine. In the introduction, Dr. Pringsheim makes some estimate of the cost of applying the method to agricultural purposes and arrives at the conclusion that it can be made to pay. A further suggestion is that we have here an explanation of the needle-shaped leaves of coniferous plants, which are well adapted to facilitate the passage of electricity.

SPRAYING CROPS.

In the ten years Prof. Clarence M. Weed's little treatise on spraying has enjoyed a sale which has exhausted three and made necessary a fourth edition, rewritten and brought up to date. The book of 150 pages, fully illustrated, covers the whole field of spraying but, while there is much of interest on every page, probably of greatest value, particularly to florists, is the chapter on insecticides and fungicides, in which formulæ are given for making all the standard remedies. The book is brought out by the Orange Judd Co., but copies will be sent postpaid upon receipt of 50 cents by the FLORISTS' REVIEW.

FINDLAY, O.—S. J. McMichael says that he lost at least 100,000 tomato plants by frost this spring. He had among many orders one for 75,000 plants, but was unable to ship it in full because of the damage by frost. Still it has been a good season.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Walter P. Stokes, Philadelphia; First Vice-Pres., Chas. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y and Treas., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn. The twenty-first annual convention will be held at Philadelphia and Atlantic City, June 23, 24 and 25, 1903.

L. L. MAY was unable to attend the seed trade convention because of Mrs. May's illness.

B. SUZUKI passed through Chicago this week en route from New York to Japan via Vancouver.

The western delegation of the seedsmen's convention at Atlantic City, N. J., was rather light.

SOME replanting is being done in the cucumber fields. It is thought that it is not yet too late to secure a fairly good stand.

CONTINUED good weather is improving the crop prospect in the Holland bulb district, but there is little possibility of a surplus.

THE acreage of millet in the northwest is the largest on record, partly the result of the wet weather, which delayed corn planting in many sections.

C. P. Bartleson, of Coldwater, Mich., representing the Niagara Lithograph Co., of Buffalo, is calling on the seed trade for orders for next season.

EXPORT demand for clover seed was large the past season. Official report makes the exports nearly 100,000 bags, as against 46,000 the preceding year.

THE Stecher Lithographic Co., of Rochester, announces the perfection of a packet filling machine which can be sold at a reasonable figure and does the work in a neat and rapid manner.

IN Illinois an average clover crop will be made. In the southern district the crop has been harvested under favorable conditions. Timothy is light in some localities, but the general condition is promising.

RADISH for seed in the Michigan sections is reported to be doing well. A fairly good stand in general and a growth up to the average at this time promises an average crop for 1903 if no drawbacks occur later.

NOTHING serious in the way of reports have arrived from the growing stations the past week. Weather conditions all around seem to be more favorable, although unseasonable coldness retards growth somewhat.

THE contract district and the great west has not a full representation at Atlantic City, where the seed trade convention is in session this week. This is to be regretted, as the absentees are considering many things of interest to the eastern trade.

THE latest reports from the jobbers in French Romans show the market holding firm at about 90 francs and it is likely that American forcers will have to pay a good price for early bulbs, with a possibility of a break if a surplus develops late in the season. Several American dealers report that the high price of Romans has resulted in largely increasing their orders for Paper Whites, in some cases doubling the business on this item.

IN northern sections tomato plants were transplanted into cold frames some time ago and are now ready for the open ground. If the weather warms up setting out will progress rapidly. It is too early to make any estimate of what the seed crop may be.

GOVERNMENT SEEDS.

A Washington telegram to the Chicago Record-Herald of June 24 says:

"Charges of short weight in the seeds furnished the Department of Agriculture appear in the testimony given before the Court of Claims against the New York Market Gardeners' Association. Arthur C. Nellis, representative of the New York association, alleges the government owes him $18,000 on his contract for 1900-1901. Officials of the Department of Agriculture assert that Nellis gave orders that all packages of seed should be made up short in weight; that the packages were not properly labeled; that the seed was delivered two months after the time specified in the contract and that no penalty was enforced and that cheap and improper paper was used.

"Charles Kingsley, a foreman under Nellis, in his testimony filed in the Court of Claims, says he received orders from Nellis to 'make all packets short in weight' and that he did so. Although two or more government inspectors were constantly present to see that the contract was fulfilled, no attention apparently was paid by them to the alleged abuses.

"One specification is that Nellis labeled spinach seed costing 6 cents a pound 'best seed,' which costs 16 cents. In the year covered by the litigation Congress appropriated $108,574.12 for seeds and Nellis was paid about $90,574.39. These are the seeds representatives and senators receive from the government for distribution."

BURLINGTON, IA.—N. J. Burt is on the sick list. Chas. Danacher has again taken possession, June 15, of his greenhouses. Otto Klingbiel retains the retail business and store.

The Market.

The conditions of the market at this time are better. Train service is again restored and shipments can be made with safety; the wholesalers are again moving their shipments on time, which is very pleasing to the trade. Cut flowers of all kinds are more plentiful and the wholesale district presents a healthier appearance than it has for the past ten days. The month of June, so far, has been a good one for the florists, although school work does not amount to so much as formerly. There were plenty of weddings, more than usual during this month, and a great amount of funeral work. Trade continued fair during the past week. The Saengerfest used up quite a lot of choice stock, which was sent to the different soloists as they appeared in the big art hall on the World's Fair grounds.

White flowers were in great demand, especially white roses. This left a great many Bridesmaids on the wholesalers' hands, which seemed hard to dispose of. Laertes, Meteors and Perles, when good, had a big demand. Choice Beauties were somewhat scarce and good flowers are hard to get around here at present. There will be a falling off in quantity soon, as most of the growers have already started to throw out stock and commence replanting. Sweet peas are a great glut now and are here in all colors of the rainbow. The best light shades are selling fairly well; others are generally dumped the next day for want of demand. W. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, is sending in about the best. Prices on peas are 75 cents for a single hundred, and $2.50 in thousand lots. The glut promises to be even greater this week, as all the wholesale house are loaded down with them this (Monday) morning.

A big lot of colored carnations went to waste the past week, as the demand was mostly for white. They don't keep well at this time of the year and the retailer is very cautious about laying in a big stock. Gladioli in all of the lighter colors are in fair demand. These are still limited in quantity. Some fairly good valley is in the market at the usual price. A big lot of them have been used the last two weeks for wedding bouquets. Fancy ferns are very scarce and it was amusing to watch a bunch of florists clean out a box of 5,000 which came in the other day at one of the wholesale houses. In five minutes every one was gone at 25 cents per 100. Smilax and galax have been in big demand, owing to the scarcity of ferns.

Various Items.

The plant season is entirely over and all of the growers are pretty well cleaned out of most everything except geraniums. On these nearly all of them were well stocked. The season was a good one and all the plantmen are well satisfied with the business done and with the prices, which they claim were somewhat better than last year's. Up in the seed district the busy season is at an end and some of the help will soon take their vacations. They report that business this year was a great deal better than last.

R. J. Mohr is now employed by the horticultural department at the World's Fair. Rudolph looks happy and contented in his new position.

Anton Then, the good natured and big hearted Chicago florist, was a visitor the past week. Anton attended the annual Saengerfest. He says he could not visit all his friends while here, as his time was nearly all taken up with the society.

Riessen Floral Co. had a very busy time of it the past week, attending to the wants of the visiting singers. Ed. Burchel, the manager of the company, is a prominent member of the society and was out among them from start to finish.

Edward Guy and Henry Emmons, of Belleville, were the first to visit us since the flood. They reported everything in good shape in their city and that the eastern craft will attend the florists' picnic on July 23.

In reference to moles and mice, as an answer to several answers, why not keep a cat? We have one which will catch every mole; in fact, anything that moves on the ground or under the same, anything from a humming bird to a squirrel. Where the cat cannot go I insert glass in the runs and drive the moles to the outside, for the cat to catch.

Toward the end of last week the throwing out of the old plants, the unseasonable weather and the consequent shortage, all combined to bring about better prices, and on Saturday the scarcity could be felt. Values bounded upward, and some extra fine Beauties brought $3.00 a dozen, while 10 cents was bid for best Brides and Maids, with 4 cents for carnations of extra size. The commencements of the week, the ocean travel and late June weddings may serve to hold the market for a time, especially as the weather continues erratic and supply limited.

"Our advs. in your paper this year have certainly been most satisfactory in results."—GRAND RAPIDS VIOLET Co.,

CLEVELAND.

The wholesale florists find trade excellent, the demand being larger than the supply, and almost everything ordered before it is cut. Prices hold firm, with a slight inclination upward. The commencements are about over and have called for large quantities of flowers, but the June weddings are still on and many large orders are booked for the remaining days of the month. This work has been well divided among the florists and each one seems to have his share of it.

Geo. Jewett, who has been on the sick list for two months, is around, looking much the worse for his enforced vacation, but pleased to think he is again able to look after his business. Isaac Kennedy is also on the road to recovery, being able to get around but not doing any work. His sickness has delayed the planting of his new houses and his many friends among the trade have been showing their sympathy in a practical manner by taking off their coats and putting the finishing touches on the buildings and planting the roses. On a recent visit six of our representative florists were found there, as busy as bees, helping where help was needed. It was a sight worth seeing and proof that florists are not always carrying a knife ready for use on a neighbor. A closer fellowship would be advantageous in many ways.

BATAVIA, ILL.—The Bellevue Place Co. is building four houses 23x153 and one 23x64.

BOSTON.

A marked improvement in the demand on Saturday of last week, while stock was still very plentiful, was the first surprise, and when the demand kept up and the supply began to fall away, things immediately became interesting. The receipts diminished until it seemed that never at this time of year have flowers been so scarce. For three or four days the situation was acute. But supplies have now slightly increased and eased the market very much indeed. But we must "wait till the clouds roll by" before anything definite can be stated. The plants were exhausted by the long, hot, dry spell and so much rain and cloudy weather has followed that the growers hardly know "where they are at." It may be impossible to get another good cut from the old plants and it looks as though this would be a good time to have a nice steady supply of outdoor carnations.

The era of good feeling extends to the bedding plant department. Such goods are selling well, good stock bringing 25 to 50 per cent more than last year and poor stock twice as much.

The rose and strawberry show at Horticultural Hall, June 16 and 17, was the usual success; most of the exhibitors being well known amateurs.

J. S. MANTER.

BALTIMORE.

Rain and showers, showers and rain make up the weather history of the past week. The temperature keeps below the normal average, but weeds flourish so as to keep almost ahead of the plants, and it is impossible to cultivate the ground. Trade in cut flowers was inactive the early part of the week, but towards its close showed more spirit and pretty much everything was moved off. Prices are naturally on the downward course. Today, June 22, the supply was light but the demand equally so, and the indications are that the dull season is upon us. Roses are poor in quality, though carnations, thanks to the cool nights, are better than the average at this season. A good many houses are being emptied and replanting is the order of the day.

Alexander Scott has returned to Baltimore much improved in health.

Richard Vincent Jr. and wife are on a trip to the other side of the water.

B.

WASHINGTON.

Trade continues very quiet. Commencements of all kinds seem to be over with. Stock of all kinds is getting very short on account of growers preparing to replant. Teas of all kinds bring $2 to $3; carnations, $1 to $2; peas, 25 cents per 100.

A. Gude & Bro. have already refilled two of their large houses with soil, ready for planting. They will this season depend on northern grown carnations for planting, on account of losing so many on their ground by stem-rot.

J. R. Freeman says he will not be caught on coal this winter. He not only bought but has it in.

N. Studer reports his best season for bedding plants, everything sold out.

C. Schellhorn has a fine field of carnations, the season having been very favorable.

June 19 was the date set for the three cornered bowling match for the Kramer cup, but at the last minute Philadelphia telegraphed that they could not get a team together. It was a nice game between Washington and Baltimore. Capt. Ernest is proud of his team. A. F. Schroth has offered them five gold medals if they win at Milwaukee. Here is the score:

MINNEAPOLIS.

A sweet pea show has been arranged by the Journal, to be held August 5, 6 and 7. There are a number of classes for sweet peas grown by amateurs, also classes for asters, dahlias, nasturtiums, verbenas, gladioli and other garden flowers, with liberal premiums in each, contributions to the fund having been made by the Donaldson Greenhouses, Prior Seed Co., Northrup, King & Co., Miss C. H. Lippincott, Minneapolis Floral Co., R. J. Mendenhall, R. Wessling, Aug. Swanson, Miss White, E. Nagel & Co., O. A. Will, Rice Bros., J. Souden and H. A. Sauer, $354 in all. The manager of the show is H. L. Patthey.

THRIPS?

Kindly give me information in relation to a disease or difficulty of some kind, formed on the buds in my rose house. The plants are growing nicely and the foliage in a perfectly healthy condition. I have some American Beauties, Brides, Kaiserins, Maids, Carnots and Perles. The American Beauties are particularly affected with a deformity in the bud. The Kaiserins, Brides and Maids do not seem to be deformed so much, but all have a tinge of wilted and dry petals as they come into bloom, so that the flower has several dead and wilted leaves on the outside.

W. L.

So far as I can judge, this seems to be a case of Mr. Thrips. In this I may be mistaken, but as I have no other evidence than the letter it is the only conclusion I can come to. I would suggest that he forward a few blooms and pack them so they would arrive in a fairly fresh condition, and I will do my best to fathom his troubles.

RIBES.

HOLD THE EXPRESS COMPANY.

The attached letter from a customer may give you an idea of some of the things in the wild and woolly west which serve to relieve the monotony of the florists' work days, sixteen hours long.

W. H. C.

Gentlemen and Ladies: Enclosed find stamps to cover your bill of $1.15. We note memorandum at bottom of bill in regard to the arrangement of the blue moonvines in the south end and the white in the north end of the box. We desire to thank you kindly for your thoughtfulness; however, beg to advise that, upon arrival here, neither end of the box was north or south, as the box sat east and west, therefore presume we will have a mixed up, inferior grade of vines. The box evidently got turned around in transit, which fact we are unable to account for. However, will do the best we can under the existing circumstances.

FLORICULTURE.

Under the above title a paper was read before a Farmers' Institute at Tiffin, O., by Mr. Lewis Ullrich, the florist of that city, and should a similar paper be read before like bodies all over the country a vast amount of good to the trade would result. Florists are as a rule inclined to overlook or ignore these opportunities to advance their business interests. This paper is so well adapted for the purpose that we print it below and if any other florist should wish to make use of it in the manner originally used by Mr. Ullrich we feel sure no objection would be made by that gentleman.

Floriculture is the cultivation of plants and flowers, for pleasure or profit. Plants have been cultivated more or less through all the ages, up to the present time, and there has been a vast increase in the taste for floriculture in the last fifty years. Almost every part of the earth is clothed with vegetation, each particular plant being adapted to the circumstances and conditions in which it is placed. In the tropics we find the plant kingdom at the height of its development, the wonderland of flowers, and in the more temperate region the plant kingdom is less striking and gradually diminishes in all forms, until we reach the perpetual snow line, where no vegetation exists.

God Almighty in his infinite wisdom saw fit to create this great diversity of plants and flowers to break the sameness and monotony that would otherwise exist; and that man may be delighted in beholding the beautiful workings of nature in her floral garb and bring her boundless resources to bear practically upon our daily wants and luxuries. Now let us ask, "Should the cultivation of plants be encouraged?" Of course I would say it should, being in the floral business, but that would be a selfish motive if I could give no other reason for their cultivation.

Take a little child into the fields in early spring, when the wild flowers first begin to bloom. There is something in that little body that urges it to get these flowers. That "something" is the love for the beautiful, which God has placed into nearly every heart and needs only the proper condition to develop.

As this child grows older it will not be satisfied with the native wild flowers, but will want some of those which have been brought from foreign countries and have been acclimated by the practical florist, so as to serve man's purpose in decorating home and garden.

In passing through the country we come to a fine residence surrounded by a beautiful lawn. The fences are nicely painted or whitewashed, everything about the place is neat and orderly, no stray tools lying about. The walks kept clean of weeds, no rubbish growing along the fence rows, the trees and shrubbery nicely trimmed and kept. Prominent in one place we see a bed of bright geraniums, at another, farther back on the lawn, a bed of blooming French cannas and at another place a bed of tea roses and near by a fancy bed of coleus and other foliage plants; along the fence on the north side of the yard a bed of annuals and other blooming plants, and last, but not least, is a permanent perennial bed which will produce blossoms the whole season through, year after year, from early spring until frost comes. The general appearance of such a place as this would suggest the occupants to be persons of order, taste and refinement.

At this time a few suggestions as to the proper preparations and planting of such beds as are here alluded to may be of interest to some of my hearers, and if you will bear with me a few moments, I will try and make it as plain to you as I can in as few words as possible.

In preparing the soil for a geranium bed it is essential first to spade deep. If the soil is in a poor condition a good quantity of well rotted stable manure spaded under is necessary, but if the soil is a good rich loam it will not take much manure, for if the soil is too rich the geraniums will grow too rank in foliage and will not bloom as freely. Now when the bed is prepared if you want it all one solid color, for such a bed is more attractive than mixed colors, don't plant any old thing, for there are lots of geraniums that are not worth the room they take up. Select only free blooming ones. If you want the bed a solid red color take any of the following sorts: Heteranthe, Pres. Smith, S. A. Nutt, Bruant, etc. If you want it pink, any of the following: Miss Frances Perkins, Emile de Girardin; if white, LaFavorite is the best.

After the geraniums are placed, having planted them about 15 inches apart, if you have chosen red, a good effect is produced by planting a boarder of yellow coleus on the edge of the bed about 15 inches from the outer row of geraniums and about 8 inches apart in the row. If it is a rank growing coleus you must keep the plants pinched back so they will not grow higher than the geraniums, and that they will branch out and fill up the gaps between the plants, so as to make a solid yellow border.

Now as to a bed of French cannas and caladiums (or Elephant Ears as some call them). Both of these to do very well want a great deal of manure and water. These thrive best in a heavy soil well fertilized. In preparing a bed of this kind I advise to throw out two spades' depth of soil, say from 18 to 24 inches deep. Such a bed is usually made round and wide enough so as to place the plants 15 to 18 inches apart each way. After the soil has been thrown out take some of the strongest, rankest stable manure you can get, put about a foot deep in the hole you have dug and tramp as firmly as possible, then put the soil on top of this.

There are various ways of planting canna beds, a very effective one is to plant in the center a tall-growing, red-blooming sort and around this a more dwarf kind, blooming yellow, then outside of all these a row of Caladium esculentum bulbs. Such a bed is very inexpensive, say 1½ dozen well established canna plants and one dozen Caladium esculentum bulbs. These can be procured for from $1.00 to $1.50 per dozen, so that for $2.50 to $3.50 you can have a showy and attractive tropical effect on your lawn. The roots of these can be wintered over in a good cellar and you will have enough to plant two or more beds another season.

Now I will describe the preparation and planting of a bed that should adorn the yard of every home, and that is a bed of tea roses. Something that, if properly planted and cared for will give you roses all summer. These should be planted in the spring time as early as the soil can be worked, say in April.

Prepare the bed about in the same manner as the canna bed before described, with this difference: instead of using rank, strong manure, use such as is well rotted to put in the bottom of the bed. Be sure to select a sunny spot where the water will not stand around the plants in winter time. After you have the bed prepared put your plants on top of the bed, placing them so that they are about 15 to 18 inches apart all around. Now after you have spaced them as you want them, then plant them just where they stand, digging a hole large enough so as to receive the roots without cramping them, and tramp the soil very firmly around the plants, and when all are planted give them a thorough soaking; by that I mean not a sprinkling of water with a watering can, but a thorough watering so that the bed is soaked entirely through to the bottom of the trench. and after a few days they will show by their growth that they have taken hold of the soil. Then they want a thorough soaking every evening during the summer, especially if the summer should be a dry one; this is very important if you want lots of roses during the season. The soap suds you get on wash days is a very good thing to throw on your rose bed. Such a bed is very inexpensive. You can get the plants for from 15 to 25 cents each by buying them of a florist who makes it a business to grow roses for cut flowers. You can get large plants from the benches with a clump of soil about the roots and if planted at once as I advise, they will go right on and bloom and never suffer the least by the transfer to your garden.

The most essential thing in rose culture is to plant early, firmly, and give plenty of water. As to the protection they need during the winter, after the ground is frozen, cover with dry leaves, but not enough to cover the entire plants. Such a bed, if properly planted and cared for, will thrive for years. I know of some that have been planted at different times during the past six or eight years, and are yet in good condition. Of course now and then a plant dies, but at a small outlay can be replaced. The foliage of rose plants is often injured by mildew and insects. Mildew usually affects rose plants during cold, rainy spells; this can be recognized by the leaves curling, becoming brown spotted and being covered with a gray mold. When this first appears it can be held in check by sprinkling powdered sulphur on the leaves. This is more likely to appear on plants that are planted in a more or less shaded place, or too close together; in either case the foliage grows soft and the excessive moisture cannot dry off as readily as it should. You hardly ever see this on a rose bed planted in an open place, subjected to the direct rays of the sun, for there the foliage grows more hardy and strong and is therefore less subject to this trouble.

The most prevalent scourge that the roses are subject to in this part of the state is the little greenish white slug, that skeletonizes the leaves by eating off the green substance of the leaf and leaving only the woody frame, but if this little fellow is taken in time he can be gotten rid of. There are two broods of this pest during the season, one in June and another in the latter part of August; you can detect his first appearance by some of the leaves showing small white spots and stripes where the little fellow has been feeding. If you are watchful to note this, and then in the evening, for this little pest has his banquet usually by night, sprinkle the plants with powdered hellebore. You can get entirely rid of this pest by one or two applications; but you must not wait until the mischief has been done and your rose plants have become unsightly by his ravages. The same treatment will rid you of the leaf eating worm on your currant and gooseberry bushes.

As to the preparation of a bed of flowers along the north fence as suggested, any good garden soil will answer and there are a great many good things for such a bed. Heliotropes, petunias, feverfew, lantanas, salvias, ageratums, fuchsias, and an endless variety of annuals which can be raised from seed, which all add to the appearance of the bed and give you a greater variety of flowers to pick from for a bouquet.

Now as to a bed of coleus and other fancy-leaved plants. These are usually planted so as to represent some design, fancy ribbon beds, stars, crescents and various other designs. The soil for such a bed should be rather a poor soil, for if the soil is too rich the plants will grow too rank and thus outgrow the design and will lose a great deal of their beautiful coloration. The plants will have to be pinched back and sheared so they will grow evenly, and so that the color lines and the shape of the design are retained. In the selection of plants for this bed it is well to take such varieties as are known to retain their colors when bedded out, for a great many sorts that look the best and have the brightest colors when grown in pots lose their beauty, color and markings, when bedded out.

As to the preparation necessary for a perennial bed. First select a spot of good soil where the bed will remain undisturbed, spade deep and enrich with well rotted manure, and if a good selection of plants is made it will give you flowers the whole season through. Plants for such a bed are numerous. Various colored irises, peonias, phlox, Golden Glow rudbeckia, columbines, gaillardias, lilies of different kinds, the yellow day lily, candidum or St. Joseph's lily, speciosum lilies (alba and rubra), chrysanthemums of different colors, and hundreds of other equally as good things. When such a bed is once planted you will have something that needs but little attention. You must keep it free from weeds and in the fall spade up the soil, as then there is less danger of injuring the roots, for you can readily see where the different plants are by the dry tops that remain from the summer. After it is spaded give it a top dressing of rotted stable manure and leaf mold.

I have now outlined the preparation and necessary care of a few plant beds and if there are any of my hearers who have not already had experience in such work and who may be inclined to try their hand at it this coming season, I would suggest to them to select such beds as would be best suited to the surroundings of their homes, for not all are so fortunate as to have places so extensive as the home heretofore described, but may have room for only one or two beds which, if well done, will afford you pleasure at but little cost. I feel satisfied that it is apparent to every intelligent and unprejudiced mind that every improvement and embellishment made about a home will not only add to its financial value, but cultivates a taste for the beauties of nature and have a refining influence upon both old and young.

There is an impression in the minds of some of our people throughout the country that the farmer has no time for anything but to work his crops. This may have been the case with our forefathers fifty or seventy-five years ago, but in these times of advancement and culture there is no reason why the farmer and his family should not spend a little of their time in pursuit of pleasure. There are various sources of pleasure, one of them is found in thus beautifying the grounds about their homes. And that this is being done by some is very apparent.

I COULD NOT get along without your valuable paper. I have read all the florists' magazines and I must say yours excels them all.—P. W. HENNESSY, Joplin, Mo.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL, BY WM. SCOTT.

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review) and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business, and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold. Following we print a few extracts from letters received from buyers of the book:

A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

After reading Mr. Wm. Scott's Manual, we wish to say that we consider it without equal as a book of reference for busy florists.

NON-FRUITING FILBERTS.

I would like information respecting some English filberts which I obtained from the States some ten years ago and which have never fruited. I first planted them on low, loamy soil, where they remained for five years. Then, as they did not bear, we removed them to higher ground, light sandy loam, where they thrive exceedingly but, although there are male and female flowers each year, they have never borne fruit. Someone suggested that they need salt air and that I am too far from the sea, but cannot think that is the reason, as we have quantities of wild hazel nuts in the woods here. B. B. B.

In reference to the failure of your filberts to bear nuts, there are some points not elucidated by your note, which have an important bearing on the solution of the problem. First, how many are there of your filbert trees? In the hazel, as you have remarked, the staminate and pistillate flowers are separate, and nature, possibly to disfavor inbreeding, ordains that the staminate catkins appear considerably in advance of the female flowers on the same shrub; hence, if there are only a limited number of plants in the group, the chances are strongly against sufficient pollination of the later opening female flowers. A like condition occurs in maize, and experience shows that a few stalks grown alone generally suffer from deficient pollination. In the cultivation of the filbert in England it has been found that in certain localities it will not produce enough catkins for proper fertilization, and the supplying of pollen from the catkins of the wild hazel is advised as a remedy. It would also be important to know whether the filbert has borne nuts in your locality. Because of the structural peculiarity noted above, there are many strictly local conditions which might affect the result—exposure to winds at the time of blooming, premature opening of catkins, excessive rains or moisture. Any of these might hinder the forming of nuts through failure of pollen. In England the cutting out of all suckers and sap growth is found to favor the production of nuts. Perhaps too thrifty growth is unfavorable to fruiting. JOHN HIGGINS.

SUMMER PRUNING.

BY JOSEPH MEEHAN.

Read before the Germantown Horticultural Society, June 8, 1903, by George Redles.

That the pruning of trees and shrubs in summer is not practiced nearly to the extent it should be is partly due to the fact that its benefits have never been made clear, and because in the winter season the gardener has fewer duties demanding his attention. It is the writer's belief that summer pruning is far preferable to winter, as the objects of pruning are the quicker and better obtained by it. These objects, in a general way, are the forming of beautiful specimens, the producing of flowering shoots, and in the case of fruit trees the forming of flower buds looking for fruit to follow them.

As an illustration of the way summer pruning forms beautiful specimens, take, for example, a privet hedge. At this writing (the first days of June) the young shoots of this season are nearly a foot in length. Let alone, they will be two to three feet by fall. But cut them back half their length now and a half dozen shoots replace the one; do it again when these are six inches in length, and again a month or so later, and a bushy mass of shoots will have replaced the original one. It is just the same with trees and shrubs. The many shade trees of our streets and lawns, showing huge scars where large branches have been sawed off, should have been pruned yearly when young and even when older; then there would be no need of cutting off large limbs. The Carolina poplar, a really pretty tree when young, could be kept in good condition a longer time than it is now had it the care of a summer pruner. The tree would then be bushy, affording a foliage much more dense than is now usually seen. I do not recommend this tree, but use it as an illustration, as ill-formed ones of it are common in many places.

As shown in the case of the privet hedge, what is required to produce bushiness and shape is the nipping off of the ends of growing shoots. The finger and thumb can do it when growth is soft. Maples and trees rare and common should be treated in this way, and not pruned in winter when bushiness is the object. Winter pruning acts the other way mainly. A strong shoot cut back unites its forces to replace what it lost; another one stronger than the first takes its place, with but a few weaker ones in the rear.

Evergreens can be benefited in the way of being made bushy as deciduous trees are. Pines generally break forth in spring in clusters of shoots a half dozen or more together. The taking out of the central one will usually suffice, acting as does the pinching off of the end of a shoot on a deciduous tree. The side shoots receive all the support, and thus bushiness is promoted. Other coniferous evergreens of the same character of growth, such as firs and many spruces, require the same kind of pruning. There is but little advantage in more pruning than the taking off of the central shoot, though the nipping away of the extreme tips of the remaining shoots will cause still further bushiness the next season. Such evergreens as retinosporas and arbor-vitae and like forms may be treated as recommended for deciduous trees, but their generally numerous branches make the use of a knife or a shears a matter of saving of time.

In the case of shrubs, when bushiness is the object, treat them just the same as advised for deciduous trees. Taking a weigela or golden bell for example, one would hardly believe the changed appearance of them by fall when treated to several prunings while they are still growing. No one wants shrubs ball shaped; pruning is not for that, it is to give bushiness and a pleasing outline while still in reasonable keeping of natural growth.

Pruning for the increasing of flowering shoots consists in the partial cutting away of the shoots that have flowered, that strong, new ones may succeed them, as these new ones are what we look to for our next spring's flowers. Not all the old shoots must be cut away, as the loss of too many branches is weakening to the bush. As the new ones spring up there is no harm done in topping them as they grow. It makes the bushy specimens we all like to see.

Fruit trees may be shaped just as other trees are, and besides making them bushy it often promotes fruitfulness. In Europe, where the obtaining of the most fruit possible from every tree is of great importance, summer pruning is almost universal. The shoots of cherries, pears, peaches, etc., are pinched back in summer while growth is progressing. This causes the formation of fruit buds below where the top has been taken off. In addition to this a check is placed on the vigor of the tree by removing entirely many of the shoots. To those of us accustomed to letting our fruit trees grow as they will, it is amazing to witness the mass of foliage lying under a fruit tree in England which has just been pruned. In addition to the check thus given, root pruning is largely practiced, also with the idea of forcing fruitfulness by checking growths. There is no doubt the same methods would produce fruitful trees here as well, should any one wish to try it.

Summer pruning of grapes consists of nipping off the shoots producing fruit at two leaves above the bunch. Canes may be allowed to lengthen as they will, winter pruning bringing them back to the proper length. Raspberries and blackberries are often cut off when the canes have made two or three feet of growth. The side shoots are formed, making little bushes of each. Though these bush forms are more self sustaining than others, the fruit is not as large, the greater number of berries produced lessening the size of the whole.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The cold, cloudy weather of the past two weeks has checked the supply of all flowers. The scarcity of stock made a market for everything, and inferior stock for the first time this year was eagerly bought up. A few days of sunshine is all that will be necessary to bring the quantity and quality up again to the standard, and even at this writing stock is again more plentiful. Beauty, Kaiserin, Carnot and Liberty roses are arriving in large quantities; the quality is very fine. Quantities of good Prosperity and Lawson carnations are in evidence which are particularly well grown; they sell readily at $2 and $3 per 100.

Notes.

A few early asters are arriving from Theo. F. Beckert.

Mrs. E. A. Williams has a house of a fine white gladiolus named Augusta.

Wm. Lauch is sending in quantities of pink and white sweet peas, also some good Wm. Scott carnations.

Oil City Rose Gardens are making daily shipments of roses to almost every florist in the city.

Fred Burki has been very successful with his last crop of longiflorum lilies.

H. P. Joslin has taken up the culture of gaillardias for the wholesale market.

Last Tuesday the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. supplied Lloyd Swarthout with 400 special Beauties.

The death of our former mayor, Barnard McKenna, gave the florists of both cities considerable floral work. The most conspicuous among the many designs was a large one to represent steps, significant only to Mayor McKenna's friends. This was made up by T. M. Ulam & Co. Hoo-Hoo.

CINCINNATI.

Moderate weather is still with us and business is very much the same as reported last week; that is, it is first-class, being a great deal better than for this time last year. This seems to be the general report, for all those whom I have asked say that there is a very good increase over last year. It would be a hard matter to give any special reasons for this, other than that the florists' business is a growing business and is as yet only in its infancy.

The supply of stock is still holding out remarkably well for the season. Roses, if anything, are improving in quality, Maids being especially good in many cases. La France are much in demand and there are some fine vines to be had. Golden Gate and Ivory are doing first-class. Brides are not extra. The majority of the shipped ones arrive badly bruised and almost unsalable. Liberties and Meteors are scarce and there are not enough Beauties to fill all orders. Those that come in, as a rule, are of very good quality.

Owing to the cool weather carnations also are good. There are none that you can call fancy, but the best grades are not far behind. The supply is about equal to the demand, but more good white and red could be sold.

Continued rains keep the supply of sweet peas very limited and the demand for them is very good consequently. Some good ones are still being cut from indoors, and sell readily.

Some longiflorum lilies are still to be had, but the supply is very limited. There are but few callas. Alyssums, candy tuft, stocks, etc., find a ready market and at good prices. You can get anything you want in greens and it is all good stock.

Notes.

The outing committee has selected Coney Island for this year's outing. Thursday, July 23, is the date selected. Tickets are now out and are 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children under 10 years. Besides the regular attractions at the Island, there will be a bowling contest for teams of five men each, with first, second and third prize; also for best individual score. There will also be a prize for best score made by a lady. The bowling is in charge of W. Schuman, who will receive all entries. In the afternoon there will be a ball game. This is in charge of Mr. Kunzelman. Indications point to a large crowd and a good time for all.

At the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, held Saturday afternoon, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: C. J. Ohmer, president; Wm. Schuman, vice-president; Geo. Murphy, secretary; L. H. Kyrk, treasurer. The new officers will take their seats at the next meeting of the society, which will be held at the residence of D. Rusconi, Covington, Ky., July 9.

Visitors during the past week were: C. W. Ward, of Queens, N. Y., and J. T. Herdigen, Aurora, Ind.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

The arrival of summer has had a perceptible influence on sales, but business has been very good and everything in cut flowers has been sold. Red roses have been scarce. Beauties have also been in good demand, with not enough to go around. Other roses are fairly plentiful, although good stock is all cleaned up every night. Sweet peas are becoming more plentiful, although outside stock is not yet in bloom. May & Co. are still receiving gardenias from Texas, which come in very nicely for funeral designs.

Country trade has held up well, there being a heavy demand for commencements, weddings and funerals. While there seems to have been a large amount of bedding out, filling vases and boxes, and a nice cemetery trade, most of the plant growers report stock left over. This is most likely due to larger stocks being grown than ever before. Prices have been well maintained and the majority of growers are feeling better than they did in the winter, when the sun didn't shine and coal was $7 to $10 a ton.

Carnations in the field are doing well, but will need rain soon, as none has fallen in four weeks.

We hear of but little building projected this season, owing, no doubt, to the high price of labor and material.

Frank Berry, of Stillwater, has sailed for England, to be absent for several months. Mrs. Berry will look after the business during his absence.

M. J. Weppeler, representing the Geo. Wittbold Co., of Chicago, was a recent visitor.

Dr. R. Schiffmann has returned from his trip around the world, bringing with him a large collection of orchids gathered from the four quarters of the globe.

L. L. May & Co. are selling strawberries at their store, fresh from Mayfield farm. X. Y. Z.

STERLING, ILL.—Ernest Swartley and his sister, Miss Lillian, have started on a two-months' eastern trip.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business holds on fairly well considering that June is supposed to be our quiet month. The weather has been very cool for the last two weeks and flowers, particularly roses, are in better color and form than for some time past. Carnations are good, but very cheap. Estelle, Prosperity, Lawson and most of the fancy varieties wholesale at $2 per hundred. Flora Hill, Ethel Crocker, America, Mrs. Bradt, E. Schwerin, Mrs. Joost, Wm. Scott and such sorts wholesale at from $1 to $1.50 per hundred. American Beauties bring from 75 cents to $2 per dozen. Brides and Maids fetch 25 to 75 cents and Kaiserin and Liberty from 25 to 50 cents per dozen. Outdoor stock is very plentiful and is in fair demand, but the bulk of it is disposed of to the sidewalk merchants, of whom San Francisco has a large share. Outdoor roses are somewhat past their prime and we shall not have another good crop until fall.

Notes.

The California State Floral Society met June 15, with Professor Emory Smith in the chair. Theodore Hittell read a paper on "The Acorn and the Oak," and the preservation of the oaks in California was the principal topic of the day. The society received a letter from President Roosevelt, thanking the members for the gift of golden poppies on the occasion of his recent visit.

John Gill, of West Berkeley, well known as the largest rose grower on the coast, is at present on a visit to Southern California.

John Breen will have charge of the large greenhouses now in the course of erection at Burlingame for P. C. Meyer. They have contracted for a large lot of field-grown roses for forcing and it is the intention to force about 20,000 chrysanthemums for this coming season. G.

KANSAS CITY.

Business is now in the good old summer way, except for an occasional good funeral order or a wedding job. Sweet peas are plentiful and good and sell well, roses and carnations are off color and small.

A. F. Barbe will close his downtown store for the summer.

Arthur Newell has bought another horse, which he thinks is Pat's equal or better.

J. S. Short, of Kansas City, Kans., reports that there is always something doing over at his place across the Kaw.

Geo. M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, Mo., reports the loss of a barn by lightning and fire Sunday. L. M. S.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.—Mr. Luther Burbank, of Santa Rosa, has been here the past week, recuperating from an attack of la grippe. He says that among his novelties for next year is an improved form of the Shasta daisy, with flowers fully double the size of the original of the type. He has also a double form of this daisy. Among fruits his leading novelty is a race of plums that have no stones. On the occasion of the concert at the public library on the 19th inst. interesting displays of plants and flowers were made in the library rooms by Thos. Thompson, E. Leedham, Dr. Parker and others.

(REGISTERED)

Greenhouse Fumigating Powder

Is the newest and best article on the market to-day for the complete destruction of all insects that infest Greenhouses or Conservatories, being a special boon to Rose and Beauty growers and prepared particularly for the destruction of Greenfly and Thrips. There is nothing injurious in it to plant life, even the most delicate fern. It is especially recommended for Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Smilax, Asparagus, Palms, Ferns, etc., and we claim that insects will be entirely eradicated when the houses are thoroughly fumigated with the powder. It is put up as follows:

1 lb. Tin Can.....$.25
5 lb. Tin Can..... 1.00
25 lb. Sealed Box..... 4.50
100 lb Sealed Box.....16.50

(NEPHROLEPIS PIERSONI.)

There is nothing that you can plant that will increase in value so rapidly as this fern. The demand has been so great, and our advance sales so large, that we have not offered it recently, having only just completed filling advance orders. We have a nice lot of young stock coming on, and can fill all orders received from this date promptly on receipt. Even at the present high price it has been impossible to keep up with the demand, and there is sure to be a tremendous demand for it another season when it can be offered at lower prices. Now is the time to invest in it and get the benefit of the tremendous demand and good prices which are sure to prevail another season. The Boston Fern, although it has been cultivated many years, is still scarce. As Nephrolepis Piersoni will sell better and be in greater demand even than the Boston Fern, we predict a scarcity of Nephrolepis Piersoni for several years to come and at big prices. Owing to the great and continued demand, we do not expect to be more than able to meet the demand this spring, so that customers can rest assured that there will be no change in price this season.

We offer strong young plants, 2 1/4-in. pots, at $9.00 per doz.; 50 plants at 80c each; 100 plants at 50c each; 500 plants at 45c each; 1000 plants at 40c each.

Extra large plants, 6-in. pots, $27.00 per doz; 50 plants at $1.80 each; 100 plants at $1.50 each. These large plants will make fine stock for growing on into large specimens for fall trade, and they are also very nice for immediate sales.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Mignonette.

Somewhere about the middle of July is a good time to sow mignonette for next winter's crop. We consider it a profitable crop, and we have a neighbor who makes a good thing out of it. It is not much good to mention varieties, as most likely you will have some strain selected and saved yourself. When Allan's Defiance was true it was very good. There is not so much in variety as in the growing. Mignonette is a difficult plant to transplant as you do asters, etc., therefore you should sow a dozen seeds where you want the plant in the bed, or sow three little patches of seed in 2½-inch pots and when large enough separate without disturbing the roots. Whichever way you do, it is well to have a plant or two for the green cabbage worm, which will be sure to be around in August and September, and they are so identically the color of the foliage that you don't see them until they have had a good feed. However, a little Paris green sprayed over them in time gives the worms acute indigestion and they are not a serious pest. My friend who grows mignonette so well and profitably plants it on a raised bench in five or six inches of soil, and that will grow it well up to Easter. Still, a solid bed will grow it better and keep the foliage a better color. One foot apart is close enough to plant them if you want good spikes and a continuous crop. It wants the fullest light, and 40 degrees at night is plenty warm enough.

Bermuda Lilies.

It will not be long before the earliest shipments of Bermuda lilies arrive. They are a very important article nowadays and from October on are always in good demand. Considering the price of the bulbs, the short time they occupy the bench and the little space they require, they are assuredly one of the most profitable plants we grow. The 5 to 7 bulbs are those usually grown for mid-winter use. They are nearly all used cut and there is less waste of unopened buds. A stalk with three or four flowers is easier to arrange than one with six or seven flowers and buds. I once tried a dozen bulbs in a flat five or six inches deep. I don't like the plan nearly so well as growing them in 5-inch pots.

Don't delay at all in getting the bulbs potted. It does the bulbs no good to be exposed to the air; it is very unnatural. Sometimes you may have a shaded bench where the house is as cool or cooler than outside. If so, they can be potted and stood on the bench at once. If you have no such bench, put them in a frame and cover with boards to keep the sun from drying them out. In any case, after potting and watering lay an inch of sphagnum moss or refuse hops or some light material on the surface of the soil and much less watering will be needed. It can be shaken off later when growth has started. As the bulbs are but lately dug in Bermuda and now is their resting time, don't expect them to start off rooting and growing as you do those that you pot in October. Just keep them moderately and uniformly moist, but not wet, and have patience. When they are well rooted they can be given a light, warm house; and to have them in flower by early November they will want a good heat in the cool nights of September and October. Unless you grow for a big market, where large quantities can be swallowed up at a time, you will, of course, have your lilies come along in succession and strive to have a good many for the holidays, for they are in demand then for decorations. Don't use any fresh manure in the soil. A good loam with a little well rotted manure added suits them finely.

Fumigation.

What a continual fight it is against our enemy, the aphid. The failure to keep down the fly on our roses, carnations, lilies, violets and many other important plants represents the loss of many dollars and often great damage is done, particularly on carnations, before you notice that the fly is numerous. Really the fly should never be seen. Once he is visible to the naked eye, harm has been done. We florists, as a class, are an unmethodical set. The recruits to our ranks from the lawyer's office, the dry goods counter or the pulpit are more likely to be faithful in guarding against our little enemies than the man who began at fourteen years of age, cracking pots or painting labels.

How to fumigate is not yet settled, particularly with roses, for burning tobacco stems, if strong enough to keep the fly down, will most assuredly curl up the petals of the teas. With many of our plants the old tin pot and tobacco stems does very well, but it gives the flowers a barbarous odor and we don't always know how much or little it has crippled the growth of many plants. So much for the old-fashioned smoke pot, but let me say here that in my opinion it is not the nicotine in the smoke that twists the petals of roses and burns the leaves of other plants, but just the smoke itself. And, finally, it is a very disagreeable job. There are lots of us so saturated with nicotine that we can hold our heads over the fumigating pot and discuss the weather or Chamberlain's proposed preferential imperial tariff, but at the same time whenever I say, "You are going to smoke tonight, Charlie," I have a slight sinking feeling that, if expressed, would say, "Poor Charlie."

Some have a jet of steam running into a large can of chopped stems, which makes a vapor, and some say that no man who vaporizes can grow good roses. Some have tin or cast iron pans on top of the pipes, filled with some nicotine solution which is continually evaporating; others paint the steam or hot water pipes with nicotine, while still others use the hot brick or hot iron dropped into a dish of solution, which causes a vapor that is not very different in effect from the can of chopped stems and the injection of steam. Then again, I have seen little pyramids of tobacco dust on the floor—say about one pint—and the apex of the cone is lighted and it smoulders away for an hour or two. If it burns as desired, it is, I think, the best and most effectual of all methods to keep down fly without injuring flowers or foliage.

But I can tell you, or some of you, of a better way of burning the dust. The method I have used most satisfactorily the past winter in the six rose houses was given me by our revered and honored friend of Syracuse, N. Y., he who went to Philadelphia a few years ago and "made his mark, you see," later of the scarlet Flamingo fame, and anyone who has seen his carnation flowers or heard him talk would have to admit that his method of fumigating is "O. K.," for there are no flies on him. Mr. Marquisee will, I feel sure, have no objection to my attempting to help a brother florist. He may have given this to you himself, brother florist. If so, I did not notice it.

Mr. Marquisee's Device.

Procure at the tinware shop some cake pans. In correspondence I have called them pie dishes, but my better half says that pie dishes are round, so we will call these cake dishes. As I don't eat pie or cake, she is most likely right. Those I am using measure at the bottom eleven inches long and six and one-half wide, and the edge, which flares outward, is two inches deep. Size, of course, is of no consequence, but I think the above size is about right. The bottom of the dish is cut out to within three-quarters of an inch of the sides of the dish and then a piece of wire mosquito netting is cut the size of the bottom of the dish and laid in place of the tin cut out. On one end of the dish we have a strip of tin riveted on beneath, so as to keep one end up and afford a draught up through the dust. We fill this dish about three-quarters of its depth with the dust. When lighting put a few drops of kerosene oil at the lowest point, touch a match to it and go home. In the six houses, each 21x150, we have used twenty-four pans, or four to a house. By doing this faithfully once a week we have not seen a sign of greenfly or any other fly. There has not been a vestige of injury to the roses and it has been a comfort and pleasure to do the trick.

And if it is good for roses it is good for everything else. Looking through the glass from outside you would scarcely know anything was going on, but an hour after the stuff is lighted the effect on your eyes will quickly let you know that there is nicotine around. Every particle of the dust is consumed. And in the morning don't let the dishes lie kicking around the paths, but pick them up and have a place for them. The whole outfit for these houses costs but a trifle and after eight months' service neither the tin nor the netting is the worse for wear. I think Mr. Marquisee said he got his dust (he gets a good deal of dust from all over the country) from the local cigar makers. I use regular fumigating dust from New York City, which costs 2 cents per pound, and it pays to get the proper article. But I have smoked enough this morning, so now I will go to the pump and cool off.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

MARINE CITY, MICH.—Herbert Lester is putting $3,000 worth of improvements on his greenhouses.

HARDY ROSES AT CHICAGO.

The accompanying illustrations show the famous World's Fair rose garden on the Wooded Island, Jackson Park, Chicago, as it appeared June 22, 1903. The display was never better and large numbers of visitors have been attracted. A noticeable thing in this garden is the number of persons who are seen, notebook in hand, examining the labels, evidently making memoranda as to varieties for reference in planting.

W. C. Egan, writing in Country Life, says that on the Wooded Island Duchess de Morny, Caroline de Arden, Belle Normandie, Comtesse de Serenye, La France, G. M. Maurande, Baroness Rothschild, Earl of Dufferin and Jean Liabaud are quoted as doing well while at Highland Park, where the elevation is eighty feet higher, they are not reliable. Mr. Egan names the following hybrid perpetuals as most reliable with him:

Carmine, crimson and red.—Prince Camille de Rohan, Gen. Jacqueminot, La Rosiere, Captain Hayward, Anne de Diesbach, Alfred Colomb, Countess of Oxford, Ulrich Brunner, Marshall P. Wilder, Louis Van Houtte, Mme. Victor Verdier, Pierre Notting, Eugene Furst, Pæonia.

Pink and rose.—Magna Charta, Mrs. R. G. Sharman-Crawford, Captain Christy, Garden Favorite, Paul Neyron, John Hopper, Baronne Provost, Prince of Wales, Lyonnaise, Mlle. Suzanne de Rodocanachi.

White and blush.—Mrs. Paul, Perle des Blanches, Mme. Plantier, Hybrid China.

Mrs. John Laing and Jeannie Dickson are tender at Jackson Park.

ROSES.Seasonable Hints.

For the next few weeks the young stock will require a good deal of attention, particularly if the weather is hot. Proper regard to ventilation, care in watering supplies of water required will cause a growth of weeds under the benches and along the sides of the paths. These, if allowed to remain, become a harbor of refuge and a breeding spot for both red spider and thrips.

Attention to these matters, however small they may appear, should form part of the daily duties of the grower, for it will surely bring its reward. Staking and tying will also demand attention. Tying, when properly performed, is a tedious and tiresome job and requires a lot of patience. Each shoot should be so arranged and tied that the air may circulate among the leaves and with due regard to giving the bush a symmetrical form.

The young shoots, being soft and as yet deficient in woody fiber, will require careful handling. The strings must be tied so that there may be room for the shoot to swell and develop without interfering with the bark. If tied too tight the bark will overgrow the string. This will interfere with the free flow of sap and cause those unsightly protuberances on the stem which are a sure evidence of unskillful or careless work.

Disbudding will also claim attention. Merely nipping off the bud is a rather primitive and easy way of doing the work, but it is far from attaining the object desired, viz.: encouraging and strengthening the eyes which should be selected for the future stems by diverting to them the flow of sap, instead of letting it be used in developing and perfecting flowers and leaves which at present are not desirable or necessary.

It is a safe plan to cut off, along with the bud, three or more of the topmost eyes, being guided in this number by the strength and length of the stem operated on. If this is done carefully and with skill it reduces the production of small blind wood, giving room and light to the remaining eyes, which are designed to furnish the future flowering stem.

During hot weather the house should be kept cool by frequently wetting the neat in appearance. Take No. 6 galvanized wire cut seven or eight feet long, and bend it in the shape of a double stake, the ends three to three and a half feet long and the top twelve to fifteen inches wide, the width being governed by the distance apart the roses may be planted. Set the double stakes between the plants and with each stake you have a support for two bushes, and one which is very easily placed or removed as occasion may require.

E. E. HOLBROOK.

A MALFORMATION.

I enclose a monstrosity cut from a sweet briar rose. What is it?

J. G. L.

This malformation is not an uncommon occurrence among the sweet briars, and sometimes extends to the mosses and hybrid teas. It prevails during cold and moist weather and particularly in shady situations, and but rarely where exposed to full sunshine. It is really a diversion of all the petals, pistils, leaves of the calyx, etc., into stamens, which in some cases become so crowded as to assume the form of a moss. This is no real disease, as it may be found in bushes producing an abundance of the finest blooms, and has no tendency to spread. It is rarely found in teas or their hybrids, nor in H. P's. and never under greenhouse culture. It may be due to some insect interfering with the bud (a likely proposition), or it may be due to climatic conditions. However, it is more of a curiosity than a subject for alarm.

RIBES.

TO CARRY ROSES OVER.

I have a rose bed planted last August. It did not do much the past year, but the plants made fine growth. The house was kept at a cool carnation temperature (night temperature about 50 degrees) and the roses were healthy, but this spring mildew has been fairly bad, in spite of plenty of ventilation. Now I would like to keep this bed of roses over if possible. They are on a bench six inches deep. They are growing well now. Will it be necessary to dry these off or can we keep them growing right along? The varieties are American Beauty, Golden Gate, Bride, Bridesmaid, Meteor and Perle. How should the soil be prepared, etc.?

L. H. C.

Seeing that these roses were planted late, and did not do much during the winter, there is no necessity for drying them off this season. Apply a light mulch as recommended in the rose notes in the REVIEW of June 25. It will be more profitable to keep the temperature at 56 degrees or 58 degrees during the winter; 50 degrees is too low. Meteors seldom if ever give satisfaction if grown at a lower temperature than 68 degrees, and consequently fare better in a house by themselves.

Ventilation, to be beneficial, requires to be carefully attended to, beginning in the morning by raising the ventilators a little at a time as the day warms and gradually lowering them again during the afternoon, as it gets cooler, so that no sudden change of temperature may occur, and carefully guarding against draughts.

To overcome the mildew there is no better remedy than flowers of sulphur intelligently applied. The first essential towards the proper application of and syringing, watching for the first signs of mildew, and keeping insect pests in subjection will keep us alert for the rest of the summer.

After the planting is finished the houses should get a thorough cleaning, all rubbish and dirt raked from under the benches, and the paths cleaned and repaired. During the summer the plentiful paths and giving the foliage a good syringing every bright afternoon.

RIBES.

TYING ROSE PLANTS.

Noticing Ribes' letter on tying roses, I offer my method as a suggestion. The plan is much less expensive and is also sulphur is a good serviceable blower. The best machine that I know of for this purpose is the Peerless blower, which will be found advertised in these columns. It distributes evenly and quickly. When about to use the sulphur close the ventilators so that the powder may have a chance to settle evenly, and keep them closed for half an hour or so. This should be done during bright weather and when the foliage is dry. This should be done twice a week till the trouble disappears, and once a week after that, as a precautionary measure.

When firing becomes necessary, painting the pipes with a mixture of two parts sulphur and one part air slaked lime will keep mildew away. If steam is used, put the sulphur on the return pipes; the hotter pipes will cause it to fuse, and the fumes of sulphur in a state of fusion is death to vegetable life.

RIBES.

ROOTING 'MUMS LATE.

When reading the recent article on chrysanthemums damping off, I thought that perhaps my experience in procuring late stock might be found useful to others who have trouble rooting stock in sand in summer. I had trouble with late struck cuttings, not from damping off, but I could not get good stems and the plants were not as strong as those from earlier cuttings. So I struck upon the following plan, which has given me great satisfaction for my last batch of stock is even bigger and stronger than the first.

After the stock plants are brought in from the cold frame they are planted on a light bench in good soil; then as soon as the cuttings are about three inches high they are taken and rooted in sand in the usual way. Then the stock plants are covered up with soil until nothing is seen but a few dead sticks left from last year's cut, and the label of each sort. They are then watered and very soon the shoots begin to break through and grow very rapidly, making strong growth. When they are about six inches high they are pulled off, not cut off, and are found to be fine plants ready for 3-inch pots, with a large bunch of roots and most of them with two stems, which are left on if the previous cutting was strong when cut. They are then potted into 3-inch pots and well watered and shaded until they start growing.

The cuttings, or I should say plants, taken this way are very strong and vigorous, as there is no drain on their vitality in making roots, for their attachment to the stock plants sustains and keeps them growing. They very soon outstrip the sand-struck plants, for by the time the sand-struck plants are ready for 3-inch pots these are ready for 4-inch, or the bench, if it is ready for them.

A second crop of cuttings may be taken before the stock plants are covered up, if the stock plants are brought in early enough from the frame and if much stock is wanted. The varieties I have rooted in this manner are Major Bonaffon, Mrs. Weeks, Ivory, Autumn Glory, J. E. Lager, Glory of Pacific, Polly Rose, October Sunshine and Mrs. Jerome Jones. The latter does not root as readily as the others; it has to remain longer on the plants. I am sure that anyone who tries this method in rooting his last batch of cuttings from stock plants will be more than satisfied with results.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Stem-Rot in the Field.

Carnation fields in this section are in most instances soaked to the point of saturation, making it impossible to cultivate, besides producing conditions conducive to the development of stem-rot. There are so many conditions beyond our control that tend toward the development of this disease in the field that it must be admitted to be one of, if not the worst enemy with which the grower has to contend. An advantage in having its ravages take place in the field is that less time and space are wasted, also contamination of valuable bench soil is avoided. I do not believe it to be a constitutional disease, but brought on wholly by conditions surrounding the plants. In that case it is necessary to resort to prevention rather than cure.

Intelligent preparation of field soil as regards fertility, method of handling, grade and general aspect of the land must be carefully studied. I have seen bad cases of stem-rot on land enriched by too much animal manure. If some other hoed crop had been grown the first year, the land ploughed late in the fall, left exposed to the action of the frost, again ploughed in the spring and with the harrowing in of a liberal coat of wood ashes or air-slaked lime, the result would have been different.

In the case of depression in the land allowing the plants to stand in water for some time, the effect cannot be laid to stem-rot. Any plant but an aquatic would suffer by the rotting of its roots. We see equally well grown plants on both clayey and sandy soils; also cases of stem-rot occur in each kind of soil, so that while moisture has its effect in aggravating the trouble, it can hardly be called the cause; in fact, no one thing can be put down as the cause.

From the time the plant is set in the field until lifting time, there are many ways and means of its receiving a check in growth. It is then, I claim, that fungus growths embrace their opportunity. The ever present, lurking, thread-like germ enters; the conditions are perfect for its development; the result is soon apparent.

In arresting its progress it has been my practice to remove affected plants as soon as discovered, securing the entire plant with a liberal ball, taking care to remove the whole to a safe distance and burn, afterward working into the surrounding soil a small handful of air-slaked lime. This year I am using six parts lime to one of grape dust; by this means employing three or more fungicides at once.

Having had but very little rot this year, I can only report adjoining plants in good health. From experience of other years I am satisfied that the disease did not spread from plant to plant. Last week as a general precaution I gave the whole field a sprinkling of lime. Hope to say more about lime next week.

PLANTING AND FUMIGATING.

What is the proper distance apart to plant Princess of Wales violets? What is the proper amount of potassium cyanide to make gas for fumigating a house 50 feet long, 10 feet to ridge and both side walls 6 feet high?

SUBSCRIBER.

Ten inches is a good average distance, but this, like everything of this kind, can have no arbitrary rule, as so much depends upon your stock, your soil, time when planted, etc. One must learn by experience, after following general advice, how well his soil is adapted to each variety, and how large a clump or crown they make with proper treatment during the season, and therefore be guided by that. Always bear in mind that you will pick more and better flowers if the plants are planted a sufficient distance apart to allow the proper circulation of air around them. In illustration of this fact, just notice the next time you have, or see, a house that was planted too thickly, and see how much better the plants are in health and the flowers in size all about the edge of the border or bench, proving that they have plenty of air and opportunity to dry off quickly after watering, especially on dark, damp days, when there is a natural tendency to decay.

Subscriber has failed to give the width of his house, so I cannot tell him the exact quantity of cyanide to use in fumigating, but he can readily figure it out

HARDY ROSES AT CHICAGO.

The accompanying illustrations show the famous World's Fair rose garden on the Wooded Island, Jackson Park, Chicago, as it appeared June 22, 1903. The display was never better and large numbers of visitors have been attracted. A noticeable thing in this garden is the number of persons who are seen, note book in hand, examining the labels, evidently making memoranda as to varieties for reference in planting.

W. C. Egan, writing in Country Life, says that on the Wooded Island Duchess de Morny, Caroline de Arden, Belle Normandie, Comtesse de Serenye, La France, G. M. Maurande, Baroness Rothschild, Earl of Dufferin and Jean Liabaud are quoted as doing well while at Highland Park, where the elevation is eighty feet higher, they are not reliable. Mr. Egan names the following hybrid perpetuals as most reliable with him:

Carmine, crimson and red.—Prince Camille de Rohan, Gen. Jacqueminot, La Rosiere, Captain Hayward, Anne de Diesbach, Alfred Colomb, Countess of Oxford, Ulrich Brunner, Marshall P. Wilder, Louis Van Houtte, Mme. Victor Verrier, Pierre Notting, Eugene Furst, Peonia. Pink and rose, Magna Charta, Mrs. R. G. Sharman-Crawford, Captain Christy, Garden Favorite, Paul Neyron, John Hopper, Baronne Provost, Prince of Wales, Lyonnaise, Mlle. Suzanne de Rodocanachi.

White and blush, Mrs. Paul, Perle des Blanchés, Mme. Plantier, Hybrid China.

Mrs. John Laing and Jeannie Dickson are tender at Jackson Park.

ROSES.Seasonable Hints.

For the next few weeks the young stock will require a good deal of attention, particularly if the weather is hot. Proper regard to ventilation, care in watering supplies of water required will cause a growth of weeds under the benches and along the sides of the paths. These, if allowed to remain, become a harbor of refuge and a breeding spot for both red spider and thrips.

Attention to these matters, however small they may appear, should form part of the daily duties of the grower, for it will surely bring its reward. Staking and tying will also demand attention. Tying, when properly performed, is a tedious and tiresome job and requires a lot of patience. Each shoot should be so arranged and tied that the air may circulate among the leaves and with due regard to giving the bush a symmetrical form.

The young shoots, being soft and as yet deficient in woody fiber, will require careful handling. The strings must be tied so that there may be room for the shoot to swell and develop without interfering with the bark. If tied too tight the bark will overgrow the string. This will interfere with the free flow of sap and cause those unsightly protuberances on the stem which are a sure evidence of unskillful or careless work.

Disbudding will also claim attention. Merely nipping off the bud is a rather primitive and easy way of doing the work, but it is far from attaining the object desired, viz.: encouraging and strengthening the eyes which should be selected for the future stems by diverting to them the flow of sap, instead of letting it be used in developing and perfecting flowers and leaves which at present are not desirable or necessary.

It is a safe plan to cut off, along with the bud, three or more of the topmost eyes, being guided in this number by the strength and length of the stem operated on. If this is done carefully and with skill it reduces the production of small blind wood, giving room and light to the remaining eyes, which are designed to furnish the future flowering stem.

During hot weather the house should be kept cool by frequently wetting the neat in appearance. Take No. 6 galvanized wire cut seven or eight feet long, and bend it in the shape of a double stake, the ends three to three and a half feet long and the top twelve to fifteen inches wide, the width being governed by the distance apart the roses may be planted. Set the double stakes between the plants and with each stake you have a support for two bushes, and one which is very easily placed or removed as occasion may require.

E. E. HOLBROOK.

A MALFORMATION.

I enclose a monstrosity cut from a sweet briar rose. What is it?

J. G. L.

This malformation is not an uncommon occurrence among the sweet briars, and sometimes extends to the mosses and hybrid teas. It prevails during cold and moist weather and particularly in shady situations, and but rarely where exposed to full sunshine. It is really a diversion of all the petals, pistils, leaves of the calyx, etc., into stamens, which in some cases become so crowded as to assume the form of a moss. This is no real disease, as it may be found in bushes producing an abundance of the finest blooms, and has no tendency to spread. It is rarely found in teas or their hybrids, nor in H. P's, and never under greenhouse culture. It may be due to some insect interfering with the bud (a likely proposition), or it may be due to climatic conditions. However, it is more of a curiosity than a subject for alarm.

RIBES.

TO CARRY ROSES OVER.

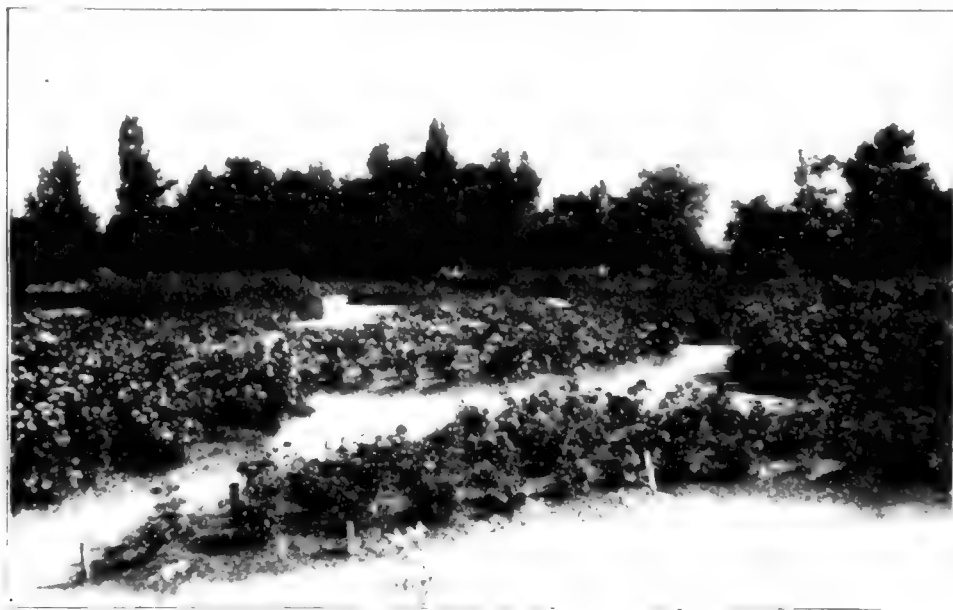

I have a rose bed planted last August. It did not do much the past year, but the plants made fine growth. The house was kept at a cool carnation temperature (night temperature about 50 degrees) and the roses were healthy, but this spring mildew has been fairly bad, in spite of plenty of ventilation. Now I would like to keep this bed of roses over if possible. They are on a bench six inches deep. They are growing well now. Will it be necessary to dry these off or can we keep them growing right along? The varieties are American Beauty, Golden Gate, Bride, Bridesmaid, Meteor and Perle. How should the soil be prepared, etc.?

L. H. C.

Seeing that these roses were planted late, and did not do much during the winter, there is no necessity for drying them off this season. Apply a light mulch as recommended in the rose notes in the REVIEW of June 25. It will be more profitable to keep the temperature at 56 degrees or 58 degrees during the winter; 50 degrees is too low. Meteors seldom if ever give satisfaction if grown at a lower temperature than 68 degrees, and consequently fare better in a house by themselves.

Ventilation, to be beneficial, requires to be carefully attended to, beginning in the morning by raising the ventilators a little at a time as the day warms and gradually lowering them again during the afternoon, as it gets cooler, so that no sudden change of temperature may occur, and carefully guarding against draughts.

To overcome the mildew there is no better remedy than flowers of sulphur intelligently applied. The first essential towards the proper application of and syringing, watching for the first signs of mildew, and keeping insect pests in subjection will keep us alert for the rest of the summer.

After the planting is finished the houses should get a thorough cleaning, all rubbish and dirt raked from under the benches, and the paths cleaned and repaired. During the summer the plentiful paths and giving the foliage a good syringing every bright afternoon.

RIBES.

TYING ROSE PLANTS.

Noticing Ribes' letter on tying roses, I offer my method as a suggestion. The plan is much less expensive and is also sulphur is a good serviceable blower. The best machine that I know of for this purpose is the Peerless blower, which will be found advertised in these columns. It distributes evenly and quickly. When about to use the sulphur close the ventilators so that the powder may have a chance to settle evenly, and keep them closed for half an hour or so. This should be done during bright weather and when the foliage is dry. This should be done twice a week till the trouble disappears, and once a week after that, as a precautionary measure.

When firing becomes necessary, painting the pipes with a mixture of two parts sulphur and one part air-slaked lime will keep mildew away. If steam is used, put the sulphur on the return pipes; the hotter pipes will cause it to fuse, and the fumes of sulphur in a state of fusion is death to vegetable life.

EASTER LILIES FROM SEED.

George W. Oliver, of the United States Department of Agriculture, has been conducting experiments in the propagation of the Easter lily from seed and the results are set forth in Bulletin No. 39, issued June 24, 1903, from which we reproduce the accompanying illustrations and the following extracts:

From small beginnings a little more than twenty years ago, the Easter lily industry has assumed vast proportions in recent years. In Bermuda more than 3,000,000 bulbs are exported annually to the United States. In Japan, at the present day millions of bulbs are grown from seed each year, the demand being so large that enough cannot be grown from vegetative reproduction. But, unfortunately, up to the present time there has been no selection from the seedlings. This is the reason why with each importation from Japan many bulbs are found which, when the plants begin to bloom, lack uniformity in size of stem, foliage, time of flowering and other characteristics. It is owing principally to the decadence of the Bermuda crop that the demand for bulbs from Japan has increased so very markedly in recent years. In 1895 the value of the bulbs exported from that country was $40,000. In 1899 the figures jumped to $130,000 and the increase during the past three seasons has doubtless been correspondingly large.

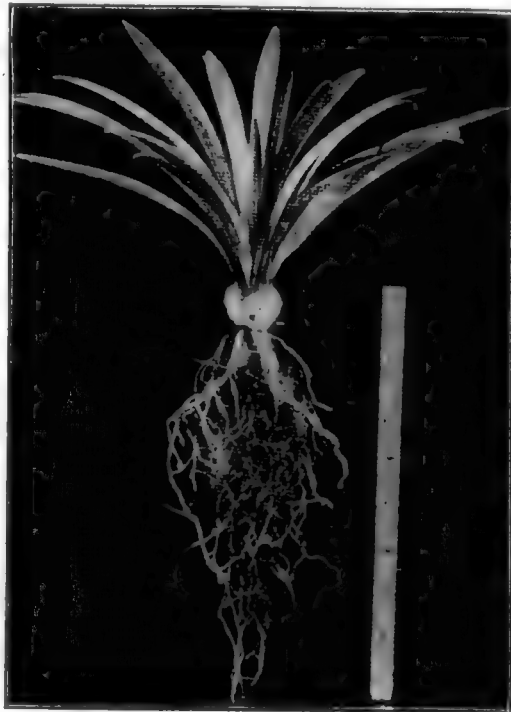

Owing to the frequent and constantly increasing number of complaints relative to the diseased condition of the Bermuda and Japan grown bulbs, the growers of this country are confronted with a condition to which considerable attention has already been given with a view to mitigating the troubles with which they have to contend in forcing the bulbs into bloom. When it is considered that probably over 5,000,000 lily bulbs are forced each spring, it will be seen that the crop is of great value; but experiences indicate that profits are very much curtailed by the diseased condition of the bulbs. During the past year complaints have been received from some of the largest growers that from 20 to 60 per cent of the bulbs were diseased.

Lily growing in Bermuda is an exceedingly profitable industry. Practically all the land available for the production of bulbs is utilized for this purpose, and, while a few growers use care, lax methods prevail because of the greater immediate gain. For instance, in the growing of bulbs for the American market the smaller sizes are planted in the fall and harvested in July, or before the bulbs have thoroughly ripened. In the process of handling, many immature scales drop from the bulbs. These are not thrown away, as they should be, but are carefully saved and planted with a view to raising small bulbs. These bulbs ultimately form a large part of the general crop.

As a result of investigation by the United States Department of Agriculture, it has been shown that by the use of seeds instead of scales, larger bulbs can be secured in a much shorter time than by the scale method. If the general crop were raised from seeds there would be a saving of at least a year in the production of a marketable bulb. Moreover, it has been demonstrated that in this way plants can be grown which are entirely free from disease, and, most important of all, that the seedlings give an opportunity to select better types than exist at the present time.

In a large number of seedlings at least 50 per cent can be counted on to show desirable characteristics, which will be shown the first year following that in which the seed is sown, by the plants coming into flower. The remainder can be discarded and the good ones grown on for forcing, the size necessary for which will be attained the season following, or within two years from the time the seeds are sown. By keeping up the process of selection there will develop in a very few years strains from seed which will be superior to most of the plants placed upon the market at the present day.

Lilium Harrisii x L. Longiflorum.
(Showing bulb 18 weeks after germination.)

The beginning of experimental work along this line has been carried on with the utmost care. Several bulbs of the true Lilium longiflorum and its principal forms were secured. The bulbs showed no trace of disease and as growth developed, those plants which showed signs of abnormal development were removed from the greenhouse and destroyed. A rigid process of selection was kept up until the plants came into flower.

A series of crosses were affected. The flowers of several plants of L. longiflorum were fecundated with pollen taken from the flowers of L. Harrisii, and vice versa. The seedlings from these crosses have already flowered and the results are very satisfactory. The progress made by the seedlings as a result of these crosses is somewhat remarkable in that they bore flowers in a comparatively short time after germinating. The seedlings were in 2-inch pots about five weeks after making their appearance above the soil. Ten weeks after germinating they had made from two to four character leaves. From this stage onward the growth was quite rapid.

The smaller illustration shows a seedling with all the radical leaves showing, but not fully developed, eighteen weeks after germination. This is the stage just previous to the development of the flower stem. The bulb at this period is nearly three inches in circumference and is wholly formed of the bases of the leaves. This particular bulb was in no way injured by the soil being washed from the roots; it was repotted and formed a stem which bore two flowers. The bulbs shown in the larger illustration are the largest developed in the experiment. They were of the batch of L. Harrisii x L. longiflorum and were harvested August 15, ten months and fourteen days after the seed germinated. These bulbs measure six inches in circumference and each bulb produced three flowers above the average size. Where Harrisii was crossed with longiflorum, the plants in full bloom six months and thirteen days after germinating, the flowers were almost always longer than with the reciprocal cross, usually full two inches longer.

Lily farming in the United States is so new that one must not be discouraged if at first partial failure results. But so easy is it to raise flowering plants from seed that the writer is inclined to believe that should the time come when the disease is more rampant than at present, growers will, when the subject is better understood, be able to raise their own bulbs by a system of greenhouse treatment and have the plants from seed flowering in pots ready to be sold with a year.

This will probably seem like a fairy tale to the participants of the lily conference held in London in 1901. One of the papers read at that time states that many species of lilium must have from ten to twelve years to develop a flowering bulb from seed. Elwes, in his Monograph on the Genus Lilium, says of L. longiflorum, "in three or four years at most, flowering bulbs will be produced from seed if the young plants are properly treated."

ASTERS AND DAHLIAS.

A reader of the REVIEW modest enough to sign himself Ignorant sends me an aster plant and says that I will see that its roots are full of lice and "there is also a white grub," and he wants to know if there is any way to get rid of them. I must confess that without the aid of a microscope I could discover neither. Perhaps in the few days' travel both had disappeared. The plant looked fairly thrifty and the roots healthy. The only remedy I can think of, and one which, if not too much trouble, would be effectual, is tobacco. Dilute the rose leaf extract of tobacco to seventy-five times its weight or its measurement in water, or the nicotine to three hundred times, and give the plants a watering sufficient to wet the soil well. I would add that if the same plot of ground is to be used again next year for any such crops, a good dressing of slaked quicklime should be harrowed in next spring.

The same reader asks: "Will dahlias of different colors planted in the same field mix so that plants grown from these roots will show the crossing hereafter, and will you also tell me if one foot apart is too close to set seedling dahlias the first year?" By no means will the roots have any influence on each other, any more than the roots of two varieties of roses would growing on the same bench. I would say that one foot apart for seedling dahlias would be first rate, with three feet between the rows.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

VIOLETS.

We seem to be going to extremes this season. In my last notes I thought the most seasonable thing we had was the much needed rain that we were then enjoying, but now we want it to stop as badly as we wanted to see it commence. As a result of all this, plants outside of the houses are in a fair way to get swamped with weeds; there has been no opportunity to work them, as it would ruin the soil and hurt the plants.

As I said before, with the usual kind of weather the greatest care must be used for several weeks to come, during the hot weather, that the red spider gets no foothold. They want to be watched sharply and at the first signs of spider, in fact, frequently before, turn on the full pressure of your water and give the under sides of the leaves a thorough spraying. It has to be done with so much vigor that when you get done you can readily see which way the water struck the plants.

It is also well to go over the houses about once a week and note all the plants that are not starting as they should, not holding their own with the majority of the house. Weed out such, throwing them away and planting in good ones from your surplus stock growing in the field. You can afford to give these a little extra care in lifting, so as not to shake off too much earth, so that they may not know that they have been removed, and in this way keep right up with those in the house.

In weeding and trimming the plants be sure and not throw them down in the paths, even for a few days, as it is a plain invitation to the sow bugs, etc., to make their home with you, and when it comes time to pick the violets, you will be looking for remedies for these pests that are eating the blooms faster than they can open. Any decaying matter of this kind invites sickness and disease in the plants themselves, so cleanliness is important in more ways than one, to say nothing about the looks of the establishment.

CINCINNATI PREMIUMS.

The Fall Festival Association of Cincinnati has issued a schedule of liberal premiums for an exhibition September 10, to be held under the auspices of the Cincinnati Florists' Society. Competition is open to all, and it is hoped that many growers from a distance will send exhibits. Entries should be sent to John A. Ringold, 75 Perin building, and where exhibitors cannot attend, the club will see that careful attention is given all exhibits.

For best general display of plants or cut flowers premiums of $150, $100, $75 and $50 are offered. For best display of roses, not less than 100 blooms, the awards are $15, $10 and $5. The best vases or displays of carnations, not less than 400 blooms each, will receive $12, $8 and $5. The three premiums for gladioli are $15, $10 and $5. For asters, not less than 300 in the display, $15, $10 and $5 are offered, with premiums of the same amount for the best vase or display of lilies and the best vase or display of dahlias.

A second exhibition is to be held on September 17, to be table decorations exclusively. The tables are to be of not more than 150 square feet and the three premiums are to be $200, $150 and $100 respectively. This should serve to call out sharp competition.

NEW POT HOLDER.

H. C. Chessman, of Chessman & Schepman, and secretary of the Florists' Club of Richmond, Ind., has applied for a patent on a new pot holder or plant stand. The device consists of a double corrugated wire standard, with sufficient anchorage to hold the support in a firm and upright position when placed in the bench. On this upright are placed at intervals a corrugated ring so constructed that it can be adjusted to any desired height, and when so placed is firmly held at right angles with the standard. The corrugated ring is cut opposite the standard and provided with hooks and loops, so that the ring can be adjusted to any desired size, thus accommodating itself to the plants when small, and as they grow larger the ring can be made larger to correspond. The hooks or loops are so constructed that when properly placed and locked they cannot come apart until released and unlocked, which can be done in an instant. The above invention is really two in one, as the corrugated rings are also used as a pot holder and can be adjusted to any desired size of pot, thus converting any pot plant into a hanging basket. A hanger is provided that hooks into the ring and when properly placed the more weight there is on the hanger the tighter the ring becomes locked.

SUBSTITUTE FOR GLASS.

A firm at Jackson, Mich., styled the Flexible Glass Manufacturing Co., of which D. P. Sagendorph, an attorney, is director, has secured a patent on a material which is offered as a substitute for glass. If substitute it should prove to be, it will fill a long felt want, for the material is cheap and practically unbreakable. It looks much like mica but is flexible like celluloid or rubber and does not crack or even crease when folded. Thin samples would seem to show that if it will not admit as much light as glass, the lightness will permit of a considerable reduction of shade by reducing the number of sash bars required. The sheets are impervious to water, but when stretched tight might be punctured by hail or stones. The apparent difficulty to be overcome after the practical nature of the material has been tested, is its inflammable nature. Arrangements are being made whereby it is expected that the "flexible glass" will be on exhibition at the Milwaukee convention.

HAIL LOSSES.

American window glass manufacturers claim that French and Belgian glass is lighter than the glass of home production. In this connection J. G. Esler, secretary of the Hail Association of America, writes that "the assessments of the association are, upon single thick glass, 8 cents per hundred square feet, and 6 cents per hundred square feet upon double thick, whether it be French or American glass. The F. H. A. simply accepts the standard of quality of the manufacturer."

The Florists' Hail Association has, from its organization to date, paid losses amounting to $57,149.60. Losses paid since May 1, 1903, were:

BUFFALO.

The Spring Business.

Your correspondent has been so much in the woods of late that to write up city news seems presumptuous, but having telephonic communication nowadays, we can glean the principal news. The bedding and outdoor gardening kept up to the end of the month and in extent I should think satisfied everybody in that line of business. For the past two weeks everybody has been running to everybody else for geraniums in flower. They must be in flower, you know. The aggregate of the plant business must have considerably exceeded any past season—a bigger town, more houses and more people to buy. Neither on the lawns surrounding the costly mansions nor on the grass plot in front of the less pretentious dwelling has there been much cutting up of grass for flower beds, but for veranda boxes and large jars of flowering plants there has been a great demand, and yet this is not where the great bulk of the flowering plants go. It is to the thousands of humble cottages, where all have a little garden and a few mixed plants.

We do not remember the school graduating business ever before to have been quite so good for the florists as it has been this year. It lasted almost two weeks and finished in a blaze of glory and blossom last Friday. Normal schools, high schools, private academies and sixty grammar schools kept the boys humping to get bouquets for the dear young things of both sexes. The last few days flowers were decidedly scarce. Red and good pink roses and carnations were in greatest demand and good carnations were scarce. Many weddings have also helped to make the store men busy. Some were quite elaborate and many wanted a modest decoration, while a great many were satisfied with the newspaper notice being the principal feature.

A Visitor.

I have missed the many visitors of late. Too bad. Peter Crowe, of Utica, however, honored us with a call in our rural retreat, where we had a lively discussion on how a solid bed for roses should be made. He believes the roots should be given a chance and encouragement to go away down to Tasmania. Some people don't believe in that, but those who differ with him should remember that Peter takes the cake and the best price for his roses in New York City, and "the proof of the pudding is in the eating." Asking him if he trod down his beds before planting, he shuddered and said "My gracious, no! I did once," he said, "and had to dynamite it when I wanted to break it up." But that's no criterion, readers, for when Mr. Crowe stands on one leg, there is a pressure of seventy-five pounds to the square inch, reckoning his foot to be eleven inches long and three and one-half broad. Mr. Crowe tells me he is selling large blocks of his splendid adiantum, which he has poetically named A. Crowe-anum.

Notes.

I regret very much to have to report a serious accident to Jos. H. Rebstock. He was driving in the park with his wife and little son when his horse became frightened at an auto and before Joseph could bring him down the carriage was upset and Mr. Rebstock's leg broken. Mrs. Rebstock and son escaped with a few bruises. This is a bad time of year for Joe to be laid up, for he is president of a line of excursion steamers and the summer resort of Crystal Beach on Lake Erie's Canadian shore.

We must expect the midsummer dullness to be upon us now, but fortunately Buffalo is a summer resort itself and we do not notice any great exodus of our people. There is no excuse to be robbed at the seashore or eaten to death by mosquitoes in the woods. Unfortunately in all our cities the people who live in crowded, sweltering streets, and to whom a month in the country would be heaven, must toil on, while those who have spacious lawns and shade trees and cool verandas and hammocks and all else material that heart could desire, including an automobile, leave their happy homes for fashion's sake, whether they like it or not.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are having delightful weather again, neither hot nor cold. Business is somewhat better, I think, than it was last year at this time. There is nothing to brag of, but I have spoken to almost all of the retailers within the last week and all of them are in rather a pleasant frame of mind. We have had a goodly number of weddings, and funeral orders do not seem to show any falling off.

Carnations and roses are better, both in form and color, than they were a few weeks ago and the school closings of the last two weeks have used up a great quantity of them. Prices are low, but considering the season, the stock seems to be bought up rather lively and the sidewalk dealers are not getting everything at their own figures, as they generally do in mid-summer.

Good roses are somewhat scarce. Beauties are not extra good, although Brides and Maids are in good shape. Kaiserin, Testout and Liberty are selling wholesale at three dozen for a dollar, and short stems considerably less. Good Beauties wholesale at from $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen. Carnations in the fancy varieties sell at $3 per 100 and the commoner sorts at from $1.50 to $2. Other stock is cheap, of course, but the best of it is in very fair demand.

Various Notes.

D. H. Lenox has been in town for the past few days. Mr. Lenox is one of Los Angeles' well known nurserymen and he is up in this part of the world in quest of stock for next season. He reports everything booming in Southern California.

W. P. Fuller & Co. report their sales of greenhouse glass as very heavy this season. They have had some trouble to keep the usual sizes on hand. They have contracts to supply one Alameda county firm with 2,000 boxes during this summer.

The Alameda County Horticultural Society held its regular meeting last Wednesday night. There was a good attendance on hand and the proposition to hold a fall flower show was debated at considerable length. A committee was appointed to see what arrangements could be made.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Scarcity of material, good demand and good prices lasted until Friday of last week. After that the scarcity continued to a less degree and the customers continued in a still lesser degree, so that the average is much more to the buyer's credit because he really can get the goods he wants now and at a little better figure, probably, although he must not gamble too heavily on that part of it.

Goods are scarce, and yet I think they are doing well indeed when we consider the run of weather we have had. Carnations seem to be coming a bit better, perhaps on account of the few little glints of sunbeams we have had lately; but roses are coming in a fully worse condition than any time since a year ago or more, when so many were badly mildewed. Two or three growers have them now very good indeed, but the majority are badly mildewed, small and out of order generally.

Death of R. Haley.

Much sympathy is expressed for the wife and four small children of Richard Haley, the Malden florist. They are left quite destitute by the death of the husband and father, who fell from a building in Boston nearly a week ago, upon which he was working, sustaining such injuries that he died Sunday, the 28th.

Notes.

Rather more than the usual number of florists will spend their vacation in Europe this summer. Those slated for the trip soon are M. E. Tuohy, E. Sutermeister, L. H. Fellows and A. Leuthy.

The position of the market gave many florists a fine view of the Hooker parade when fresh from the starting point. It was probably the best parade ever seen in the city, being very fine indeed. Florists E. N. and Allen Peirce, Lassman, McDonald, John Newman, W. W. Tailby and Keenan took part in different organizations of the parade, Mr. Lassman being in that part bannered "Hooker's Old Brigade."

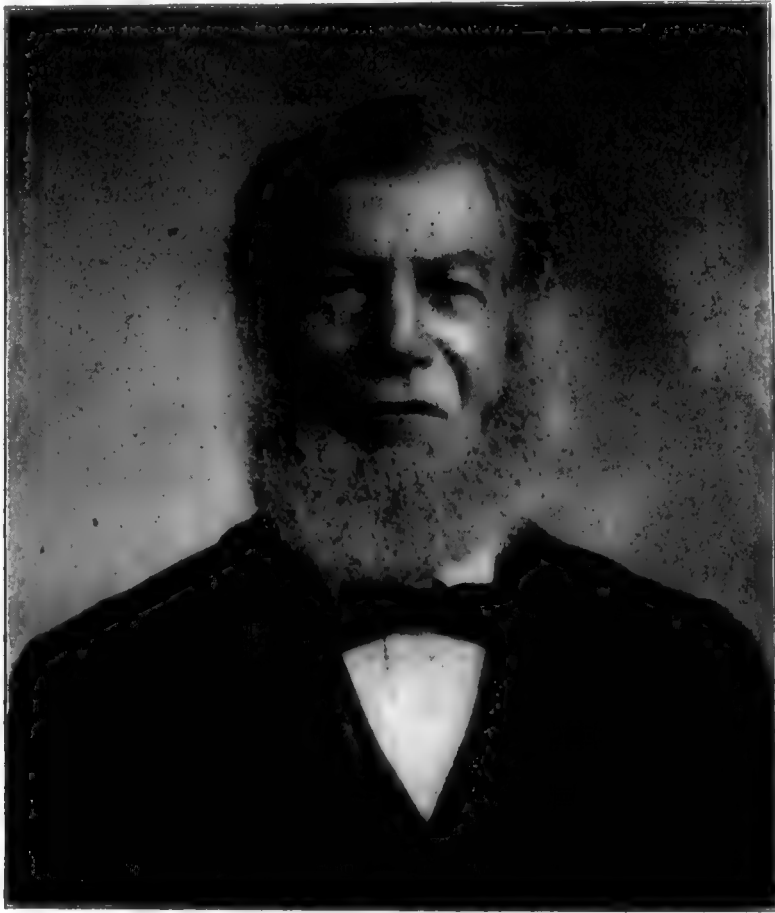

J. S. MANTER.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The abnormal weather of the last twenty days culminated in the worst storm of the season on Monday. The rainfall for June is double the average. The fact is, we have had no summer at all and business of every kind has suffered. The past week, with its shortage of stock, and numerous school commencements, belated weddings and international and other dinners gave the wholesale trade an inning which was well deserved. Prices soared for a few days to old-time rates and in some cases to winter values. Carnations and roses were especially favored, Beauties bringing occasionally $4 to $5 a dozen. The general expectation, however, is an early drop to summer rates again.

The exodus to Europe or to the country gathers volume as the warm season approaches, and summer dullness is already "discounted," as they say in Wall street, when anticipation precedes development. Early closing already prevails among the wholesalers, many locking the doors at 3 p. m., and most of them at 6. But the retailers still keep open house later than is necessary. It's a pity every retail store in the big cities cannot close during July and August promptly at 6 o'clock p. m. The added devotion, appreciation and good nature of the employees would more than compensate for the possible loss of an occasional order. A movement is on foot (and it should be on horseback and swift) to this end, and if the Fifth avenue and Broadway moguls will fall in line, the wisdom of the plan will be generally acknowledged, and the man who fails to accede to the reasonableness of the system will be as unpopular as he deserves to be.

Death of Charles Zeller.

The saddest event of the week is the death of the veteran of Flatbush, Charles Zeller, who passed away Sunday, June 28, one day after his 76th birthday anniversary. Dissolution followed a long illness and much suffering, borne with unflinching patience and hopeful resignation. No more lovable character has ever been known to American floriculture. He was everybody's friend. His cheerfulness was unending and his record of an honorable life, with the respect and affection of all. He never had an enemy. Everybody loved "Papa" Zeller, as he was fondly called. He was a pioneer in the trade and was one of the first growers to take up the carnation as a specialty. He was the introducer of many commercial favorites of a few years ago. Now that he has rested from his labors, his memory will remain an inspiration to all who ever grasped his friendly hand or felt the influence of his delightful personality.

Various Notes.

The West Shore, the Wabash and the St. Paul have been definitely chosen as the route the New Yorkers will take to the Milwaukee convention in August. Louis Haffner will be in charge of the party, which is a guarantee of perfect arrangements for comfort and pleasure, his chaperonage on the occasion of the Buffalo convention being still a pleasant memory. The "procession" moves at 1 p. m., Sunday, August 16, and the Boston party is expected to join the special train at Rotterdam Junction. This means a happy trainload of at least 100, straight through without change of cars. The fare for the round trip is $27.40, and berths may be secured by writing Walter F. Sheridan, 39 West 28th St. There is no doubt of an attendance of over 50 from New York. In fact, I hear of a much larger party than usual from this center, and interest will grow as the date approaches. Milwaukee is ambitious to have the largest attendance on record. Sample pages of the souvenir have been received in the east and indicate a very handsome production under the special censorship of C. C. Pollworth.

The exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America and the American Institute at the new Herald Square exhibition hall, November 10 to 12, is likely to attract much interest because of its favorable location. The schedule of premiums, printed in full in these columns a few weeks ago, has now been issued in pamphlet form. Mr. Herrington, the president, is working indefatigably for the success which now promises to reward his efforts. He is being ably assisted by F. R. Pierson, F. H. Lemon, J. N. May and the other officers of the society. Mr. May is at present on his annual fishing and recuperative outing.

The outing of the New York Florists' Club took place July 1. At this writing (Monday) it looks as though the committee is assured of a great success. All that is needed is good weather. An advance sale of double the number of tickets sold last year insures an attendance of 300 and the fullest preparations have been made for refreshments, dinners, sports and safety, and a harmonious and delightful gathering should popularize the club and make its future a credit to the city.

The New York papers are full of enthusiasm these days over the projected Clinton Market building, which seems to be assured, and at a cost of $250,000. The spaces are to cost $100 a year each, and already enough have been spoken for to insure an income of $25,000 a year. It will have fountains and swimming baths in the center, will be open night and day, and if projected plans are consummated will be the most unique and complete structure of its kind in the world.

George M. Geraghty, formerly manager of the floral department of Daniels & Fisher, at Denver, is here from South Africa, and has a very interesting story to tell of the Boer war, in which he took an active part.

He is quite satisfied to be back in God's country, and contemplates remaining in New York City and engaging in the florist business. His ability as a decorator will find ample opportunity for demonstration. His friends in the west will be glad to know of his safe return.

J. H. Small & Sons put up a unique decoration for the banquet to Sir Thomas Lipton, at the Waldorf-Astoria June 24. Yellow and green are the colors of the knight who persists in trying to "lift the cup," so Arthur Merritt worked out an enormous design of the shamrock in moss, surrounded by a field of coreopsis.

Alex Guttman has moved into his new residence above his store on West 29th street, and has now complete facilities for the prompt attention to orders. Mr. Guttman was shy a shipment of 1,500 carnations last week, from Chas. Weber, of Lynbrook, L. I., much to his own and his patrons' annoyance. A cog was loose in the express system somewhere. Stock was too scarce last week for one to lose a petal with equanimity.

James McManus has added to his assets for investment purposes a three-story and basement house on West 20th street. Real estate in New York City is about as safe a bank as any in the world.

The last auction of the season was held on Tuesday at Elliotts', the end of a most profitable season.

The Greenwood Florists' Association held its annual picnic at Ulmer Park June 26. It was a great success, and an attendance of several hundred testified to its popularity.

The Stumpp & Walter Co. has added J. H. Cox, of Newport, to its force of salesmen.

The retailers' windows begin to take on their summer garb, and in a few of them banks of ferns constitute the only decoration.

Chrysanthemums may yet be seen at Thorley's and the artificial lily basins at Smalls' and Warrendorffs' are very interesting.

Young & Nugent had a grand window of Cattleya gigas last week, 500 splendid flowers which readily brought 50 to 60 cents each.

Mr. Nash, of Moore, Hentz & Nash, leaves July 9 for a well-earned European outing.

Max Roth, at one time with Mr. Bowe and later with Jas. McManus, died suddenly a week ago of cerebral hemorrhage. He was a member of the 9th regiment and Mr. McManus speaks highly of his faithfulness and industry.

Siebrecht & Son sold their grand bay trees, among the finest specimens ever sent to this country, before vacating their old stand at 37th street and 5th avenue.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Very little can be said of the business done the past week, and some of our florists are complaining that summer dullness has set in for good; still, a big amount of funeral work was made up, but not any very large designs were reported. This kind of trade is about all our florists have to depend on nowadays, but some were busy with shipping trade for out-of-town school commencements the past week. The weather is still cool and the Fourth of July is close at hand. This is one holiday on which the florists can close up and celebrate.

The glut in sweet peas is still on and there is no fixed price on them. Some were sold as low as 35 cents per 1,000 in 10,000 lots. Some of the best bring $2 per 1,000. The store windows downtown are loaded with them, and they are sold at 5 cents per bunch of 25. It was estimated that the three wholesale houses handled 20,000 daily the past week. These were not all sold; a great many of them were dumped. The bulk of the shipped carnations are arriving in bad condition. Home-grown stock is much better. Good Flora Hill have a big demand. For pink Ethel Crocker is preferred. Of these the stock is not overplentiful, but enough are in to supply the demand. Good fancy stock is still up in price, with common sorts down to a cent. White roses shortened up somewhat last week. The demand is always good for these. The Brides are still full of mildew. The clean foliage on the Kaisersins give them the preference. Maid, Meteor, Gate and Liberty when good sell well. More Maids are in than the demand requires. Beauties are very scarce and only an occasional good bunch can be found. Some good valley can be had at the usual price. There is plenty of outdoor stuff in the market, which has very little demand. The greens market is in much better condition and fancy ferns are more plentiful, though still limited. Smilax, Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are still in fair demand.

Club Meeting.

The July meeting of the Florists' Club will be held next Thursday afternoon at "Billy" Winter's place in Kirkwood, Mo. The Kirkwood florists are making great preparations to entertain the members, as they expect a big attendance. The nomination of officers will take place, and as these officers will hold over the World's Fair it is the members' duty to attend and nominate efficient men for the different offices. The present staff is a capable one, but the head of the club cannot succeed himself. The club still has good material left from which to select a president. The members are to meet at the Sarah street crossing on the suburban line at 12:30, go in a body, leave the car at Taylor avenue in Kirkwood and walk north to Mr. Winter's place, which is only a short distance. This will bring the members out in time to open the meeting promptly at 2 o'clock. After the meeting a visit will be made to the different floral establishments in Kirkwood.

Club Picnic.

The trustees of the club held a meeting at Ellis' wholesale house to perfect arrangements for the club's picnic, which is to be held on Thursday, July 23, at Preister's Park. The invitations are now in the hands of the printer and will be mailed to all the florists next week. Each invitation will have enclosed a badge which will entitle the holder to all privileges on the grounds. There will be games of all kinds for the children and adults. A bowling match for ladies and gentlemen will be one of the features. F. C. Weber will be in charge of the bowling and J. J. Beneke director of amusements. Some of the store men have signified their willingness to close their stores on that day in order to give their employes a day of enjoyment. The committee in charge of the outing is composed of John Steidle, Frank M. Ellis and Charles J. Juengel. Any information regarding the affair can be had from them.

News Notes.

Park Commissioner Aull on Wednesday last reappointed the old office staff and ten new park keepers, as follows: A. Henerich, Benton Park; Charles Asher, Hyde Park; Thomas Dwyer, Carondelet Park; V. Krober, Laclede Park; Charles B. Wilson, O'Fallon Park; M. McGroraty, St. Louis place; A. Gavin, South St. Louis Square; Pat Rell, Carr Park, and John Byron, Gamble place. The remainder of the appointments will be made this week, including the general superintendent.

The St. Louis & Suburban Railroad Company has offered prizes for the best-looking lawn along its route. Professor H. C. Irish, W. J. Stevens and Herman Stifel of the Engelmann Botanical Club compose the committee appointed by the Civic Improvement League to award the prizes.

Some of the craft are at a loss to know what has become of Robert Tesson, who has not been seen by any of us for some time. Can it be that Robert has gone on his European trip without saying good-bye? If so we wish him God speed and a safe return.

Alex Siegel is making preparations for an extensive fishing trip after the Fourth of July. Alex is a natural born fisherman and never fails to bring home a big string, even if he has to buy it.

George Ostertag was seen the other day taking things easy at Sister Mary's place, on Grand avenue. George looks better and bigger than ever. He has lines out for a big city job and we hope he will succeed.

The match game of bowling between Schwartzkopf and Schonelle will take place to-night (Monday), or just as soon as Mrs. Ayers returns from a trip to the country to visit her brother. The betting is even. Both are training faithfully under the guidance of Will Adels, who is a friend of both.

Otto Heinecken, representing Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., is in town looking after the growers' wants. This is Otto's first visit to St. Louis and the boys find him a very sociable fellow.

Andrew Meyer, Jr., was appointed general superintendent of public parks to succeed F. W. Pape. Mr. Meyer is yet a very young man, only 23 years of age, and is the son of Andrew Meyer, of 3214 South Jefferson avenue. The position calls for a competent and experienced man, and as Mr. Meyer qualified no doubt he is all the position calls for.

The business of the St. Louis Carnation Co. has been closed. T. B. Call has withdrawn and the business will hereafter be run by J. W. Dunford.

Wm. Trillow, of Chicago, is in town and will on Thursday be married to Miss Grace Estel Ostrom. Mr. Trillow is now with the Iowa Seed Co., of Des Moines, Iowa, and will have charge of their greenhouses. Mr. Trillow has many friends in the trade here who wish him luck in his new venture.

Bowling.

The two teams got at each other again on Monday night. The bowling was very fine. John Sturtz, who has not bowled for some time, made an average of 200, with Beneke second with 189 and Kuehn a good third. The score follows:

Review.	1st.	2d.	3d.	Total.
Beneke	192	185	189	566

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Flowers continue in great demand, especially white. The frequent rains have made outdoor stock very uncertain. It is often difficult to procure enough flowers to fill the orders. Beauties are selling very well and have stiffened in price. The flower market has obtained top figures for some very well colored blooms. Robert Craig & Sons are sending in some Harrisii lilies which help out nicely. Tea roses are in good demand. Carnations are scarcer. Valley is selling pretty well. Sweet peas continue to sell in quantity at fair prices. Taking it all in all, business is unusually active for the first of July.

A Waretown Outing.

The Florists' Yachting Club went down to Barnegat Bay last Friday as the guests of the genial Commodore John Westcott. There were about twenty in the party, most of whom remained over until Monday. A glorious sale before a stiff breeze on the bay marked the first day of the visit. The evening was devoted to games, with a lot of noise and fun. The Commodore retaliated for the inroads made on his sleep by his boyish guests by bursting into their sleeping room with a cheer at 4:30 on Saturday morning. A fishing trip followed, which everyone enjoyed so much that the shyness of the fish was hardly noticed. Among the Commodore's guests were W. H. Westcott, William Westcott, Robert Craig, John N. May, Walter F. Sheridan, Samuel S. Pennock, A. B. Cartledge, J. William Colflesh, Geo. Craig, James Griffin, Richard Lynex, G. C. Watson, of Dunham; Robert Kift, David Rust and others.

The Fordhook Visit.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co. invited the visiting seedsmen and a few others from this city, among them several florists, to their farm at Fordhook, near Doylestown, on June 27, to inspect the trial grounds. A very large party left the Reading Terminal on the special train at 10:50 a. m., reaching their destination after a beautiful ride of a little over an hour. The party were cordially welcomed by Messrs. Burpee, Earle and Darlington and were most hospitably entertained. The farm of probably 150 acres was in perfect condition, freshly cultivated, not a weed to be seen anywhere. The order and system displayed everywhere were remarkable. All the labels were under number. A guide with a book accompanied each group of visitors to explain the names and history of the varieties of seeds being tested. The tour of the farm was absorbingly interesting, a day long to be remembered by those fortunate enough to be present.

Various Notes.

C. A. Dunn & Co. opened a new commission house on Monday at 1516 Sansom street. They have the first floor, basement and sub-cellar, each about 20x45 feet. The first will be used for office and salesroom, the second for receiving and handling flowers, and will contain the ice-box, and the third will be very useful for hardening carnations. The place is neat and attractive in appearance and is rapidly being put in shape. Flowers are already being received and distributed. Clarence A. Dunn is well known in connection with the firm of Dumont & Co., where he has been for some years past. His right hand man, Charles Edgar, came to him from the retail firm of J. Wolff, Sr., 1407 Columbia avenue. Carnations and Beauties will be specialties with the new firm.

Charlie Gray has left Leo Niessen to go to Dumont & Co.

William J. Baker is receiving Asparagus plumosus and Adiantum cuneatum of fine quality in quantity.

Leo Niessen is receiving Harrisii lilies in quantity.

Eugene Bernheimer has just received a shipment of 100,000 bronze galax leaves.

Edwin Lonsdale is going heavily into Queen of Edgely rose this season.

The boys at the Flower Market are wondering what makes R. G. Palmer so happy these days. Some of them say it is because his ball team is winning so many games. Others say that it is a new girl in the house.

Geo. E. Campbell, of Flowertown, will discontinue growing carnations and devote the two houses which he has had in carnations to Bride and Maid roses. His roses have done very well this year.

W. T. Hilborn, of Newton, is cutting some good Brides and Maids. Mr. Hilborn believes in keeping his roses in for several years, as he thinks that it pays him to do so. He does not dry them off but simply cuts off the dead wood and bushy growths.

Bowling.

The following are the scores of the fourth series of games for places on the Milwaukee team. The alleys were fine and the scores very even. W. J. Moore and L. Dunlop were absent. The contest is becoming exciting and only nine more games remain to be rolled:

NEWPORT, R. I.

The fifth annual exhibition of the Newport Horticultural Society was held last week and was a pronounced success, although inclement weather interfered with the attendance. The display consisted largely of roses, but there were fine plants, and some good made-up bouquets and baskets of cut flowers; also a good showing of strawberries, etc. The exhibitors were the private gardeners on the estates of the many wealthy people who make their summer homes at Newport. The only trade exhibitors were Lager & Burrell, of Summit, N. J., and the G. A. Weaver Co., and F. L. Ziegler, of Newport. The orchids of the former made a particularly good showing and gained a silver medal.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Columbus, O. The 23d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

THE market on French Romans has fallen another notch during the week, to about 85 francs.

MORRIS S. SMITH, formerly bookkeeper for W. W. Barnard & Co., has taken a position with the Madson Seed Co., Manitowoc, Wis.

Seed sweet corn prospects are poor, but "corn weather" has come to the Mississippi valley this week and the outlook may improve.

RECENT reports from Holland state that the damage done through frost last spring to hyacinths and narcissi shows up more serious than first anticipated.

JOHN C. LEONARD is at Fowler, Colo., this week, where Frank T. Emerson, of the Western Seed and Irrigation Co., Waterloo, Neb., is making a trial of a large acreage of cucumbers on irrigated lands.

RECENT advices from a large pea-growing section of Canada are to the effect that prospects for a fair average crop, both as to quality and quantity, are in evidence, and if favored with normal weather conditions between this time and harvest, a very creditable showing is expected and the ability to fill all contracts on all varieties. Recent general showers have fallen throughout the country. Much, however, depends upon developments the next few weeks and several circumstances may yet change the views on the crop conditions. The percentage of Alaskas and Extra Earlies is now estimated at from 60 to 75 per cent of the normal crop.

WHOLESALE LEAGUE.

The Wholesale Seedsmen's League met at Atlantic City, N. J., June 26, and re-elected F. W. Bruggerhof president; Burnet Landreth, secretary, and the three directors whose terms expired. S. F. Leonard, as vice-president, retired in favor of L. L. May. Wholesale prices range from 25 to 50 per cent above a year ago. The association has about 40 members, embracing nearly every wholesale seed house in the country.

THE NELLIS CASE.

The details of the government seed distribution are being made public through the suit of A. C. Nellis in the Court of Claims. Secretary Wilson says that the $18,000 was withheld as the result of an inquiry into the work of the contractor at the time and that the government is still in possession of Nellis' bond for $35,000. Mr. Wilson said that he had directed that the seed contract and its execution be probed to the bottom and that the investigation has not implicated anyone in government employ.

PEAS AND BEANS.

Reports from the pea and bean districts in Wisconsin and New York summarize the situation as follows:

Owing to unusually cold weather pea crops have been slow in coming on.

Some of the tenderer varieties are thin, while from lack of rain the growth has been short, and in some sections the straw will not be more than two-thirds usual length. Recent rains have relieved the drought, particularly in Canada, where there is now no lack of moisture. In northern Wisconsin heavy frosts destroyed portions of many fields of early peas while in blossom, in some sections damaging the crop 20 per cent. Notwithstanding the early drought and subsequent frost, present conditions are favorable, and should such conditions continue, it is possible to produce a fair, but not full crop of peas.

Regarding beans, it is impossible at present to give an intelligent forecast. The drought throughout central New York was long continued and severe. Some fields planted before the recent rains lay in the ground without moisture so long they failed to germinate, so the fields were plowed and other crops put in. Other fields were too hard and dry to work until very recently and are now being planted weeks later than usual.

SEEDSMEN'S CONVENTION.

The twenty-first annual meeting of the American Seed Trade Association was held at Atlantic City, N. J., June 23 to 25. There was a large attendance, but the west was lightly represented, many regular attendants being absent. There were many present for the first time, small dealers remotely connected with the trade. The first day was largely taken up with the reports of standing committees and the passage of the stereotyped resolutions condemning the government seed distribution, but an unusual number of new members were elected, among them the following:

W. W. Rawson & Co., Boston; Texas Seed and Floral Co., Dallas, Tex.; Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky.; P. B. Mingle & Co., Moore & Simon and Chas. H. Rowe, Philadelphia; Lily, Bogardus & Co., Seattle, Wash.; Cox Seed Co., San Francisco; Francis Brill, Hempstead, L. I.; Alexander Seed Co., Augusta, Ga.; W. G. Scarlet and W. A. Simpson & Co., Baltimore; Harvey Seed Co., Montgomery, Ala.; S. D. Crosby & Co., New York; Churchill Seed Co., Toledo; Theilman Seed Co., Erie, Pa.; Sherman & Eberle, Albany, N. Y.; E. F. Spears & Sons, Paris, Ky.

The meeting was devoid of unusual features but the essays were of exceptional merit, those of W. W. Tracy, J. C. Robinson and J. M. Lupton being listened to with particular attention. Other speakers were Geo. B. McVay, Lester L. Morse, H. F. Michell, C. N. Keeny, Frank B. White, C. E. Wilson and H. A. McKee. Little discussion was provoked.

The election of officers, Thursday, resulted as follows: President, S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; first vice-president, J. Charles McCullough, Cincinnati; second vice-president, C. N. Page, Des Moines, Iowa; secretary and treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland; assistant secretary, W. W. Templin, Calla, O.; executive committee, Walter P. Stokes, Philadelphia; Jesse E. Northrup, Minneapolis; H. M. Schisler, St. Louis; Mel. L. Webster, Independence, Ia.; W. H. Duryea, New York. Opinion favored St. Louis for the meeting of 1904.

President-elect S. F. Willard has served the association faithfully and capably for the past six years. He is president of Comstock, Ferre & Co., with which firm he has been connected since 1871. Mr. Willard has lived all his life in Wethersfield and is a member of the Connecticut general assembly. C. E. Kendel, who succeeds Mr. Willard as secretary, is a son of A. C. Kendel, of Cleveland, and since his fathers' demise has been at the head of the business conducted under that name.

On Saturday morning W. Atlee Burpee provided a special train to convey the seedsmen direct to Fordhook, near Doylestown, Pa., where there is always much of interest. A repast was awaiting the party, spread beneath the trees on the lawn, and a buffet afforded refreshment in the afternoon. Carriages were at hand to take all who wished for a tour of the estate. At Fordhook are undoubtedly the most extensive seed trials in the United States and it was here that most time was spent. Employees were present with charts to give the key to the varieties, but data as to the origin of the seed are not provided.

GOVERNMENT SEED SHOP.

In a recent issue the Chicago Record-Herald comments editorially on the government's seed operations, as follows:

The quickness with which Government competition will arouse vigorous protest from private interests is illustrated by the complaint of the American Seed Trade Association against the Government's annual free seed distribution.

The secretary of agriculture, by direction of Congress, has distributed through his department to constituents of congressmen about 38,000,000 packages of seeds. In addition to this free distribution of seeds the secretary has established seed-testing stations in which experiments are conducted to determine the germinating value of seeds that are offered for sale in various parts of the country. These tests have forced the withdrawal from the markets of large quantities of old and worthless seeds.

The seed dealers' association protests not only against the free seed distribution but against the seed-testing stations. The latter protest is not just or well founded. It is certainly a legitimate function of the department to protect the people against seeds that will not grow. If a seedsman deals in seeds that will grow, why should he object to the testing stations established by Secretary Wilson? He ought to welcome the facilities provided by the Government for demonstrating the germinating value of his product.

So far as the free seed distribution is concerned Secretary Wilson cannot be held responsible for the continuance of this much condemned species of congressional "graft." It is true that Secretary Wilson has utilized the congressional appropriation to secure a higher quality and more useful varieties of seeds, but it is still a congressional distribution. It is used to tickle the political soil in doubtful districts in the hope of making it more fruitful in votes, and the Government "pays the freight." In the past the germinating value of the seeds distributed was not regarded as of great importance, and if a farmer in Michigan received a package of pineapple seeds he was supposed to be duly impressed with the evidence of esteem on the part of his representative in Congress.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Summer made its belated appearance this week and the seasonable conditions prevail. There are a few small shipping orders, which it is difficult to fill. Beauties are scarce and the rose crop is light, for the growers are busy replanting the houses. Brides are scarce and good ones brought as high as 8 cents on Monday. Maids are of better average quality than Brides and are not so hard to get. Meteor is generally good but there are few Liberty. Taken all in all, the rose market is pretty bare; if it were not prices would be pretty low.

There are still some fair carnations and no glut of the lower grades. There have seldom been such large receipts of sweet peas. Everybody has them by the unsold thousands and the price is more dependent on the quantity the buyer will take than on the quality of the goods; from 2 cents a bunch up. Canterbury bells sell a little, as they make a big showing in the windows. While Harrisii are plentiful candidums do not go, but auratums move fairly well. Water lilies are down to $1 a hundred. There is a good deal of spiraea about and all the odds and ends of garden flowers.

There will be peonies for some little time yet. The crop this year was much larger than last and not less than 17,000 dozen went into cold storage. There are supposed to be nearly if not quite 5,000 dozen still on hand, all except a few hundred dozen in one lot. Deamud reports Rubra Superba the best seller and has handled quantities of it for the Chicago Carnation Co. A. Kennicott & Son report their crop at about 7,000 dozen. They stored large quantities of the old Rose Scented and of the L. L. L. pink, or Grandiflorum Roseum, but the bulk of their lot marketed this week was 500 dozen Von Bomback and 1,500 dozen Whitley, the former a purely local name given to a variety grown by old Peter Von Bomback. Mr. Kennicott says the Drop White (Festiva) were short crop and poor; they would not keep. Three-fourths of the terminal buds were damaged by late frosts and the side buds had to be used. The Old Red (officinalis) was also damaged by frost. Mr. Kennicott says the average returns on the crop are one-third less than last year. Klehm's Nursery did not have the usual cut but had some good stock. E. E. Pieser says it is all gone but a couple of hundred dozen.

Various Notes.

H. MacMichael, who has lately been rose grower for Weiland & Risch, has bought the N. P. Miller place at Wilmette and took possession July 1.

John Zeck, manager at Budlong's, is taking his vacation a day at a time and spent Tuesday picnicking. He says stock is good for the season and shipping trade holding up fairly well.

The better class of retail stores are not using common ferns the way they once did. Of course they keep them on hand for calls, and use them for concealing the moss in designs, but for boxes of loose flowers and for vases they use Sprenger and adiantum. Wienhoeber's say they use only a few hundred ferns a day, even in the busy season, where they were once very large buyers.

July 1 sees the beginning of a new business year in most of the wholesale houses, and the supply dealers have been busy taking inventory.

The mother of S. B. Winter, formerly of the old commission firm of Winter & Glover, died last Sunday and was buried yesterday. Mr. Winter has been in poor health for years, but is feeling pretty well this summer.

Bohannon & Canger have a very attractive show window at 27 State street.

Early closing will be in order during July and August. Get your orders in; the boys want to get away at 5 o'clock.

Fred. Klingel, of Peter Reinberg's, is ill, threatened with typhoid, and Leonard Kill is wrestling with the books.

John Sterrett, of Winterson's, is on deck again after an illness, but is still far from well; it is tonsillitis.

C. E. Finley, of Joliet, who made the lawn rake, has a pot washing machine which he expects to exhibit at Milwaukee and would like to hear from any parties who might wish him to take charge of their exhibits at the convention.

Fred Nelson, of Wittbold's, is spending his vacation at his old home at Galesburg.

Visitors: J. C. Rennison, Sioux City, Iowa; Geo. Souster, Elgin, Ill.; H. E. Philpott, Winnipeg, Man.; C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Never before in June were flowers so scarce as the past week, the demand being great on account of schools closing. The entire month we were without sunshine, and raining the greater part of the time, but it has cleared at last and now in our dull season we look for some good weather. The prices soared like quotations on cotton the past week. Carnations jumped from 35 cents to $1 and $1.50 per dozen; roses from $1 to $3 a dozen, and everything else in proportion. This school business is growing; every graduate must have more or less flowers and it makes a great last hit for the poor florists before the long dull season. It is better than Decoration day, and generally there is plenty of stock to go around.

There has been the usual number of June weddings calling for more or less stock, but none of any great importance.

The larger growers are putting their places in shape for the coming season, painting, remodeling and coaling up for next season in case there should be a strike again.

F. Macrae & Sons Co. has everything coming along fine for next season, chrysanthemums and roses housed and carnations looking fine outside, which they expect to house early.

John Macrae is busy painting his entire plant; he reports the past season one of the best yet.

Rennie & Pino, seedsmen, have had a very good spring business. Mr. Pino is blowing himself to an auto.

Joseph McConnell, connected with the Hogg greenhouses for a long period, was married last week.

Ed Brooke, with T. J. Johnston, goes to Cottage City July 6 for the summer.

T. J. Johnston and family have taken a cottage at the seashore.

Matthew McNair sails for Europe soon.

The high prices of last week began to fall on Saturday and notwithstanding the storm of Monday prices continued their retrograde movement, as was generally expected. Now that June is past and schools are closed and society has departed to the seashore and the mountains, what is there to expect but the inevitable depression which every summer has brought?

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Bert Stiles has bought glass and sash for two houses 16 x200 feet and will grow carnations for the wholesale market.

CLINTON, N. Y.—R. Kilbourne has caused the arrest of parties in whose possession he found plants missing from his greenhouses on Elm street.

PRINCETON, ILL.—Albert Erickson has a little patch of strawberries across from his greenhouses, the crop of which he sold for $500 cash, the purchaser doing the picking.

WABASH, IND.—E. F. Overman has sold his two establishments for $6,000, to Frank P. Goebel and Hubert Haftenkamp, formerly of Grand Rapids, Mich. They will do business as the Wabash Floral Co., and intend to enlarge the glass area considerably.

CARNATION PREMIUMS.

The preliminary premium list has been issued for the exhibition of the American Carnation Society, to be held at Detroit, March 2, 1904. In most details the list follows previous arrangements. The premiums for vases of 100 blooms in the several colors are $10 and $6; for 50 blooms, $5 and $3; for 25 blooms, $3 and $1.50.

John Breitmeyer's Sons offer $50 for best collection, not less than ten varieties or more than fifteen. The second prize is $30. W. J. & M. S. Vesey offer $25 for collection of not less than six or more than ten varieties, open only to growers having not more than 25,000 feet of glass. Second prize $10. For collections of not less than five or more than ten varieties $25 is offered by J. F. Sullivan and $15 by Geo. A. Rackham, competition open only to growers having not more than 15,000 feet of glass.

A silver cup is offered for the best vase of 200 blooms and $10 and $5 for collections of single blooms. Lord & Burnham offer $50 in two prizes for collections of commercial varieties introduced prior to 1903. Peter Fisher and J. D. Thompson offer a silver cup for the best vase of Enchantress, to be won twice before becoming permanent property. The Chicago Carnation Co. offers $15 for the best 100 blooms of Harlowarden and $10 for best 50 blooms. In none of the latter classes are the donors of the premiums to compete.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., N. W. Hale, Knoxville Tenn.; Vice-Pres., F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

WEST CHESTER, PA.—Hoopes Bro. & Thomas have had a nice sale on their set of new hardy climbing roses. The stock is now mostly planted in the open ground and they expect fine plants by fall.

The New England Association of Park Superintendents held its fifth annual meeting at Albany, N. Y., June 23. Officers were elected as follows: President, G. A. Parker, Hartford, Conn.; secretary, John W. Duncan, Boston; treasurer, John H. Hemingway, Worcester, Mass., and a vice-president from each state.

PORTLAND, ORE.—E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., accompanied by Mrs. Hill, has been here and was much interested in the outdoor rose show, which was at its best at the time. Oregon-grown rose plants would sell in the eastern markets and another year or two it is possible that Clarke Bros., or some other firm, may be advertising 200,000 to 300,000 rose plants for sale.

WESTERN PROSPECTS.

A. L. Brooke, president of the Western Association of Wholesale Nurserymen, writes from North Topeka, Kan., as follows:

Trade during the fall of 1902 was stronger than at any time previous, at least for years. Buying for spring of 1903 was brisk. Long prices were offered in some instances for apple and were refused. The holder afterwards found his market for these same trees in the brush pile. Conditions on apple this spring seemed to be reversed and the market opened weak, but seemed to gather itself several times, but not sufficient to use up all the surplus. There is no stock of any kind held over at this center of trade. Trade on apple seedlings was brisk and all stock found buyers. Prices on seedlings for fall will advance. Apple will be some lower than last season. Other stock will range about as last year.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

At last the first real hot wave of the season seems to have reached us, yet notwithstanding the increase in temperature business is still holding out. A great many wedding decorations are still on. White flowers have been greatly in demand for funeral work, especially outdoor stock.

Roses are about the same as last week, the supply being just about equal to the demand. There are quantities of second and third grade roses, especially pink ones, but as a rule they find a good market. Liberty and Meteor are still scarce. Beauties are not equal to the demand.

Carnations, especially white and red, sell quickly, and pink ones are not far behind. The supply is about equal to the demand and the quality is very good. Carnations in the field are doing fine this season. Some growers report that their plants at the present time are as large as they were when housed last year. Plenty of rain and cool weather did the business.

Sweet peas are now a glut. The outdoor stock is in full blast and the commission houses are full of them. Longiflorum lilies are about over in this market. A few candidum are still to be had and sell readily.

The supply of greens is still equal to the demand, though smilax is beginning to show signs of a shortage. Asparagus Sprengerii is in fine shape and some good plumosus is also procurable. Eastern ferns arrive in fine shape and have almost entirely taken the place of the southern or so-called western variety, which is much coarser.

Notes.

The committee appointed by the florists' society to get rates to the S. A. F. convention, reports that the C. H. & D. has been selected as the official route and will be used by the florists of this city; so those going to the convention who pass through Cincinnati must see that their ticket reads via the C. H. & D., if they wish to join the Cincinnati party. The rate will be $14.10 for the round trip, and sleeper $4 extra. Stop-over will be allowed at Chicago on returning, which will give the boys a chance to take in Chicago's mammoth establishments.

The outing committee is hustling things in shape for the picnic at Coney Island, July 23. Many of the boys are already practicing for the bowling contests. Do not forget that the lady making the best score during the morning will receive a handsome prize. The tickets are now out and can be had at any of the wholesale houses. Don't overlook the fact that the florists do not receive credit for tickets sold by the Coney Island company, so be sure to buy your tickets in advance. Buy them from a florist!

N. L. Fry has bought out F. W. Ball's interest in F. W. Ball & Co.'s store on Fourth street. The name "Queen City Flower Co." has been adopted and Miss Edith Kyrk has been installed as manager.

The first summer meeting of the Florists' Society, which will be held at the residence of D. Rusconi, in Covington, Ky., July 9, promises to be the banner meeting of the summer. Mr. Rusconi says that everything is in readiness and that all florists are invited. A good time is assured, so don't fail to come.

Wm. Rupp, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., was a caller. C. J. OHMER.

MILWAUKEE.

Convention Preparations.

Convention matters are now the principal topic among the local craftsmen. Everything is being done to make the nineteenth annual convention a grand success. Visitors are expected from every state in the Union. The trade display promises to be exceptionally large, as most of the leading horticultural and supply men have engaged considerable space. The hall is sufficiently large to conveniently accommodate all exhibits, and any one contemplating making a display who has not as yet secured space should communicate with F. H. Holton at once. The club is also getting up an attractive souvenir, which will be a credit to the occasion.

Phil. Hauswirth and C. C. Pollworth, on the S. A. F. bowling committee, are preparing a program and list of prizes which will cause considerable interest among the bowlers. More teams are expected to enter than at any previous convention. Any one wishing to offer a prize or make any suggestions regarding the game should communicate with Phil. Hauswirth, at Chicago. There are quite a few hunters among the local club, but no expert trap shooters, so a shooting team may not be entered from here, but Peter Reinberg ought to be able to make up a strong team among the High Ridge florists to battle with Philadelphia.

A program for entertaining visiting ladies is well under way and full particulars will appear in the official program.

INCOG.

WASHINGTON.

Business all along the line seems to be at a standstill. Roses and carnations are very scarce on account of the growers replanting, but even at that there are enough to go around. Roses of all kinds can be had at from $2 to $3. Carnations are very scarce and bring the same as roses. Outdoor stuff of all kinds is very plentiful and prices very uncertain.

The season has been very favorable for outdoor carnations and there are lots of fine plants to be seen around the city. On account of the long and continuous rains it is almost impossible to keep the weeds down.

The boys are taking lots of interest in bowling, and the present indications are that Capt. Ernest will carry a full team to Milwaukee next August. The following are our last week's scores:

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Except for outdoor operations, the weather is very favorable for work, the temperature being moderate and the days cloudy or rainy. There have been frequent light showers and one or two heavy rains within the past week, but the weather-wise look now for an early change and an ensuing hot, dry time, for there seems to be an equilibrium in these things, though we do not always know when the cycles begin or end. For the season the trade in cut flowers is well maintained. Roses are somewhat overabundant in the poorer grades, but good ones still sell, and carnations are not sufficient for the demand, especially for whites.

The Charles street florists whose constituency is perhaps largely made up of the class who leave the city on the advent of summer, say the duller season is already on them, but those who cater to the stay-at-homes report that there is as much business as is usual at this time of the year.

Notes.

There is little news. Not much building is being done. Emptying houses and planting roses occupies the attention of all.

John J. Perry, now the manager of the Florists' Exchange, has sold his retail store on Gay street to Wm. F. Keys.

A member of the trade here has been sued for $5,000 for slander, a trolley car conductor being the plaintiff, and alleging that he was publicly charged with not ringing up a fare received.

Hans Schuler, son of Mrs. Schuler-Thomas, a well known florist here, has sold to Henry Walters, a prominent art connoisseur and collector, his marble statue, Ariadne, which is regarded as showing great originality and power.

B.

OTTAWA, ONT.—A plan to put a tariff on vegetables for the benefit of the Canadian market gardeners has been voted down in the house.

FAIRMOUNT, W. VA.—H. Glenn Fleming is building four connected houses 30x75 for carnations and roses, a propagating house 8x75 and a smilax house 20x24, all with solid beds. Business has been very good, especially funeral work.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The condition of the market is about as last reported. Roses are holding firm and finding a ready sale at from $2 to $6 per 100. Carnations bring $1.50 to $2 per 100, sweet peas 30 to 40 cents per 100, and lilies 75 cents to $1 per dozen. Valley is scarce at 4 cents. Maiden-hair brings 75 cents to $1 per 100, and smilax 15 cents a string. Roses and carnations are very good considering the lateness of the season and the fact that many of the growers are planting and almost too busy to give proper attention to the old stock.

The wholesale men are well satisfied with the past season and all the retailers who have been interviewed report trade better than any previous year.

Notes.

We have not heard of many new houses going up this season, owing possibly to the heavy coal bills of last winter, the memory of which will not soon be forgotten, and the price set for next season's supply is not much lower, so the grower will have to produce a larger cut or be satisfied with a smaller return on his labor and investment, as he never thinks about demanding a higher price for his goods.

The J. M. Gasser Co. is moving its large plant from Lake avenue to the still larger place at Rocky river. This combining both places in one will undoubtedly prove both profitable and satisfactory, being so much easier to handle. They also intend to erect six houses each 28x300 feet and the whole place will be planted to roses, carnations, ferns and smilax.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Last week the cut flower business was very active. The general demand was for weddings and commencements. The demand for stock was considerably heavier than the supply. These conditions have now changed, and at this writing, June 30, stock is very plentiful and quantities of inferior roses and carnations are going to waste.

Beauties are not plentiful but the quality of those offered is very good. Sweet peas and other flowers are arriving now in quantities.

The month of June was a good one and many retailers report it the best they have had for many years.

Lakeview Rose Gardens are shipping in some fine Brides and Maids.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. reports shipping trade very good.

Notes.

The annual outing of the Florists' Club will be held at Ross Grove, Thursday, July 16.

Walter Breitenstein is using his spare time canoeing on the raging Allegheny river.

Tom Ulam is making a display of a very rich gold quartz from his Arbacoochee mine.

(REGISTERED)

Greenhouse Fumigating Powder

Is the newest and best article on the market to-day for the complete destruction of all insects that infest Greenhouses or Conservatories; being a special boon to Rose and Beauty growers and prepared particularly for the destruction of Greenfly and Thrips. There is nothing injurious in it to plant life, even the most delicate fern. It is especially recommended for Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Smilax, Asparagus, Palms, Ferns, etc., and we claim that insects will be entirely eradicated when the houses are thoroughly fumigated with the powder. It is put up as follows:

The Pierson Fern

There is nothing that you can plant that will increase in value so rapidly as this fern. The demand has been so great, and our advance sales so large, that we have not offered it recently, having only just completed filling advance orders. We have a nice lot of young stock coming on, and can fill all orders received from this date promptly on receipt. Even at the present high price it has been impossible to keep up with the demand, and there is sure to be a tremendous demand for it another season when it can be offered at lower prices. Now is the time to invest in it and get the benefit of the tremendous demand and good prices which are sure to prevail another season. The Boston Fern, although it has been cultivated many years, is still scarce. As Nephrolepis Piersoni will sell better and be in greater demand even than the Boston Fern, we predict a scarcity of Nephrolepis Piersoni for several years to come and at big prices. Owing to the great and continued demand, we do not expect to be more than able to meet the demand this spring, so that customers can rest assured that there will be no change in price this season.

We offer strong young plants, 2 1/4-in. pots, at $9.00 per doz.; 50 plants at 60c each; 100 plants at 50c each; 500 plants at 45c each; 1000 plants at 40c each.

Extra large plants, 6-in. pots, $27.00 per doz; 50 plants at $1.80 each; 100 plants at $1.50 each. These large plants will make fine stock for growing on into large specimens for fall trade, and they are also very nice for immediate sales.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Summer with the Palms.

You are sure to have some benches to spare for the next three months and now is the time to stock up with young palms for fall and winter sales. There has for the past few years been a very slow sale on palms, but they are sure to return to favor, and the representative of the largest palm growing establishment in the country tells me the demand this summer is three times what it was a year ago. Plants that you have had on your own place for a few months are far more satisfactory to your customers than those but recently arrived and potted, and they can also be bought to advantage just now, as the growers want the room to shift on and spread out their stock. Palms large enough for decorations should also be procured now. It is a well known fact that large growers of kentias, arecas and latanias hurry up the growth of the plants by heat, shade and moisture. You can't very well blame them; the quicker they can produce a good-sized palm, the more profit for them. But they are not in condition to take out and be subjected to a low temperature, perhaps nearly freezing. So if you need them, get them now and they will have a few months to become acclimated.

Palms burn easily, either under poor glass or when allowed to get dry, so they are always shaded under glass, but a heavy shade is not what they really should have. The ideal shading would be one that you could apply during the bright, sunny hours of the day and remove, say, at 4 p. m. and not use at all on dull, rainy days. Few commercial florists, however, have such conveniences, and the best that they can do is to have just shade enough on the glass to keep them from burning, with all the ventilation possible, day and night. While we have settled warm weather, and if the water passes freely through the soil, it is very unlikely that you will ever over-water them. Plenty of syringing is both natural to the palms and keeps the atmosphere humid.

Plants for Decorating.

Anyone who does many decorations in churches, halls and other places and for various occasions is sure to find on his hands at this time of year, a lot of shop-worn palms. I don't advocate extravagance, but you all know that a kentia that has only two perfect leaves left and four or five that are fringed, tattered and torn is no longer any credit to your decorations, and with the best of care and encouragement to grow it will take two years before it is a plant fit to use again, and the room it will occupy and the labor entailed in its care amount to far more than the cost of a perfect plant. Also, there is the upsetting of the "piece of mind," which by no means "passeth our understanding," for we know full well the miserable moments we have endured while looking over some scrubs that should have been on the fire heap. So I say, don't hesitate to throw away what is not going to be of use to you the coming winter—out with them and in with the new, perfect plants.

Boarders.

To digress a moment, we are not so much bothered with the care of sickly, ruined palms as we used to be, simply because we speak out more plainly and are less afraid of losing a customer. Still, we are bothered (except the retail storeman) with requests to take home a palm for a month or two "to bring it round." If the palm is in a fair condition and simply needs shifting, do it well and charge enough for it. And there are other cases, as where a family may be shutting up house for a month or two and must ask the florist to care for a few plants until they return. If they are your customers, you can't refuse, but charge enough. For plants in 5, 6 or 7-inch pots we charge 25 cents each per month. It's worth all of that. And for larger plants we charge 25 cents per month for every square foot of bench surface they occupy. That would pay first-rate if we had them for a year, but we don't, and the carting almost always has to be thrown in.

If a palm is brought to us, or we call for one that is useless, yet which its owner thinks only needs our care to quickly convert it into a "lovely plant,"

Shifting Large Plants.

You will also have, as well as worn-out palms, some good-sized decorative specimens that are too good to throw away. If they must have a shift, you can do it now. Remember that the smaller the pot or the tub, the more handy when the time comes to lug them around town. When they need a shift over 10-inch pots, by all means get them into a neat wooden tub. The plants do as well in them, they are light and don't break, and if painted a dark green, need less hiding by other greens in your decorations than the red pots; tubs for all large palms if you please. It is wonderful how large a kentia will thrive in a comparatively small tub, so don't shift unless you are sure they really need it. In large plants they will make such a mass of roots at the bottom of the tub or pot, that the ball of earth and root is raised considerably. Then they need attention. And in shifting, which in the case of kentias would not be much of an increase in diameter, you can take a sharp hatchet and chop off clean two inches of the bottom roots; they will soon make more. You can also do this with latanias. Arecas are perhaps the most beautiful of all palms for decorating, although they are not nearly so good a house palm as the kentia and we sell nine kentias to one areca. Yet for decoration they are fine. They will not thrive if cramped at the roots, as you can cramp a kentia or latania, but when they get crowded with roots must be shifted or they will soon have a starved and yellow look. While on the subject of shifting, let me go back to the small plants you may be receiving now. Be tell him or her, mostly her, that it will take three years to make it a presentable plant and cost twice as much as a similar sized good palm can be bought for. You can't tell what is passing through their thoughts at this valuable information, but if you "be gentle and keep your voice low" they will not argue the question but coincide, and the place is not encumbered and disgraced with runts and scrubs.

careful not to give any palms too much of a shift, particularly the kentias, and don't, when potting them, get the plants too deep in the soil. I have seen a lot of young kentias stand perfectly still, with no growth, because they were potted too deeply. Once more about any large palms, if they do not need shifting, then a mulch of an inch or two will help them very much. Let the mulch be half loam and half dairy manure, to which

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Summer with the Palms.

You are sure to have some benches to spare for the next three months and now is the time to stock up with young palms for fall and winter sales. There has for the past few years been a very low sale on palms, but they are sure to return to favor, and the representative of the largest palm growing establishment in the country tells me the demand this summer is three times what it was a year ago. Plants that you have had on your own place for a few months are far more satisfactory to your customers than those but recently arrived and potted, and they can also be brought to advantage just now, as the growers want the room to shift on and spread out their stock. Palms large enough for decorations should also be procured now. It is a well known fact that large growers of kentias, arecas and latanias hurry up the growth of the plants by heat, shade and moisture. You can't very well blame them; the quicker they can produce a good-sized palm, the more profit for them. But they are not in condition to take out and be subjected to a low temperature, perhaps nearly freezing. So if you need them, get them now and they will have a few months to become acclimated.

Palms burn easily, either under poor glass or when allowed to get dry, so they are always shaded under glass, but a heavy shade is not what they really should have. The ideal shading would be one that you could apply during the bright, sunny hours of the day and remove, say, at 4 p. m. and not use at all on dull, rainy days. Few commercial florists, however, have such conveniences, and the best that they can do is to have just shade enough on the glass to keep them from burning, with all the ventilation possible, day and night. While we have settled warm weather, and if the water passes freely through the soil, it is very unlikely that you will ever over-water them. Plenty of syringing is both natural to the palms and keeps the atmosphere humid.

Plants for Decorating.

Anyone who does many decorations in churches, halls and other places and for various occasions is sure to find on his hands at this time of year, a lot of shop-bought palms. I don't advocate extravagance, but you all know that a kentia that has only two perfect leaves left and four or five that are fringed, tattered and torn is no longer any credit to your decorations, and with the best of care and encouragement to grow it will take two years before it is a plant fit to use again, and the room it will occupy and the labor entailed in its care amount to more than the cost of a perfect plant. So, there is the upsetting of the "piece of mind," which by no means "passeth our understanding," for we know full well the miserable moments we have endured while looking over some scrubs that should have been on the fire heap. I say, don't hesitate to throw away what is not going to be of use to you the coming winter—out with them and in with the new, perfect plants.

Boarders.

To digress a moment, we are not so much bothered with the care of sickly, ruined palms as we used to be, simply because we speak out more plainly and are less afraid of losing a customer. Still, we are bothered (except the retail storeman) with requests to take home a palm for a month or two "to bring it round." If the palm is in a fair condition and simply needs shifting, do it well and charge enough for it. And there are other cases, as where a family may be shutting up house for a month or two and must ask the florist to care for a few plants until they return. If they are your customers, you can't refuse, but charge enough. For plants in 5, 6 or 7-inch pots we charge 25 cents each per month. It's worth all of that. And for larger plants we charge 25 cents per month for every square foot of bench surface they occupy. That would pay first-rate if we had them for a year, but we don't, and the carting almost always has to be thrown in.

If a palm is brought to us, or we call for one that is useless, yet which its owner thinks only needs our care to quickly convert it into a "lovely plant,"

Shifting Large Plants.

You will also have, as well as worn-out palms, some good-sized decorative specimens that are too good to throw away. If they must have a shift, you can do it now. Remember that the smaller the pot or the tub, the more handy when the time comes to lug them around town. When they need a shift over 10 inch pots, by all means get them into a neat wooden tub. The plants do as well in them, they are light and don't break, and it painted a dark green, need less hiding by other greens in your decorations than the red pots; tubs for all large palms if you please. It is wonderful how large a kentia will thrive in a comparatively small tub, so don't shift unless you are sure they really need it. In large plants they will make such a mass of roots at the bottom of the tub or pot, that the ball of earth and root is raised considerably. Then they need attention. And in shifting, which in the case of kentias would not be much of an increase in diameter, you can take a sharp hatchet and chop off clean two inches of the bottom roots; they will soon make more. You can also do this with latanias. Arecas are perhaps the most beautiful of all palms for decorating, although they are not nearly so good a house palm as the kentia and we sell nine kentias to one areca. Yet for decoration they are fine. They will not thrive if cramped at the roots, as you can cramp a kentia or latania, but when they get crowded with roots must be shifted or they will soon have a starved and yellow look. While on the subject of shifting, let me go back to the small plants you may be receiving now. Be tell him or her, mostly her, that it will take three years to make it a presentable plant and cost twice as much as a similar sized good palm can be bought for. You can't tell what is passing through their thoughts at this valuable information, but if you "be gentle and keep your voice low" they will not argue the question but coincide, and the place is not encumbered and disgraced with plants and scrubs.

Be careful not to give any palms too much of a shift, particularly the kentias, and don't, when potting them, get the plants too deep in the soil. I have seen a lot of young kentias stand perfectly still, with no growth, because they were potted too deeply. Once more about any large palms, if they do not need shifting, then a mulch of an inch or two will help them very much. Let the mulch be half loam and half dairy manure, to which add a tenth of its bulk of good bone dust.

Large palms, except the arecas, can be put out of doors, but I am aware that I am late in speaking of that. If you want a tall, long growth, you won't get it by putting the plants outside for the summer months, but if you want a sturdy, hardy growth that will stand rough usage, then outside for three months is the place. A soft growth of a kentia or latania will burn in the sun and quickly if the plants are neglected for water, but those that have grown through one summer outside and have been kept moderately cool during the winter will not burn, and a few months in the open air gives them a hardy growth. If the tubs can be plunged in, or surrounded with some material to keep the sun from drying them out, so much the better, but faithful attention to watering is the chief thing.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Early Planted Stock.

Those carnations that you planted from pots will need attention right along now, and you must look after them closely. We have been having some nice growing weather up to now and the young plants have had an opportunity to get a good hold in their new quarters.

In hot, summer weather, you must do all you can to keep the houses cool. In the house where we have our Lawson planted this year, we have side ventilators on one side and on the other side there is a row of glass below the plate, and out of this row we take every third pane. You would be surprised what a difference these side ventilators will make in a house, especially if the house is a wide one. I would not think of building a carnation house without side ventilation, and in fact they are a benefit to almost any crop, during the summer months.

After you weed the benches, you should stir the soil, and if it is rather light it will be well to tramp it down solid. Our soil is heavy enough without it. After tramping, level it, and put on a mulch of some light material to help keep the moisture in the soil. Some very old stable manure is just what you want for this, and put it on about a half inch thick. Do not shade the glass above these plants at all, but keep the ventilators up and dampen the walks during the day.

Top the plants as they need it, just the same as you do those in the field. Mrs. Lawson will not produce a stem that is worth considering before October, and so it is energy wasted to allow it to bloom before then. Some other varieties will throw longer stems, and these may be allowed to bloom as soon as you have a fair sized plant, but get your plant first and the bloom will surely follow.

I do not like putting on supports this early, nor do I think it at all necessary if you look after the topping properly. Every plant ought to be able to stand up straight while there are no blooming shoots, and it will, too, if you top it before the shoots become long enough to lie over of their own weight. If you do want to put on supports, I would advise using some kind of a wire support. There will yet be needed much weeding, stirring and mulching, and other work, and you can get between them a little better than you can through the string mesh. Many growers use these to support the body of the plant and the string mesh to support the flower stems during winter, and it is not a bad way, either.

If any of the plants die out from stem-rot, or some other disease, burn them up as soon as you see them. Remove the soil they were planted in and refill with fresh soil before you set another plant, of which you of course, saved some after you finished planting. Do not syringe the plants in the evening, as that will bring on rust; in fact, any time when they would not dry off readily it is ill advised to syringe them.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Lime in Bench Soil.

The value of lime, when intelligently employed, can hardly be overestimated. If we could afford to have our soil analyzed, the matter of soil preparation, as regards the proportion of fertilizing elements to be added, would perhaps be much simplified; but even then I question the advantage, as constant changes take place in the soil, both chemically and mechanically, as soon as the plants are benched. This would require an analysis at frequent intervals, causing much extra labor.

Looking into the lime question, we find that it has the property of correcting acidity of the soil which may perchance occur from the frequent watering necessary in housing early. It has also the property of rendering stiff soil more friable, as well as making sandy soil more compact, and from this fact I am inclined to the opinion that where we see equally well grown plants in heavy, clayey or light, sandy soils, it is due to the presence or addition of lime.

When a plant affected by stem-rot arrives at the last stage of the disease, or what I call the point of contagion, there is present in the stem at the rotting point a condition of acidity which can be easily proved by test with blue litmus paper. Whether this acidity has anything to do with the spreading of the disease, I am not prepared to state, but the prompt removal of such plants and the immediate use of lime as advised in my notes of last week, has in my experience proved an advantage both in field and bench. Its greatest value in the bench is its effect on latent or unavailable nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid present in the soil. Its action hastens the digestion or transformation of these ingredients into a form easily taken up by the plants.

Some soils contain more lime than others, but with the addition of the various fertilizers we employ and its confinement under glass, heated and watered artificially, the use of lime becomes practically an absolute necessity for the production of up-to-date stock. I use the ordinary air-slaked lime, sprinkling a light coat over the soil as soon as a bench is filled, afterwards raking it in thoroughly. I would advise using a less quantity on sandy than on heavy soil.

Shading.

If you have not already shaded your houses preparatory to planting in, try the plan of using whiting and water mixed to the consistency of milk and apply with syringe or brush. It will not be washed off until you so desire and then the hose will easily remove it gradually, which is best for the plants; it also looks neater and is cleaner than mud wash besides being more in keeping with present progressive methods.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Novelties.

Some of the new varieties that were benched early are making very fine growth, and, from present indications, some record breaking is under way for this fall. The cool and moist weather that we have been experiencing of late is very favorable to the rapid growth of the plants, but it is well to keep the roots on the dry side in such weather, because a too rapid growth is not what is wanted, but a slower, firmer, harder growth. Still, we generally get plenty of sun during July and August, and one need not worry yet because his plants are running up long-jointed.

It is a striking evidence of the renewed popularity of the chrysanthemum, from an exhibition standpoint, that there are more novelties under trial this year than ever before in the past ten years. It is always the new things that people crave, and the man who caters to this craving is the man who makes the money. We must keep raising and importing new varieties anyway, because about two years seems to be the average life of a variety nowadays.

Of the novelties disseminated this spring, Liger, Columbia, Richardson and Convention Hall are the best looking of the American varieties. Liger can hardly be called an American, since it was raised in France, but E. G. Hill calls it an American by adoption, in which respect it resembles so many of its growers that we may let it go at that. I don't know that I ever saw a more even stand of plants than is a large batch of this variety at the present time. Clean, kind and healthy, it looks like the ideal commercial pink. Columbia and Richardson, two other new pinks, are both exceedingly nice, but in growth they cannot compare with Liger. Richardson is at present a little thin in the foliage, but will doubtless harden up as the weather gets hot.

Of the imported novelties F. S. Vallis is at present one of the best. It won great fame in England last year and it lives up to its description as an improved Yellow Carnot without the defects of that variety, it will indeed be a fine thing. Mme. Cahwzac looks like making a "sky scraper," for it is growing at the rate of several inches a day. Personally I do not care for that kind of variety. Too often the flower lacks finish and form, but we will not yet condemn it. Mrs. Geo. Mileham, a lovely pink that did nothing much last year, is so far making a very nice growth and may redeem itself this time. Lord Salisbury and Mrs. Thirkell are both making fine wood and we have great faith in them.

Two varieties that are doing nothing worth speaking about are Parkside Gem and Daisy Moore. Still, novelties are a gamble anyway and they may be doing better elsewhere. We might get rich if we had all prizes in our lottery, and that would be an unnatural condition for a florist.

There seem to be complaints from several quarters this year that some varieties are running all to buds, instead of going up with a clean, straight shoot. While this is a nuisance, the plants will, if treated right, come out of it. In the case of varieties that are very persistent in bud throwing, the only thing to do is to cut them right down. Keep the roots on the dry side until a new growth appears through the ground, and this growth will run right along without any further trouble.

Where the variety is not too badly affected, by keeping the buds closely picked off and keeping well sprayed with water, a good growing shoot can eventually be obtained. Personally I have never had this trouble to contend with (saving in the case of Vivand-Morel, which couldn't grow kind if it tried), but I have always argued that it was due to a check the plants received, either being pot-bound, or a sudden transition from a warm temperature to a cold one, or else a premature ripening of the young shoot caused by lack of water. Right conditions and remembering that the mum, like any other young plant, should be moved along constantly without a check in any form, will, I believe, obviate troubles of this kind.

BRIAN BORU.

NAME OF FERN.

I send herewith a specimen frond of a fern, the name of which I should like to learn.

The fern frond in question is one of the adiantums, possibly A. pedatum, but owing to the fact that the frond is not entire, a portion of it having been broken or cut away, and also because it is totally without spores, a positive identification is very difficult. There is frequently a great difference between the sterile and the fertile fronds of the same fern, and a specimen for identification would better be a full grown fertile frond, for the arrangement of the spores on the leaf has much to do with the classification of these plants. It would also be of much assistance to know something of the history of the plant in question, as to where it originated and some of its chief characteristics.

W. H. TAPLIN.

A NEPHROLEPIS.

I enclose a frond of a fern which was sent me several years ago from the South Pacific. Will you please tell me its name? I find it very valuable for cutting, as it lasts even longer than the Boston fern. It grows rapidly and one little plant will make from three to ten in one year. Is it something new and of what value is it to the trade?

SUBSCRIBER.

The fern in question is Nephrolepis cordifolium, also known as N. tuberosa, and is quite widely distributed throughout the tropics, not only in the Pacific region, but also in tropical America. It is an excellent fern, of free growth and good form, soon making an admirable pot specimen, but the Boston fern seems to be more popular, where both have been offered. Seedlings of N. cordifolium have been found growing around cycas stems that were imported from Japan, thus showing that this fern was sufficiently common there to scatter its spores freely on the cycas before the latter were shipped to this country.

SOCIETY OF IOWA FLORISTS.

At the call of Wesley Greene, state vice president of the S. A. F., a meeting was held in the rooms of the State Horticultural Society in the capitol at Des Moines Wednesday, July 1. The purpose of the meeting was the organization of the Society of Iowa Florists, and this was accomplished by adopting a constitution and by-laws and the election of officers as follows:

President, John T. Temple, of Davenport; vice president, R. L. Blair, of Des Moines; secretary, Wesley Greene, of Davenport; treasurer, G. A. Heyne, of Dubuque; directors, Judson Kramer, of Cedar Rapids; E. C. Keck, of Washington; J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs; J. C. Rennison, of Sioux City.

Others present were Mr. Olson, of Ames, and John Lambert, of Des Moines. A committee was appointed to meet with the State Horticultural Society in December, to suggest a revision of the premium list for next year's State Fair. Sufficient encouragement has not been given to the florists to compete for awards in the horticultural department of our State Fair for a number of years. The amount of premiums offered does not cover cost of material needed for floral designs, not to mention time and skill employed in their construction and transportation.

After an informal discussion of plans for the advancement of floriculture throughout the state and for a closer business and social relation between the members of the trade, adjournment was had to a meeting which it is expected will be called some time during the S. A. F. convention at Milwaukee. G. B.

ROSES.

Treatment of Beauties.

To lay the foundation of young Beauty stock for fall and winter blooming the young plants require particular care and attention during the first two months after benching. During this period of growth their wants require careful studying and no hard and fast cultural rules can be adhered to. The attending conditions, such as quality of soil, water, aspect and situation of the house, and climate, all have to be taken into due consideration. The sudden changes to which our climate is subject is one of the most annoying phases of Beauty growing.

During very hot weather, which we may now expect, young Beauty stock, if in a healthy condition will require copious supplies of water, and if the drainage is perfect, as it ought to be, there is little danger of overwatering. Syringing will also have to be practiced frequently, the young tender leaves at this season being very subject to the attacks of red spider.

Because of these frequent drenchings the soil will require frequent stirring in order to keep it open and friable. If the weather becomes cloudy and unsettled, great care will be needed not to get the foliage too soft, as this may lead to an attack of black spot. This can be obviated to a great extent by judicious care in watering and ventilating.

Care in watering consists in a thorough examination of the soil in the benches before applying the hose, and watering those spots which are dry before the general watering, so that the whole of the bench may be equally moist. After the bench is satisfactorily watered the syringe should be applied. Any effort to perform both of these operations at one and the same time, as is frequently attempted by the inexperienced can result in nothing but disaster, as neither operation can be performed satisfactorily in this manner.

If black spot makes its appearance the benches should be gone over daily and all affected leaves picked off and burned. Neglect or carelessness in this matter, especially during dark weather, when the disease spreads most rapidly, will soon cause a lot of damage if it does not entirely ruin the stock.

When the young growths have attained a length of fifteen or eighteen inches, and are forming buds, they should be cut back, taking off three or four of the topmost eyes. This will divert part of the strength into the lower eyes, causing them to break and form a more bushy plant.

There being nearly always a demand for Beauty buds, the temptation to market these as early and with as long stems as possible is frequently the cause of giving the young plants a stunted habit, from which it takes them a long time to recover. Denuding the plant of so much of its breathing apparatus causes a check in its growth, the wood hardens and ripens prematurely and there it remains till cool weather sets in. Beauties, to give good results in winter, should not also be expected to give a large cut during summer or early fall.

RIBES.

TROUBLE IN ROSE HOUSE.

Kindly give me information in relation to a disease or difficulty of some kind, formed on the buds in my rose house. The plants are growing nicely. I have some American Beauties, Brides, Kaiserins, Maids, Carnots and Perles. The Beauties are particularly affected with a deformity of the bud. The Kaiserins, Brides and Maids do not seem to be deformed so much, but all have a fringe of wilted and dry petals as they come into bloom. I send some samples under separate cover.

W. L.

The specimen buds and leaves give evidence of having been grown on a bench with defective drainage. Under the microscope the buds show that they have recently been infested with aphids, some of them containing the bodies of these insects in their black form. Thrips also have been at work. This is what causes the crumpled appearance of the Beauty petals. The best remedy at this season is light and persistent fumigating early in the morning with tobacco smoke. Care in watering and ample ventilation are also required. For the mildew which I also observed on the foliage a remedy will be found in the REVIEW of July 2, under reply to L. H. C., page 204.

RIBES.

C. J. OHMER.

The newly elected president of the Cincinnati Florists' Society is the youngest president the society has ever had, being but 24 years old. He was born near Cincinnati in 1879, but later lived at Dayton, O., until he removed to Cincinnati, in 1892. When his uncle, E. G. Gillett, started in the wholesale cut flower commission business for himself in 1896, Mr. Ohmer was given a position which he has since held. The business prospered, and at the present time is one of the largest strictly wholesale commission businesses in Ohio. Mr. Ohmer is the grandson of Nicholas Ohmer, the well-known horticulturist of Dayton, Ohio, whose recent death was chronicled in these columns.

C. J. Ohmer.

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE.

H. W. W. recommends cultivators to pinch out the points of the growth and afford the plants cold frame treatment, with a free circulation of air day and night during the summer and early autumn. In my experience, I have unfortunately found that these begonias resent such treatment. The constitution of the plants gets weakened, and they soon become infested with thrips and disease. The secret of growing these plants well is to do so quickly in a warm moist atmosphere, from the time the cuttings are put in, until the flowering period. In the first place, procure healthy cuttings. For very early propagation, leaves with about an inch of stem may be dibbled into cocoanut fiber, and shaded from sunshine; these will soon emit roots, and each leaf will produce two or three growths. Insert these when large enough, as they are better cuttings than can be taken from the base of the old plants during the winter. Then apply water and plunge the pots to the rim in cocoanut fiber in a propagating-case, having a bottom heat of about 75 to 80 degrees. In about three weeks the cuttings will have rooted, when they may be gradually inured to a cooler position near the roof glass.

The plants should be shifted on into three-inch pots before they become pot-bound, using a compost of three parts good fibrous loam, one part leaf-soil, and the remaining part of fine crushed charcoal and coarse sand. The soil made use of at the final potting should contain a fair quantity of dried cow-manure and the loam and charcoal should be used in a rougher state than in the case of the earlier potting. Do not pot too firmly, or the growth will be stunted; nor use too large pots when repotting, but afford thorough drainage. Afford water sparingly until the plants are well rooted into the fresh soil, then may be used abundance of stimulants. Clay's fertilizer, with alternate doses of liquid cow and sheep manure, and occasional applications of soot-water, are as good as any that can be used.

A low span-roofed house or pit, having a temperature of about 65 degrees, allowing the thermometer to run up with sun-heat, will suit them well; by closing the structure early in the afternoon during summer, very little or no fire heat will be needed. Freely syringe the plants with rain water, and shade them from strong sunshine. Under such treatment plants rooted during March and April, and potted-on to 16 or 24-sized pots, and kept in such a congenial atmosphere that not the slightest check to growth is ever experienced, will by the autumn produce plants 3 feet in height and 3 feet through. Plants for flowering in small pots should be propagated during May and June. I find it more difficult here to obtain height than width. The growths should never be stopped, but the flower buds must be pinched off until the plants are required to bloom; grown thus, thrips or mites will never make their appearance. I have an idea (I am aware some readers will say an erroneous one), but I am writing from close personal observation and experience, that these plants and similar subjects, such as poinsettias for winter-flowering, grown on this rapid system of cultivation will keep the plants in vigorous growth from first to last, and give them a strong constitution which will enable them to survive and last a longer time in perfection when placed in rooms or in a cold conservatory. It is a question of constitution, rather than one of affording the plants cool treatment during their growing season.—John Fleming.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

What is the capacity of an upright boiler five feet high, 25 inches inside diameter, with 50 1½-inch flues? How many feet of 2-inch pipe would it heat with hot water? How many feet of 2-inch pipe will be required to heat a house 20x100 feet to 50 degrees in zero weather?

W. J.

The approximate heating capacity, with hot water, of the boiler described by W. J. is about 2,000 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe. For heating a house 20x100 feet with glass on roof and ends only, about 1,300 lineal feet of 2-inch pipes will be required to maintain 50 degrees easily in zero weather.

New York Florists' Club on Its Annual Outing, July 1, 1903.

GRAFTING TREE PEONIES.

There are many methods adopted in the propagation of the tree peony, says a writer in the Gardening World, but none prove more satisfactory than that of grafting, using the herbaceous type as the stock. The two species best adapted for stocks are, undoubtedly, Pæony alba and P. officinalis. Those who intend to propagate their own peonies, and everybody should, should obtain a strong batch of either of the two above-mentioned species. If old plants of the herbaceous peony are growing in the garden they may be divided if only a few stocks are required, but where a quantity are to be worked it is better to sow seed in frames as soon as it is ripe. The scions being put directly on to the roots, it is essential to obtain sound, healthy roots, and therefore careful attention should be given to their preparation. The soil in which the tubers are produced should be rich and light in order to induce the production of plump, fleshy growth. About the first week in August take up the tubers, and select the finest pieces for stocks, taking care to remove all buds that may develop. The scions should be made from young shoots that have not flowered. Cut them off at a joint, and then cut them to a wedge shape, and having taken a piece from the tuber, fit in the prepared scion exactly and carefully, and surround the union with wax or clay. Be sure to put in the scion as soon as the wedge is cut, as if it is allowed to dry even slightly failure is courted. After the grafting is complete plant the tubers in frames, so that the union is just below the surface. If done carefully the plants will be fit for removing the following spring.

AMOUNT OF PIPE.

I have two houses 18x52 feet, with no glass in the side walls, which are four feet high. I want to grow carnations and general stock. How many feet of 2-inch pipe will be required; using a coil boiler and hot water? The outside temperature sometimes goes as low as 15 degrees below zero?

D. K.

For heating the two houses containing about 2,250 feet of glass exposure, 1,200 lineal feet of 2-inch pipes will be required, in connection with hot water heat, for maintaining a 55 degree temperature with the outside temperature 15 degrees below zero.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The long-delayed hot wave came in with the club's outing last Wednesday, and now comes the two weary months of insufferable humidity and unremunerative business. One might as well yield cheerfully to the inevitable and be satisfied. It was the same last year and every year since Adam's time, and will be the same year after year until all of us join the great majority. There is absolutely nothing but the departing steamers and the decrease in population to relieve the market of its abundant shipments. The stock sent is excellent and plentiful, but, as one prominent wholesaler remarked, "there are no prices," and "the bottom is knocked out completely."

The Outing.

The New York Florists' Club's outing fulfilled all prophesies. The day was perfect and the affair an unqualified success. Even the elements were propitious. The day before was wet and the day after a perfect torrent of rain made havoc on the picnic grounds, but not a cloud interfered with the club's festivities. The attendance was far ahead of all previous outings, and the athletic competition was keen, interesting and well sustained to the very end. Unfortunately there was not time to roll the ten-frame game for the generous prizes offered by Mr. Raynor, and doubtless a special match will be bowled by the club members for these premiums later in the season. The dinner was satisfactory, and the steamer refreshments of every kind provided by the club committee were ample and excellent. There was enough and to spare. The general comment was to the effect that the club had maintained its reputation for generous provision in every way. The committee was made up of workers, and many of them, especially Vice-President Traendly, have given weeks of time to the details that brought the affair to such a splendid conclusion. Harry Bunyard arrived from the west in time to do grand service, as usual, in the commissary department.

At the present rate of progress an attendance of 500 next year will have to be provided for. These annual excursions are now a necessity. Each year lessons are learned and improvements indicated that make them more appreciated. There is room for 500 on the Isabel, and I prophesy an attendance of over this number in 1904. The sports for another year can be chosen with a view to more combined interest, so that all may enjoy every contest. This year it was as discouraging as Barnum's three-ring circus. Everybody wanted to see the ladies bowl, but the foot races and ball game were progressing at the same time, and in far distant parts of the grounds.

The tug of war is still theoretically unfinished, although the wholesalers have the spoils. Mr. McConnell's silver prizes and Mr. Beaulieu's pansy seed, however, are in good hands and next year the other fellows will get even. The "possessors" are big men and it will be a hard matter to induce them to "tug" it over.

The married men lost the ball game, much to the surprise of the other married men, who looked on and rooted for them. They were Messrs. Guttman, Joosten, Irwin, Hildebrandt, Sullivan, Schloss, Bishop, Turner and McDonald. The unmarried host were Manda, Birnie, Dean, Wallace, Scott, A. Schmutz, Bortman, G. Schmutz and Brown. The winners each received a fine knife as a token of their skill.

About fifty ladies participated in the five-frame bowling match and President Troy's prizes were well worth the struggle. Mrs. Koch won first honors with a score of 72 and chose a $11 arm chair as her trophy. Mrs. Endgren (68) chose a handsome brass clock as second prize. Mrs. Thielmann (49) was third and also considered a good clock a necessity in the family as her husband is now practicing late and early for the contest at Milwaukee. The fourth prize, a $10 kodak, went to Mrs. Guttman (49) and a $7 hat was won by Mrs. Demeusy (47). Mrs. Vock won the sixth prize, a valuable silk waist, and Mrs. Louis Schmutz, Jr., bowled "wisely," for the booby prize and with no score at all, secured a fine toilet set.

John Young's prize, a $2.50 gold piece, for the fifty-yard race for boys under 8, was won by Willie Massmann. Charles Weathered's prize, a silver bracelet, for girls under 8, was won by Edna Hirsch. The J. V. Phillips prize, a $2.50 gold piece, for boys' 75-yard race, under 11, was won by Lawrence Schenck. The Louis Rossow prize for girls under 11, 75-yards, a handsome doll, went to Jennie Ezekiel.

Frank Traendly's prizes for boys' 100-yard dash, consisting of base ball necessities, were won by George Kreckler and J. Reichert. Walter Sheridan's prize for girls' race, under 14, was won by Margaret Massmann. The boys' race, under 16, was won by Alex. Donaldson. The prize was given by William Elliott. Lion & Wertheimer's prize, a $5 roll of their ribbon, for the girls' race under 16, was won by Agnes Birnie. The Florists' Exchange prize, a $5 gold piece for the potato race, was won by Vivien Shaw.

L. J. Kreshover's prize, an automobile, for the egg race, was won by Alice Rose. The consolation prize, given by Charles Schenck, was won by his niece, Frieda Schenck, so the silk umbrella stays in the family. P. O'Mara's silver mirror went to Marjorie Birnie and A. A. McDonald's silk umbrella to Anna Manda. In the 75-yard dash for ladies' over 16 years of age, while David Mellis' specials, an umbrella and a ladies' reticule, were won by Mrs. Schloss and Mrs. Guttman, who ran a dead heat in record time.

The fat men's race was a strenuous affair and too close for weak hearts. Frank Traendly won the silk umbrella and J. B. Nugent was a close second and carried off the cane. About six participated. The ranks of the fat men are thinning. Some of last year's heavyweights are now under 200 and could not qualify. Traendly admitted afterwards that he would rather have won than have been left a million and both he and Nugent were going at a 2-minute gait at the finish.

The married men over 45 made a great fight for the $10 rustic chair given by Dunne & Co. W. Trumpore, of J. H. Small & Sons, was an easy winner and ran like a two-year-old. J. V. Phillips made a gallant effort and came in second. The "also rans" were not many, but most of them showed they were good for twice 45 before their running days are over. Ford Bros.' fine prizes, a carved cane and silver fruit dish and pitcher for the running jump, were won by P. Meissner and Drew Scott. The Esler prize, 25 feet of hose, for the sack race, was won by John Daillidouze, son of Eugene, and a chip off the old block. It was no easy win, as it was run in relays and had to be won twice. Alfred Bunyard was a good second. This was the most amusing event of the day. The quarter-mile walking match was a struggle and Julius Roehrs' fine prizes were won by Drew Scott and Alfred Bunyard. Lager & Hurrell's prizes, a silk umbrella and a silver teapot, for the 22½-yard race, were won by Paul Meissner and Drew Scott.

The press bowling prize, John Birnie's volume of Burns, was won by a rank outsider, Wm. J. Stewart, of Boston, with a score of 55. Other scores were J. A. Shaw, 51; S. S. Butterfield, 44; Alex. Wallace, 41. The C. W. Ward prize, a copy of his new book, was won by Joseph Manda with a score of 126 in a five-frame bowling match. The scores were: L. Schmutz, 84;

L. Miller, 39; A. Demeusy, 31; Jaehs, 80; A. Schmutz, 77; G. Schmutz, 83; R. Irwin, 68; W. H. Stebrecht, 68; Bishop, 72; Bruchner, 16; J. Donaldson, 75; C. Smith, 18; J. A. Manda, 126; T. J. Lang, 81; T. Roehrs, 55; J. I. Thielmann, 63; E. Endgren, 69; P. J. Smith, 68; J. V. Phillips, 62; Turner, 56; A. J. Guttman, 50; A. Herrington, 46; A. Merritt, 58; A. D. Rose, 52; H. C. Steinhoff, 39; H. Dreyer, 37; A. Manda, 30.

The committee to whom credit is due for the success of the affair was F. H. Traendly, W. J. Elliott, D. T. Mellis, John Birnie, S. S. Butterfield, H. A. Bunyard and J. A. Manda.

Various Notes.

I may have been considered over-enthusiastic in my commendation of the re-organized Florists' Board of Trade, 56 Pine street, New York, but if you knew the president, Mr. Hayden, as well as I do, you would not be surprised. Much has been accomplished, and more will be, under his able direction. Old clients are returning to the fold and new ones are added daily. Prompt and efficient work is accomplished. There is no doubt of the necessity of such an organization, and it has come to stay.

Brooklyn is to have a florists' supply house at last, and everything in that line will now be handled by Hicks & Crawbuck, whose large building gives them excellent facilities, and whose popularity insures them a wide field. They expect to do a large shipping trade, and will extend their operations to every part of the country.

John A. Scollay, of Brooklyn, reports the building of four houses, 20x125, by Rowehl & Granz, of Hicksville, which they are heating with the Invincible boiler; also August Buckholtz, of Woodside, L. I., three houses, which they are building and heating. Mr. Scollay finds his new offices most convenient and his business growing rapidly this season.

The exodus to Europe continues. Herman Hart and wife, of Cleveland, were here on Monday on their way to Germany via the Crown Prince, on which they sailed July 7.

The holiday season is already developing. Louis Rossow, of Thos. Young, Jr.'s, Fifth avenue store, left for a two weeks' trip on Saturday to the Falls and Thousand Islands, and Manager Humphrey, of Thorley's started Monday evening for a ten days' business and pleasure outing at Bar Harbor. A good many are inclined to postpone their recreation trips until August, and make the Milwaukee convention a part of their annual holiday. The interest in the society's yearly celebration is growing, and the applications for sleeping accommodations on the special train are already encouraging. The West Shore has promised to make a record this year for speed and comfort, and shows due appreciation of the club's decision in its favor. Mr. Haffner is already busy with plans for the enjoyment of the conventionists, and will accompany them all the way and stay with them to the end. A delightful visit in Chicago is anticipated. Nearly all of the great wholesale houses of the east in every line of the trade will exhibit at Milwaukee.

Netschert, the artificial flower manufacturer, of 31 Barclay street, suffered an $800 loss by fire last week.

John Kral, foreman for Moore, Hentz & Nash, will have charge of the firm's interests in the absence of Mr. Nash, who sails on Friday for England. His son, Sidney B. Nash, will preside at the office desk as usual.

Fred W. Kelsey, the nurseryman, and family sailed on Monday last to visit England, Belgium, Holland and France.

The funeral services of the late Chas. Zeller took place last Wednesday in the Dutch Reformed Church of Flatbush. Many beautiful floral offerings were sent by his family, and his host of friends in the trade. Nearly all the prominent florists of Flatbush and Brooklyn and many from New York, Philadelphia and other cities were in attendance. Mr. Zeller will be greatly missed. His friends were legion; the respect and love he won was universal.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Stock is seldom poorer than at present. There are so few good roses that it is hardly worth while to sort over the average consignment to get them out. Beauties are particularly scarce. On teas the best goods go out readily on small shipping orders and the few local calls, but the top price is $4 to $5 a hundred and the bulk of the receipts is sold by the potful, without counting. Carnations are overplentiful, and here, too, the quality is on the down grade. The selected stock brings a reasonable price, because there is so little that can be called good, but the large buyers can only be interested at from 5 cents to 10 cents a bunch. Not only are the flowers very small, but many pinks are almost devoid of color.

Garden flowers are all too plentiful. Sweet peas have deteriorated, and are so abundant that the dump is the only outlet for a large part of the receipts. The peonies are not all gone. Auratum lilies go slow, perhaps because there are still so many Easter lilies, and perhaps because there is very little funeral work. A florist and an undertaker were comparing notes the other day, and a reference to the burial record at one of the largest cemeteries seemed to indicate that people have stopped dying.

There are plenty of greens, including ferns, asparagus, smilax and adiantum.

Various Notes.

Ludwig Mosbaek is more than pleased with his season's business in bedding plants. He is completely sold out; in fact, on many items, such as S. A. Nutt geraniums, he was out ten days before Decoration day. He sold 180,000 pansy plants this spring. Mr. Mosbaek discovered a great yet simple truth when he figured it out that there is no limit to one's sales if the stock is good enough, and he grows pansies on that principle, buying the best strains and saving much of his own seed. He expects to largely increase his business next year.

E. C. Ameling is at Antioch, on his annual fishing trip.

C. L. Washburn, his sister and his son, are at their cabin in the woods near Athelstane, Wis. Mr. Washburn expects to be away about ten days.

The supply dealers say trade is fair in that department, the retailers now having time to look over their stocks to see what is needed for the new season.

C. A. Samuelson says that June brides were particularly numerous this year, in his experience, and good work was mostly wanted. But now there's little doing.

This has been a most favorable season for carnations in the field, and most of the growers have big stocks of superior quality. Nearly all are busy benching, the size of the plants warranting indoor planting much earlier than usual.

Leonard Kill is on the sick list this week.

Most of the retailers are now closing at 6:30 or 7 p. m., and green stock makes up the window decorations.

Robert Northam has returned from his wedding trip, is nicely settled at housekeeping and on duty again with Weiland & Risch.

John Zeck is building a $2,500 house at the corner of Summerdale avenue and Lincoln street.

John Lambros is out after spending a week in the hospital.

C. Paasch, 224 Clybourn avenue, has invested $7,000 in building a house on an acre of land at Powers' Lake, and will sell out and retire. He has a very large trade and has laid by a nice competence.

The Foley Manufacturing Company has been granted a Canadian patent on its iron gutter.

The George Wittbold Company is growing a house of chrysanthemums and half a house of poinsettias at the Buckingham street place.

Andrew Nelson, of Elmhurst, was a visitor on Monday.

Bowling.

The bowlers are doing great work. If they can keep it up at Milwaukee it will be a hard team to beat.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Summer dullness has settled on our business. Until the Glorious Fourth there was activity; since it has been very quiet. A great quantity of flowers is coming in, more it is thought than usual so late in the season. There is no demand to carry them off, and very many are wasted, especially sweet peas, which are now blooming with great freedom. Beauties are rather scarce, most of the growers having stopped cutting from their old plants. C. W. Cox has just begun sending S. S. Pennock a few new crop Beauties, but they are so few, hardly enough to signify as yet. Kaiserins, Liberties and Meteors are the best summer blooming roses to be had in quantity. Carnations are fine for the season and very plentiful, but there is little demand, except for white. Valley is arriving in fair shape, but it sells slowly. The outdoor flowers hardly seem to sell at all. Double petunias and candytuft are used some for funeral work.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club meeting on Tuesday evening was devoted chiefly to convention matters.

Hitchings & Co. have completed six fine iron-frame houses for Edward A. Stroud, of Overbrook. These houses are now nearly glazed and will be devoted to growing fancy carnations.

The Flower Market is receiving some beautiful sprays of orange blossoms from Wm. K. Harris and fine Flora Hill carnations from Wilson, of Oxford.

S. S. Pennock is receiving some nice Liberties from Charles T. Price, of Lansdowne.

Dr. Lorenz accomplished a wonderful cure in the case of the child of a Phillipsburg florist.

It is estimated that 50,000 Beauties and Edgelies have been planted out at Chestnut Hill this season.

Leo Niessen has instituted his summer holiday system, so successful last season. His entire force has divided into three divisions, each going off two afternoons weekly. This arrangement is greatly appreciated after the long hours so often necessary in the winter.

John McIntyre, who is Edward Reid's right-hand man, is away up the state on a vacation. He is expected back next week.

Very little business is done in this city after 6 p. m., when most of the leading stores close. M. Rice & Co. close at 5 each day except Saturday, when they close at 1 o'clock.

Bowling.

The fifth series of games was rolled at the Central alleys last week. Four of the eighteen competitors, J. P. Habermehl, W. J. Moore, W. Stevens and S. Dunlap, were absent. The scores were very close and ran high, nearly all the competitors securing points. One more series of three games will be rolled on neutral alleys this week, which will be followed by the wind-up on the home alleys. The following are the scores:

Players—	1	2	3	Points.
Geo. M. Moss	183	179	136	2

PHIL.

CLEVELAND.

Business was good right up to the last day and almost the last hour of June, but July 1 told an entirely different story; everything seemed to stop dead still, "nothing doing" was the general story and up to the present time there has been no improvement, and we are well started on the usual summer dullness. What stock is seen at the wholesale houses is poor, the roses open and small with some mildew. Carnations are showing the effect of the past few hot days, but sweet peas are coming in fine and in large quantities; it is a wonder where they all go.

The J. M. Gasser Co. has closed the old store at 101 Euclid avenue, and moved the force and fixtures into the other store, at 234 Euclid avenue.

Some very fine Kaiserin roses were seen last week at the F. R. Williams Co. store.

AMBLER, PA.

Out on the Plymouth and Conshohocken turnpike, between Ambler and Broad Axe, Albert Knapper has made some pronounced improvements in the old C. C. Biddle property, which he purchased last fall. There are seven and one-half acres in the place, and the tract is in fine shape after a good spring business. There are three greenhouses, thoroughly remodeled, and a recent improvement is an Ericsson hot air engine for pumping water to a 6,000 gallon tank from an artesian well 120 feet deep. Just now there is a fine crop of sweet peas and pansies on, the pansies having remarkably long stems. Mr. Knapper also expects a nice cut soon from a stock of roses grown expressly for summer bloom. Among many novelties, shamrocks and Edelweiss are grown. Much of the stock goes to the Knapper retail store at Fifth and Fairmount avenues, Philadelphia, but Mr. Knapper also has a stand at the Market, Twelfth and Cherry streets. One of Mr. Knapper's daughters is a forelady at Henry A. Dreer's.

CONSTRUCTION SPECIALTIES.

The new catalogue of the Lord & Burnham Co., Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y., is one of the handsomest of the several excellent editions put out by that firm. It has 96 large pages and includes a number of new specialties as well as new patterns in heaters and ventilating apparatus. A full line of cast-iron pipe fittings for calked joints is one of the additions, also pipe chairs and hangers for all kinds of greenhouses. This firm also issues a very attractive catalogue of greenhouse construction and so expensive are the two books that it is found advisable to insure their reaching the right people by asking that 5 cents postage for each be sent by the inquirer, although as a matter of fact the postage is 6 cents on the new book. This is a policy which is being largely adopted by houses sending out high-class printed matter and is in line with the tendency of wholesale plantmen to charge for packing stock for shipment.

HOTELS OF MILWAUKEE.

The following downtown hotels in Milwaukee are within five or ten minutes' walk of the convention hall. Rooms for convention week may be reserved at any time:

- Aberdeen Hotel, Grand Ave.—Rates, $10 to $14 per week, American plan.
- Hotel Atlas, Third and Sycamore Sts.—Rate, $2 per day.
- Hotel Blatz, City Hall Square—Rate, $1 per day and upward, European plan.
- Globe Hotel, Wisconsin and Cass Sts.—Weekly rates; American plan, $10 to $15; European plan, $5 to $10.
- Kirby House, E. Water and Mason Sts.—Rates, $2 to $2.50 per day.
- Hotel Pfister, Wisconsin and Jefferson Sts.—Rates, American plan, $3 to $5 per day; European plan, $1.50 to $3.50 per day.
- Plankinton House, Grand Ave.—Rates, American plan, $2.50 and upward per day; European plan, $1 and upward per day.
- Republican House, Third and Cedar Sts.—Rates, American plan, $2 to $3 per day; European plan, $1 and upward.
- Schlitz Hotel, Grand Ave. and Third St.—Rate, European plan, $1 per day and upward.
- St. Charles Hotel, City Hall Square—Rates, per day, one person, $2 to $3.50; two persons, from $4 to $6.

DUTCH HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

E. H. Krelage & Son made a very fine showing at a meeting of the Royal Dutch Horticultural and Botanical Society at Amsterdam, May 27, receiving, among other awards, a silver gilt medal for a collection of 25 varieties of cottage tulips. They also received a first-class certificate for Allium Erdeli and a certificate of merit for Allium Karataviense. Other leading exhibitors were P. W. Vort, of Overveen; P. W. Sutorius, of Baarn; C. J. Kikkert, of Haarlem, and F. A. Heemskerk, of Amsterdam.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The condition of the cut flower market has changed greatly since the last report. Business with the store men is very dull, funeral work being about all that is going on, and all the florists had plenty of time to spend the glorious Fourth of July, most of them closing their stores half a day. Cut flowers of all kinds have been very plentiful during the past week, with the exception of Beauties. The shortage of long Beauties was particularly noticeable and only a few short ones were in. Other roses, such as Bride, Bridesmaid and Kaiserin, were in excess of the demand and of fairly good quality. Golden Gate and Carnot were also good, and Meteor and Liberty were exceptionally good for the season. Some good Perle were also in, but were too soft to sell well.

Carnations were in fair supply, a great many of them field grown. The demand for these is always good for the best stock. Fancies were scarce. There were a great many pink carnations in the market the past week. Home grown stock has the call these warm days and a great deal of the shipped stuff has to be dumped, as it does not keep any length of time. Sweet peas are still in heavy supply and are not moving fast since the end of the school closing and wedding season. The quality is still very good, but stems are shorter. The few hot days of the past week made them suffer somewhat. More white are sold than any other color, as they are extensively used in funeral work. There are also some good white asters in the market, but they are not overplentiful. Colored stock of these is yet scarce. Some good valley is in the market, which has a fairly good call. The best of this stock comes from A. Berdan, of Kirkwood, Mo. The market is filled with out-door stuff, which sells slowly and at very cheap prices to fill up show windows. Fine Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri sell well and can be had in extra fine quality.

Notes.

Local growers are now very busy planting their houses, some having already finished this work. From the report there will be no lack of Beauties and other roses the coming season. The same can be said of carnations. A great many of the best new varieties will be grown by our local growers, especially our brothers in Edwardsville, Belleville and Kirkwood.

Mr. Simpkins, of Denver, Col., brother-in-law to Phil Scott, was in town last week and called on the trade with Phil's compliments.

The committees in charge of the picnic have everything in readiness for the outing. The invitations have all been mailed, and should any one have been overlooked he should let it be known to one of the committee, who will attend to the matter at once.

Andrew Meyer, Jr., the newly appointed park superintendent, reports that he is 28 years old instead of 23, as stated in the last issue of the REVIEW. Mr. Meyer took hold of his new office July 1, with plenty of work before him.

Mrs. Frank M. Ellis and her two daughters left St. Louis last week for a visit to friends in the western part of Missouri, in the mountains. Frank is taking a trip among the growers through Illinois and will pay a visit to the Chicago boys for a few days.

H. M. Schisler and B. P. Corneli, of the Schisler-Corneli Seed Co., have returned from Atlantic City, where they attended the annual meeting of the American Seed Trade Association. They report a great time, and are pleased that the association has selected St. Louis as its next meeting place.

In response to an invitation of William Winter, the Florists' Club will hold its June meeting this week Thursday in Kirkwood. This meeting will be a very important one for the members, and a big attendance is expected. Talks on the coming S. A. F. convention and the annual outing will be in order, and the nomination of officers will take place.

J. J. B.

BUFFALO.

The bottom dropped out at the end of last week, just as it was expected to do, and the Fourth, for which we had a lovely day, was a floral holiday—the only day out of the 365 when a florist can say that he is sure he won't be wanted. I did hear on my way down-town on Friday afternoon that Bill or Bob or Harry was going to keep open, and "if they do, of course we will have to." I trust better sense prevailed, and that it was a close-up all day. There are none too many holidays, anyway, for the florists, scarcely one. Six o'clock closing began on the first. Most of the downtown stores had more or less patriotic emblems in their decorations last week. W. J. Palmer & Son had a well-constructed field gun, about an eight-pounder. It was made of red and white carnations, and attracted lots of kids to the window, but it was not half so pretty or pleasing as their fine window up-town, filled with splendid cibotiums. The much-abused stars and stripes satisfied other retailers. S. A. Anderson has had a splendid lot of gloxinias in his window for a week past, and his head man, Mr. Adams, says they go well. They ought to, for, as I have often said, they are the very best of house plants. Jos. Rebstock is getting along well and will soon be out.

We were rather surprised to see Michael Bloy again so soon. He is manager of the Lyman establishment near Cleveland. He reports trade good, work well advanced and prospects very bright. In fact, he was in the best of spirits, and when "Mike" is enthusiastic he is hard to beat.

Harry Balsley, who lets you know about the Detroit Flower Pot Co., floated into town last week and made his usual prolonged stay. He likes to spend his summer vacation with us. Now, I have sometimes given Harry some chaff over some of his inventions, for which I know he has forgiven me; but, seriously, this time he has a good thing in his new pattern round-bottom pot. We tried 500 4-inch this spring, and like them very much. The bottom is made slightly thinner in the center, and the clay drawn to the sides, which makes the bottom of the pot slightly rounding or cupped. There are, I believe, three distinct advantages in the pattern over the old. Strength is one. Next, plants are much easier to knock out of one of these pots, as there is no sharp angle for the roots to hold to. And, thirdly, in large sizes, say 5, 6 or 7-inch, the drainage must be perfect. Harry is all right this time.

The club is to meet on Friday of this week. Picnic, convention and bowling team are the uppermost subjects. I hope we do have a bowling team and let the world see once again how mightily we can trundle the sphere, as we used to do. It is not necessary to practice all the year around; you get stale and weary. If you are a scientific bowler, one or two practice games in the year is plenty.

There is good reason to believe that the old houses, corner of Main and High, now occupied by Louis H. Rebstock, will shortly be torn down, and in their place a fine brick store and office and three or four up-to-date houses will be built. The location is grand, and Louis' ability is also grand, and when he gets the new place complete and running, why look out.

W. S.

PITTSBURG.

Business is holding up very well. The condition of stock is only ordinary, and the wholesalers are receiving more flowers than they know what to do with. Carnations were offered as low as $5 per 1,000 last Saturday morning. Roses also sell cheap. Sweet peas are plentiful and the quality is very fine.

Charles Koenig, Pittsburg's largest bulb force, has sold out his entire plant to Patrick Maier, who will continue on the same lines, consigning his entire output to the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co.

Harry Graves, formerly with Randolph & McClements, leaves soon for Beloit, Ohio, to take charge of his new range of carnation houses.

H. L. Blind & Brother are growing several houses of Boston ferns which look fine. Hoo-Hoo.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

At the June meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, the secretary was instructed to invite Wm. Turner, of Oceanic, N. J., to act as judge at the November exhibition. John Nelson, of North Tarrytown, was elected to membership. David McFarlane was awarded the prize, a silk umbrella, for the best display of cut flowers of perennials. Charles Vanderbilt offered a cash prize of $5, which will be given for the largest chrysanthemum bloom at the fall show. The discussion on perennials was participated in by President McFarlane, Stephan and Joseph Bradley, F. R. Pierson and Mr. Moody.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; Vice-Pres., F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y, Geo. O. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

C. W. WARD, of the Cottage Gardens, reports heavy call for peonies for September delivery. Orders are being booked lively.

THE American Park and Outdoor Art Association is in session at Buffalo this week, with a good attendance of those interested in civic improvement.

VICTORIA, B. C.—E. L. Cockrell, proprietor of the Invertavish Nursery, is reported missing. Until recently he was verger of Christ Church cathedral.

E. RUNYAN, president and manager of the Elizabeth Nursery Co., Elizabeth, N. J., is visiting nurseries in Belgium, France and Holland, picking up stock.

SEYMOUR NELSON, of Chicago, has drawn plans for the new cemetery at Des Moines, and is at work on the preliminary surveys for the improvement of South Park in the same city.

WM. A. PETERSON, of Chicago, is at Clifton Springs, N. Y., with Mrs. Peterson, going thence to Island Heights, N. J., for his annual sail, after which he will visit some of the notable estates in the east.

SAMUEL T. KENYON, the well-known nurseryman of Portsmouth, O., died July 2 as the result of a runaway accident in which he was injured April 4. He was born at Sandy Springs, O., December 24, 1843.

OLMSTED, BROS., Brookline, Mass., have been given the contract at $4,000 for the landscape architecture of Grant Park, as the lake front park at Chicago is now known and which is to be improved at an expense of several hundred thousand dollars.

PROF. FISHER, of the Montana Experiment Station, at Bozeman, recommends the planting of the elm, oak, white birch, mountain ash, European larch, and the white and green ash, among deciduous trees, and the Colorado blue and Douglas spruces, among evergreens, to replace the poplars and cottonwoods.

JOHN W. DUNCAN, assistant superintendent of the Boston parks, says he has never seen so many trees and shrubs injured as were winter-killed the past season. Through the whole system such shrubs as California privet, Cotoneaster Simonsi and Lonicera fragrantissima were killed to the ground. The lilacs, for which the Boston parks are famous, made a poor showing this spring. Mr. Duncan lays it to the freeze that came before the wood was thoroughly ripened.

ST. LOUIS WORLD'S FAIR.

A visit to the world's fair at St. Louis at this time, is of interest to the horticulturist and landscape gardener, showing what can be done in ornamental work. An enormous amount of labor has been performed in clearing the land devoted to the exposition, grading down hills, filling depressions, and creating a site suited to the greatest exposition ever attempted. Through the courtesy of Prof. F. W. Taylor, chief of agriculture and horticulture, and the kindly efforts of J. H. Hadkinson, in charge of landscape work on the tract devoted to agriculture and horticulture, some idea of the great work in progress in their hands was secured.

Work on the building intended for horticulture is evidently not yet in progress, but as fast as the grounds can be turned over to them by the engineer and graders, Mr. Hadkinson with a large force of workmen is planting an immense number of roses and shrubs on the four acres devoted to that work, on the north front of the building devoted to agriculture. The ornamentation of this entire tract of forty acres has been turned over to the chief of the department, F. W. Taylor.

Through his skill in enlisting advertising competition among the florists and nurserymen of the country, immense contributions of trees, plants and flowers are being sent in by the leading nurserymen and florists of the country. These trees, plants and shrubs under the careful supervision of J. H. Hadkinson are planted and cared for at the expense of the exposition. The nurserymen or florists contribute trees and plants and pay the freight on them. We notice that roses were planted in beds, using from 100 to 500 plants in a single bed; to mass their bloom and produce desired effects, they are planted in beds and borders 18x18 inches. A hundred or several hundred Paul Neyron, or Magna Charta are being planted in single groups. Beautiful effects will be secured when these come into full bloom. W. F. Heikes, of Huntsville and Biloxi contributes over 6,000; more than 50,000 plants will be used in this work about this one building. Other portions of the ground will be suitably planted and cared for, all at the expense of the exposition.

To transform vast areas of muddy clay into grounds of striking beauty requires a vast amount of work, and gives Mr. Hadkinson ample scope for his skill in work of this character. Much has been learned in the handling of previous expositions. A visit to the exposition at this time shows as only a visit can, an idea of the work attempted. A visit also imparts confidence in the ability of the manager and workers to carry out what they have undertaken.

E. F. STEPHENS.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. H. Kendel, Columbus, O. The 23d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

VISITED CHICAGO: F. W. Maas, with the Plant Seed Co., St. Louis, Mo.

ALEX. RENNIE, of Rennie & Pino, Providence, R. I., sailed for Europe July 2.

LEM. W. BOWEN, of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, is visiting French seed growers.

JAS. MCHUTCHISON sailed for Europe on the steamship Motke, leaving New York July 9.

At present there is a fair demand for turnip seed, but the expected large demand has not yet materialized.

LOUIS GOEPPINGER, of Angers, is on his annual tour of the United States, representing French seed growers.

THERE is a fair acreage of cucumbers in Nebraska, some replanting having been done, but the crop will be late.

THE potato crop in England and Ireland is a flat failure, while that of Scotland will not be over 40 per cent of the expected yield.

INDIANAPOLIS now has to be taken into consideration as an onion set center. Huntington & Page have over a hundred acres in sets this year and the crop is fine.

THEODORE PAYNE, of Los Angeles, Cal., formerly with the Germain Seed Co., but now in business on his own account as flower seed grower, passed through Chicago this week on his way to Europe.

SOME 8,000 trials of various seeds are being made at Fordhook this year. There are over 400 trials of sweet peas. The visit of the seedsmen to Fordhook June 27 received two-column notices in the Doylestown newspapers.

THE unanimous expression from western attendants to the seedsmen's convention at Atlantic City is: "A most successful and pleasant meeting; many thanks to the Philadelphia craftsmen for the royal entertainments."

THE general rise in the wholesale prices of all the staple garden seeds does not seem to materially shorten advance orders. The trade generally realizes that seed crops of all kinds are not likely to be over abundant.

LOUISVILLE is four to six weeks earlier than Chicago on onion sets, and Indianapolis ten days to two weeks ahead. Inspection this week shows the Louisville crop thick necked and poor; Indianapolis fine; Chicago fair quality, but many fields showing thin spots.

RECENT advices from seed growing districts in France say that, owing to unfavorable weather, deliveries of 1903 crop of early beets will not be over 50 per cent, celeries from 20 to 30 per cent, turnips, 25 to 40 per cent, and even this small average is by no means assured.

THOS. J. WADE wishes to call attention to the fact that the officials in charge of the government seed distribution are competent seedsmen, whom he believes to be friendly to the seed trade. But has this been questioned? Certainly the trade does not believe the act of Congress to be friendly.

THE warm weather is improving the general run of seed crops. Peas are blossoming and some of the extra earlies are beginning to set. Dwarf beans generally are showing a good stand. The green podded sorts, with the exception of Stringless, so far give the best promise, some of the wax sorts showing a trifle thin.

THE absence of recent advices on such important garden seeds as celery, parsley, carrot, pepper, etc., would indicate that no serious shortage on deliveries of them is anticipated. It is yet too early, however, to say what may develop, as a good proportion of these seeds come from European and California sources and reliable reports usually arrive late.

RADISH seed crops in the Michigan district are improving. White Vienna in some instances is going behind. Charter, Cincinnati Market, Woods Frame and Long Scarlet are up to the average, but the acreage was shortened by the sand blow during the early dry spell. The turnip-shaped sorts are doing fairly with the exception of Olive Short Leaf.

LATE advices from Kentucky are to the effect that the Kentucky blue grass crop is estimated about the same as last year, with prices a little lower; orchard grass about the same as last year, prices likely to be as high. The clover prospect is fair; crop doing well. The season on the whole is unfavorable for grass seeds. As to onion sets, the crop prospect at present is fair. No orders are being booked for future delivery on account of small acreage and uncertainties as to the outcome of the crop.

ONION sets at Louisville are about ready to harvest. The crop there will fall much below last year's, and the quality will not be so uniform. At Indianapolis the quality is likely to be uniform, with a less number of bushels than expected. Chicago began with a much shorter acreage than ordinary, and it all depends upon the weather of the next two weeks as to what the harvest will develop. The general opinion is that good prices must prevail for onion sets, and a rising market from harvest time on is looked for.

PHILADELPHIA.—The onion set situation is really a serious one with the local seedsmen. From present indications the crop cannot be over 25 per cent of that of 1902. Practically no contracts were made for 1903 crop delivery and the farmers who have a few sets in sight are fully alive to the situation and refuse offers on yellows at $3 for fall delivery. The same is true of turnips and rutabaga seeds. Farmers whose crops are not covered by contract talk 25 cents per pound, but back out when offers are made to close at this price. Owing to better weather conditions, the counter and mail trade of the latter half of June was very heavy. The demand for vegetable plants was heavier than in any previous year.

I LIKE your paper better every week.

GRAND RAPIDS.

Excepting a week of excessive heat, we have had fine weather, warm days and cool nights. Business has been steady, without a break, until July 4, and the growers are still busy with shipping for the resort trade. It has been the most prosperous spring the local trade has ever had. Bedding plants sold out close; cut flowers were scarce most of the time, and carnations sold out close all through June, and at prices unheard of before for that month, but the weather conditions were favorable for good flowers, even if they did not yield as many as might at times have been wished for. Re-planting is under way in both roses and violets.

The florists have held several meetings in conjunction with the lettuce and vegetable growers, with the intention to form a stock company to buy coal and other supplies, particularly glass, steam pipe and fittings. Besides supplying the florists at cost, a general business is contemplated with any one who wishes to patronize the firm.

SUMMER ROSES.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Trade has now dropped to a hot weather basis, and everything in the flower line is quiet except the growers, who are hustling with might and main to get their planting done. June business was very good, fully up to or ahead of previous years. At present there is a good demand for funeral flowers, with an occasional wedding to break the monotony. Red roses are very scarce, whites fairly plentiful, pink in moderate supply. There is a good demand for Beauties at good prices. Carnations are still plentiful, and sell at 50 and 75 cents per dozen at retail. Prosperity and Lawson are about the best varieties at this writing. Carnation plants in the field are in fine condition and will make strong, stocky plants for August planting.

Notes.

Como Park is now looking extremely well, with its wealth of floral beauty. The climbing roses are just now a perfect mass of bloom, and prove conclusively that Minnesota is all right for outdoor roses if they are given proper care. The pansies grown here are the finest we have ever seen.

The Warrendale Greenhouses, near the park entrance, are still cutting a good supply of carnations. Their roses and mums are all planted and are making excellent growth. L. L. May & Co. have planted several houses of roses and have several more to plant. Chrysanthemums are nearly all planted here. Some fine pot plants for the fall show are being grown. The Ivory rose is an exceptionally strong grower, with nice clean foliage. It certainly looks very promising.

Otto Hiersekorn has gone to his old home in Germany for a ten weeks' visit. Fred Topel, rose grower for May & Co., has the sympathy of the entire trade in the loss of his estimable wife, who died June 30.

X. Y. Z.

SHELBYVILLE, KY.—Mrs. Margaret Dubourg, wife of L. Dubourg, the well-known florist and city councilman, died June 30, after an illness of two and one-half years. She was 53 years of age and leaves three children.

MANCHESTER, O.—George R. McNeil says trade was never better than this spring. Although the weather has been against them, Mr. McNeil says stock in the field is in good shape for a starter for another prosperous year.

It is well-nigh useless to publish a price list in the present state of the market. It does little more than show the variety of stock in market, and the top prices; there is no bottom. The stock is so poor that much of it is almost useless, hardly salable at any price and, in comparison to the total daily receipts the waste has seldom been larger or average returns lower. But growers are not complaining, most of them have had a good season and are busily preparing for another.

HUGH GRAHAM

FLORIST AND DECORATOR

104 S. Thirteenth St.

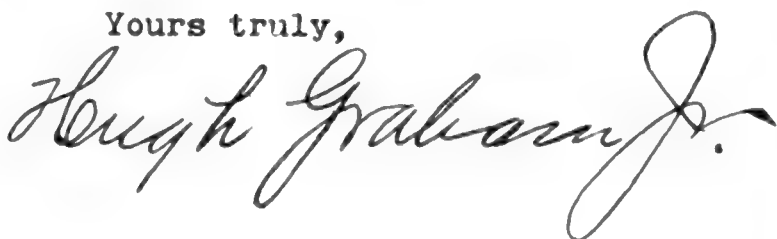

GREENHOUSES:

Logan Station, Old York Road.

Philadelphia, July 3rd, 1903

I beg leave to notify you that I have succeeded to the Florist business of my late Father, Hugh Graham, and will continue at the same places 104 So. 13th St., and Nurseries, Logan Station, Philadelphia. Hoping our business relation may continue as before, I beg to remain,

Yours truly,

CINCINNATI.The Market.

The hot, dry weather still continues with no signs of relief. In fact, the weather prophets say that it will be still hotter this week, which is not very encouraging. Business is now down to a regular summer basis, and the majority of stock looks it. There is very little doing with the retail men, but there is no good stock going to waste. The weather has been so dry that carnations in the field are beginning to suffer and rain is needed. Sweet peas are also showing signs of the dryness and those that are not treated to the hose quite frequently will soon be cooked.

The temperature in greenhouses has about finished roses, and most growers have thrown them out and have the new stock well on the way. With others, though, some fine stock is being cut and such varieties as Golden Gate, Ivory, La France and Kaiserin are doing first-class. Brides and Maids are very poor. Some fair Meteors are to be had, but there are very few Liberties. Beauties are very good and sell well. The supply, though, is not very large.

Carnations from the north continue to arrive in good shape and sell very well and at good prices. Several growers about here are still cutting some very good stock in spite of the hot weather. White carnations are most in demand, but good red ones find ready sale. Sweet peas are a glut. I wish to say that it is a great mistake to sprinkle them with water before shipment. This treatment has been the ruination of thousands during the past week. Pack them dry by all means, if you want to get any returns for your stock.

Notes.

The store men are now having their troubles trying to make a presentable window display. Julius Baer had quite an effective display of various colored poppies. They were quite a novelty and very pretty. Pond lilies are also being used by several stores and are always attractive, intermingled with ferns.

Max Rudolph is very busy housing his carnations. He believes in early housing and claims to get the best results. The quality of the stock he produces seems to bear out his views. He is one of the few growers who has made a success with Evelina. It is certainly a fine flower and producer the way he grows it.

Mr. Donnelly, who has been manager of the Rosebank greenhouses, has resigned his position and returned to Boston. It is his intention to sail for England shortly and from there to South Africa, where he will try his luck.

W. Rodgers has gone to Frenchlick Springs, Ind., to spend a few weeks' vacation.

H. D. Edwards of Newport, Ky., left for Old Point Comfort. He intends to visit several eastern cities.

The florists' outing is but a little over two weeks off now, so make your arrangements to come. Date: Thursday, July 23. Place: Coney Island.
C. J. OHMER.

NEOSHA, Mo.—J. G. Angel reports a good season and fine prospects. He will extend his rose house 100 feet this summer.

I COULD not get along without the REVIEW.—WM. HIGH, Purcell, I. T.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL

WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid.

A FAULTY INSTALLATION.

We have a house 33x126, one 8x126 and a lean-to 19x11 1/2. In the wide house there are three 3-inch hot water flows, with 1 1/2-inch returns. In the lean-to there is a 2-inch feed pipe, a coil of 1 1/2-inch pipes and a 2-inch return. The flow pipe from the boiler is a 5-inch, decreasing as each house is taken off, and the return increases as it passes from the lean-to, the narrow house and the wide house. The lean-to is to the east, and we call the coils Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 from east to west. There is a rise of three feet from the top of boiler to end of flows. The return pipe drops five feet perpendicularly on entering the boiler shed. The boiler, a 10-section Magee, is supposed to have a capacity of 2,975 feet of radiation. On firing this installation, using a good grade of soft coal, the only run which worked was No. 1, in the lean-to, the return pipe, on leaving the house, being very nearly as hot as the flow where it entered. Run No. 2 failed entirely to heat the returns and Nos. 3, 4 and 5 heated the 1 1/2-inch coil only for about 20 feet at the far end of the house, this when all the flows were so hot we could hold a hand on them only a few seconds. There was considerable pressure on, and no air in the pipes so far as we know. What do you think is the trouble? Could we make the apparatus work by using 2-inch pipes in the coils? Instead of running the pipes under the benches, should we take our 3-inch flows at an angle of 45 degrees until they are 18 inches from the gutters and then run them upward until at the far end of the house they are against the under side of the gutter, then returning to the main with the 2-inch pipes on the walls or posts? Will the 3-inch flows supply five 2-inch returns.

D. B.

The slow circulation may be due to a number of causes which are not indicated in the sketches and description forwarded. No mention is made of the grades of the circulating pipes nor the arrangement of fittings and connections between the circulating coils and return mains, whether the coils connect to the side of the mains at grade or drop to mains at a lower level and whether they connect to top or side. These details may have a close relation to the existing trouble, and in view of the fact that the water circulates quickly around coil No. 1 and is hot in the return main until No. 2 coil is reached and backs up coil No. 2 would lead one to look for the cause of the trouble at some of these points. In coil No. 2 the flow run of 124 feet of 2-inch pipe is too long to feed the six lines of 1 1/2-inch pipes. It were better to make one-third of the pipes in the coils flows and two-thirds returns. The rearrangement proposed would tend to give better results, but if they will send sketch and description of the coil connections to the returns and state accurately the direction and extent of the grades of coil pipes, I will endeavor to give more detailed advice.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business is very quiet at present. The last week has been one of the duller we have had for some time. Most of our flower buyers are out of town and although there were a fair number of wedding decorations during June, that is about all we had to console us. Funeral work is chiefly noticeable by its absence and the demand for flowers for other purposes is very poor indeed. Good roses are scarce. I have not seen anything offered during the last week that was really first-class. Carnations are in good supply but the quality is only fair. Plenty of outside stuff is seen and it is bought largely by sidewalk merchants, although some of our first-class stores use a good quantity of outdoor Gen. Jacqueminot roses, which are of good color and substance, with good stiff stems.

Notes.

We regret to chronicle the death of A. J. Johnson, of Astoria, Oregon. Mr. Johnson was one of the pioneers on this coast and an authority on forestry. He conducted a large nursery for many years and was the first to ship florists' moss in quantity to San Francisco. This industry has now assumed large proportions. He was well known to eastern and European collectors as one of the most reliable men in the business. Mr. Johnson was unmarried at the time of his death, but left a brother in San Francisco.

Alexander Crow, deputy state horticultural commissioner, has removed to his new quarters in the Ferry building.

The Oakland branch of the California State Horticultural Alliance has moved its quarters to the Board of Trade rooms. The members of this branch are very enthusiastic and expect to astonish the public at their exhibition, to be held in Oakland in the middle of August. A. D. Pryal is president of the society and J. T. Shepherd secretary.

ELWOOD, IND.—W. H. Woerner, who recently sold out his greenhouse business, has about decided to locate here permanently and manufacture wire designs for florists.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The month of June brought its usual feast of roses. The fortunate maidens who were led to the altar, and also the sweet girl graduates, fairly reveled in them. But everybody has his own roses; consequently the florists give little attention to indoor stock of that kind after June 1. The retail trade for the month averaged good. Carnations were at their best, and large quantities were used for school commencements. We will continue to have them until the middle of August, when we experience our hottest weather.

It requires very little effort to keep up an attractive window, as garden flowers, such as coreopsis, campanulas, gaillardias and sweet peas can be had in great abundance. It might interest our brother florists in the east to know that no refrigerators are used in the retail stores here.

The latest florist to visit us from a distance was E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind. He traveled from Frisco through the Sacramento valley, where the heat was intense. He said his visit must be brief, and it was not until we took him to the top of Willamette Heights, 20,000 feet above sea level, where he said he could look over into Indiana and see his mums and carnations doing nicely, that he could be persuaded to prolong his stay.

Portland is justly called the rose city, and Mr. Hill could not have visited us at a more favorable time. Everybody has a rose show. It would please the craft here if Mr. Hill would give his impression of Portland through the columns of the REVIEW. We have an enthusiastic amateur rose society, and much credit is due its members and the local press for the extensive cultivation of the queen of flowers.

Mrs. Frank Crump, of Colorado Springs, is in Portland, and expects to remain on the coast for several weeks.

"Thripscide"

(REGISTERED)

Greenhouse Fumigating Powder

Is the newest and best article on the market to-day for the complete destruction of all insects that infest Greenhouses or Conservatories, being a special boon to Rose and Beauty growers and prepared particularly for the destruction of Greenfly and Thrips. There is nothing injurious in it to plant life, even the most delicate fern. It is especially recommended for Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies, Smilax, Asparagus, Palms, Ferns, etc., and we claim that insects will be entirely eradicated when the houses are thoroughly fumigated with the powder. It is put up as follows:

PIPING.

Have a house 31x50 feet with three even-span ridges, and have a quantity of 2-inch pipe which I wish to use. With one side wall five feet high, the other three, how many pipes will be needed to maintain 40 to 45 degrees? Want it so I can some day lengthen the house to 85 feet. Boiler is in another house 25 feet away. What do I need for feed and return? I also have two houses 21 feet wide with nine 2-inch pipes and want to increase the temperature ten degrees, to about 50 to 55 degrees. Will a 2-inch or 2½-inch flow do it?

F. T. W.

As the sketch and description of the greenhouse sent by F. T. W. do not clearly indicate whether there is any glass exposure on the side walls I cannot advise definitely as to the arrangement of the heating pipes. In new houses 31x50 feet, he will require one foot of heating surface to every three and one-half feet of glass exposure to maintain 40 to 45 degrees. One and six-tenths lineal feet of 2-inch pipe contain one square foot of surface. In the old houses one foot of heating surface to each three feet of glass exposure will be required to insure 50 degrees night temperature. In the 50-foot house when extended to 85 feet one 2-inch flow will comfortably care for two 2-inch returns. A 4-inch main should run from the boiler to the new houses.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

We enclose specifications of our boiler and will be thankful if you will tell us how many feet of 2-inch pipe the boiler will carry in severe weather, using steam or hot water.

DOUBTFUL.

The boiler has capacity for heating about 20,000 square feet of glass to a temperature of 60 degrees on zero nights, at five pounds steam pressure, using about 3,200 square feet of heating surface in the heating coils. If hot water is used the capacity will be about 19,000 square feet of glass in connection with 10,000 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe.

DEAR SIR:—The boiler we purchased from you last fall I believe was the best investment we ever made. It does the work of two good sized steam boilers. Our coal dealer here says we used one twenty-five ton car-load of coal less this winter than usual, which is quite an item at the advanced price of coal during the winter. And we are heating more space than usual. We used all kinds of coal, and I believe if we could have had a good grade of coal all winter we would have burned still less. I must say we are well pleased.

Wishing you the best of success, I remain,

Yours truly,

E. I. RAWLINGS.
